The credited vote of the candidates at the head of this column is the actual earned vote and relative standing of each contestant on their first report to the Campaign Manager.

A grand total of twenty-one entered the campaign, but some of them have withdrawn, however there is room for several more real active workers who can if they will try to get one of the grand capital prizes. It is indeed not too late to enter. Clip the nomination coupon today and get in time for a big prize.

Today brings the beginning of the real race that is on for the $2,000 prize list that the RECORDER is to give away in the Prize Distribution Campaign in its efforts to increase the circulation of this paper.

By a perusal of the list of contestants our readers will see that we have a splendid list of entrants. Just who will prove to be hard workers remains to be seen. Only those who contemplate sticking in the race until the final count can hope to win one of the grand capital prizes. Look at the list and see if you can pick out the quitters or the ones who are likely to get scared and throw up their hands. You may get fooled on some of them. They may be made out of different kind of clay, but you think they are. The RECORDER is especially proud of this list of nominations. They are representative people of the county and come from our very best families. This race should be nothing more than a horse race from start to finish for they are all equal to the emergency provided they try.

SMALL RECEIPT

Of course the campaign is slow in getting under way. Only a small number of subscriptions have thus far been turned into the campaign department. The gross receipts are not more than 25 per cent what they should be at this period but we are hoping that things will begin to pick up on the next report of the candidates. Some of the workers have already weakened a little by paying attention to wild rumors that some of the contestants or their friends are putting out. Just remember that these big claims are made for no other purpose than to scare some one. The contestant that talks the least generally has the largest and best report to turn in report day.

WARNING

Candidates are warned that unless a subscription report is brought or mailed to the Campaign Department at least once each week, as is required by the rules, their name will be taken from the list and their credits cancelled. This is final.

WORK IS THE WAY TO WIN.
Now is the time to get in the running. Keep busy. Work every day. Eventually things will begin to come your way and you will be surprised at the amount of subscriptions you will write. You can do anything without putting an effort forth. The prizes the RECORDER is offering in this campaign are certainly extremely liberal and to win one of them you should be willing to do a little hard work. The harder you work the larger the prize you will win. That is the way to reason it out.

Candidates should keep in touch with the campaign department. This office is located in the Boone Hotel Building and the phone number is 90, the same as the RECORDER, and is open until 9 p. m., each night. Candidates should call the campaign manager at least three or four times a week. He might be able to give you some information that would help you. Then too he will know that you are alive and working. Who will win that Essex Coach, that is the all absorbing question that is now agitating the minds of the people of Boone county. We can tell you now. The one that works the hardest will drive that beautiful car home Saturday night February 14th. Won't that be some prize?

Rule Number Two of the Rules and Regulations properly interpreted means that mothers, fathers, brothers and brother-in-laws, sisters and sister-in-law, uncles, aunts, nephews and nieces are the only ones barred in this campaign. Beyond that degree of relationship all are eligible. All present nominations are within the rules and regulations.

Subscriptions to the RECORDER in this campaign will not be taken for a period extending beyond 1931. Only those who are in arrears can take a subscription for ten years, and that subscription cannot be extended beyond the stipulated year 1931.

Please be careful in writing addresses of new as well as old subscribers. Get their correct Rural Route. If you do not do this it will delay us in getting them the paper and when you sell a subscription the subscriber will want the paper to start right then.

Pay no attention to false rumors. Some of the workers are going to try to bluff you out by telling around that they have several more subscriptions than they have. This is good propaganda. It weakens the worker that falls for these stories. Grit your teeth and get all the business you can, that is the way to win.

FREE COUPONS

The free coupon appearing in the next issue of the RECORDER will be good for TWO HUNDRED Credits. This change is made on account of the loss of an issue. Don't forget to get your share of the coupons out of the next issue.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Subscriptions paid into the RECORDER office prior to December 24th do not count in this campaign. If the subscription has been paid since that date then the votes will be issued. Do not ask for votes on subscriptions paid before Dec. 24th.

BRUCE CAVE

Miss Gretchen Mae Bruce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bruce, of Petersburg, was married to Wm. Cave, a well known man of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, one day last week, at Lawrenceburg, by Rev. Furstenburg. The many friends of the bride on this side of the Ohio extend to the young couple their best wishes for a long and happy married life.

New Years Day

WITNESSES KILLING OF COOK AT DAM 38 WHILE DRIVING ON THE DIXIE HIGHWAY

Harvey McMullen 37 years old, who was employed as a cook at Dam 38, McVillie, was fatally injured early on New Year's day when the automobile in which he and a companion were riding, skidded and turned over on the Dixie Highway between Erlanger and Covington. They were picked up by John Spaulding a resident of Covington, who took them to St. Elizabeth hospital where McMullen died. It is reported that his companion, Marlin, who is assistant cook at Dam 38, will recover.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

Hon. Sidney Gaines Judge of the Boone Circuit Court:

We your grand jury for the Dec. term 1924, beg leave to report that we have been in session three days and have examined 18 witnesses and returned six indictments.

We have examined the court house and other county buildings and find them well kept and in good condition except some things that we wish to mention. We find that a new roof is needed on the west and south sides of the jail and that the entrance to the jail yard be at the southeast corner of the jail.

We also call the attention of the Fiscal Court to bad condition of the floor in the County Clerk's office. Having finished our work we now ask to be discharged.

R. B. HUEY, Foreman.

FISH STORY

Having been notified by George Bachelor, of Split Rock, that some poachers had placed a wing net at the mouth of Woolper creek, Deputy Sheriff Uts and Snyder hurried there early Friday morning. They found the net with quite a nice catch of fish in it, but failed to land the law violators themselves, who were from Indiana.

The officers dumped the fish back into the stream, destroyed the net and started home. As they were returning the Ford in which they were driving struck a slick place in the road and capsized. Fortunately neither was seriously injured, though considerably bruised and shaken up. The accident occurred between Andy Cook's and W. O. Rector's on the Petersburg and Bellevue pike.

1925 GREETINGS

A Happy New Year for our friends, old and new, and to the ones whose friendship we strive to win—we sincerely wish everlasting happiness, health and inestimable success during the new year.

With grateful appreciation for the courtesies extended us in the past, and prizing beyond measure that priceless, though intangible asset—your "Good Will"—we will seek to merit your continued confidence and patronage and will labor to serve you helpfully.

The Recorder wishes its readers, advertisers, correspondents and its vast army of friends the best New Year affords. If there be any cloud, any sorrow, any grief, we hope that it shall roll away, and that 1925 will bring them much prosperity and happiness.

Richard Martin and wife of the Union and Burlington road, entertained the young people of the surrounding country with a dance on New Year's eve.

Closing

OF THE YEAR 1924 SEES THREE OF BOONE COUNTY'S CITIZENS PASS AWAY

The last day of the past year was the last one spent on this earth by three of our highly respected citizens.

Peter Hager, 75, of East Bend, Isaac Flick, 84, of Bellevue and John W. Rouse, 90, of Florence, passed from this life into the eternal on that day. All of them were honored citizens of Boone county, and have served a life of usefulness with credit to themselves and the memory of their respective families by whom they are survived.

TRY THIS.

To be more progressive and live happier during the new year among the citizens of every little town in the good old county of L. Let us find the spirit of brotherly love, a kind regard for the feelings of each other, a good word for those who are trying to carry on the business of the town and county and a strict adherence to the truth by all. No telling tales, no spirit of enmity, no jealousy. Why should we be envious, why jealous of the progress of a striving fellow townsman. Soon that tal tal will be sounded that calls the soul before its Maker. Let's leave this world with ill will toward none. Jealousy and enmity denote ignorance of mind. Real men and noble women live above those petty feelings.

CORN SHORTAGE.

The Wall Street Journal gives warning of a shortage and consequently higher prices for corn. It says:

"Official estimate of the corn crop is 24,336,513,000 bushels against 3,053,557,000 a year ago and 2,906,020,000 two years ago. While this final estimate is 40,000,000 bushels less than the forecast a month ago, it was not unexpected. But it does however sharply call attention to the fact that there exists a big shortage in the corn supply."

So, if you have a crib of good, sound corn, it will be a good thing to take care of. And with the cutting out of a tobacco crop, corn at above a dollar a bushel is not a bad substitute.

RYLE-ACRA

A marriage of interest to a large circle of relatives and friends was that of Miss Elizabeth Ryle and Mr. Edgar Acra, both of the Locust Grove neighborhood. The young couple slipped away and went to Covington, where they were married last Saturday evening, Jan. 3, 1925.

The bride, who is a most charming young woman, was born and reared in Boone county. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ransom Ryle, and is one of the largest girls in that section of the county.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arch Acra, and is a fine young man, and industrious young farmer, and is fortunate in winning this young lady to assist him in climbing the ladder of success.

The Recorder, with a host of friends, join in offering happy congratulations and best wishes to this young couple.

At the stockholders meeting of the Boone County Deposit Bank held last Monday officers and directors were elected as follows:

N. E. Riddell, President.
W. A. Gaines, Vice-President.
W. D. Cropper, Cashier.
G. S. Kelly, Asst. Cashier.
W. A. Gaines, E. H. Rouse, R. B. Huey, Hubert Conner, W. D. Cropper and N. E. Riddell directors.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall and Mrs. Louisa White, spent the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer and Miss Bess Hall in Newport.

GRIM REAPER'S WORK.

ISSAC FLICK.

Isaac Flick, 84, of Bellevue, passed away at his home in Bellevue, Wednesday, Dec. 31st, 1924. Mr. Flick was a native of Boone county and lived his entire life near Bellevue. He was well known throughout the northern portion of the county and had the respect of his every acquaintance.

He is survived by three sons, Israel, Warren and Johnson and one daughter, May, who have the sympathy of their friends in their loss. Funeral services were conducted at the home Saturday morning, Jan. 3rd, conducted by Rev. R. H. Carter, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at that place.

PETER HAGER.

One of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of the East Bend neighborhood passed away on Monday, Dec. 29th, when Peter Hager died. Mr. Hager was 75 years old and a native of Boone county. He was honored and respected by all his neighbors, and his friends were located in every part of the county.

He is survived by his widow, two sons Reuben and Frank and three daughters, Mrs. Omer Hodges, Bess Long and Ida McMurray.

Funeral services were conducted at East Bend M. E. church by Rev. P. G. Gillespie last Wednesday, after which the remains were laid to rest in the East Bend cemetery.

JOHN W. ROUSE

John W. Rouse, one of Boone county's most aged and respected citizens, passed away on Wednesday, Dec. 31st, at the home of his son Ben A. Rouse in the Pleasant Valley neighborhood. Mr. Rouse had served more than his allotted time here on this earth, having reached the ripe age of 90 in September last. Mr. Rouse leaves to survive him two sons, M. F. Rouse and B. A. Rouse, and one daughter, Mrs. Blanche Snyder, all of this county, as well as a host of other relatives and friends. The aged gentleman was preceded in death by his wife, who died a little over a year ago, also one daughter Mrs. Fanny Clark son, about 20 years ago.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Royer at Hopeful church and he was laid to rest in Hopeful cemetery by Undertaker Phil Tainferro, of Erlanger.

MRS. KATE RILEY.

Kate K. Riley, widow of the late James L. Riley, died at her home in Ludlow, Ky., Tuesday December 30, 1924, in her 68th year. She had been in bad health for some time and her death was not unexpected. She was a daughter of Francis and Sarah J. Kreylich and was born in Kenton county near the place of her death. After her marriage to James L. Riley they resided in this county in the Buellsville and Constance neighborhoods until a few years ago when they moved to Ludlow. Mrs. Riley was a member of the Bullittsville Christian church and the Eastern Star Lodge, of Ludlow, and lived the life of a christian, and enjoyed the companionship of her friends. Another good woman has lived her life and passed on. Funeral services were conducted at her home in Ludlow Friday afternoon at 1:30 by Rev. Hagan, of the Covington Christian church and interment was in Highland cemetery. It has been but a short time since she erected on the lot in Highland a beautiful monument to mark the resting place of her husband and herself. She is survived by her brother George Kreylich and a number of other relatives and friends. Undertaker R. Scott Chambers had the funeral arrangements in charge.

HENRY C. DIERS.

Henry C. Diers, 73, of Walton, died at his home in that town on Thursday morning January 1. Mr. Diers was a victim of cancer. He is survived by three children Miss Lora Diers, of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Clara T. Best, of Silver Grove, Ky., and Harvey Diers, of Kansas City, Mo. He was a faithful member of the Walton M. E. church and Odd-Fellows Lodge, and was formerly a prominent figure in the civic life of Walton.

Funeral services were conducted from Walton Christian church and were in charge of Rev. W. H. Cardwell, pastor of the M. E. church, assisted by Rev. A. K. Johnson, pastor of Latonia Baptist church and Rev. D. E. Ringer of the Walnut Junction church. Interment was made in Highland cemetery with Edwards & DeMoisey in charge of the arrangements.

Boone county has lost one of its most upstanding and splendid citizens in Mr. Diers. His friends were numbered only by his acquaintances who will miss him greatly.

The mid-winter meeting of the Kentucky Press Association will be held at the Seelbach Hotel, Louisville, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 16 and 17th. Quite an interesting program has been arranged for the meeting and one of the best meetings of the Association is expected.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

The Administration's proposal to increase postal rates on third and fourth class matter has aroused the wrath of most of the newspapers as they would have to foot most of the bill. Hearings on the bill carrying the new scale worked out by Postmaster General New, have been rushed to a close by the joint Postal Committee of Congress so that the legislation can be brought out in the Senate and acted upon immediately after the holiday recess. The rate boosts are calculated to bring about $68,000,000 a year which would be a 40 per cent increase in the pay of postoffice employees, in accordance with the wishes of the President, who vetoed the first pay increase bill.

General Pershing is in South America as a full fledged Ambassador Plenipotentiary for the United States in company with other Diplomatic Officials re represented the government at various patriotic celebrations of our neighbors to the south. He was appointed an ambassador to give his presence more of any official color. Although such appointment would give him full authority to conclude and sign treaties he has not ventured that far, preferring to reports reaching the capital.

Another California woman is slated to sit in Congress. Reports from the Pacific coast indicate that Republican Under there are planning to send Mrs. Mac Nolan to Washington to fill out the unexpired term of her late husband, who represented California in the House of Representatives for many years and who as chairman of the Military Affairs Committee drafted much of the war time emergency legislation including the draft law. Mrs. Mac Nolan of California is now the only woman in the lower house. She was named to succeed to the seat of her husband upon his death.

The House of Foreign Affairs Committee has a delicate problem on its hands in the resolution of Congressmen Britten of Illinois calling for a conference for an international gathering of the white Nations bordering on the Pacific to discuss what he looks upon and what used to be considered the "yellow peril," meaning the growing power of Japan in world affairs. Britten's resolution brought the ire of the Secretary of State and other Administration officials down on his head. With a view to showing the Japanese government and people that the United States is opposed to any such conference, the Britten resolution is expected to be brought out and acted upon adversely instead of being merely ignored by administration leaders in Congress.

Reports persist that Curtis Wilbur is to retire from the Secretaryship of the Navy to become an associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. Curtis was a judge in California when President Taft brought him to Washington for the naval portfolio and his natural bent is the bench. He has had a hectic time in the Navy Department, but continues to hang on in the face of semi-official indications every now and then that his resignation is due.

The Expected Arrival of no infant in Washington has been so extensively advertised as that of Congressman and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. The local papers have exhausted every possibility in their speculations concerning the forthcoming Longworth heir, most of them deciding that it will be a boy and will resemble its distinguished grandfather, the late Theodore Roosevelt. The 100 year old cradle that the baby will have ready for it has been pictured again and again and the papers are now selecting a name for the child, without of course, any regard for the fact that the baby will be a girl.

KILLED A COW

A man driving a car bearing an Ohio license struck and killed a cow belonging to Lawrence Kenney on the Dixie Highway one day last week. Sheriff Illume located and identified the man as R. M. Dafran, of Cincinnati.

A package was received at the Burlington postoffice a few days ago that had been sent from California by air mail. The package was mailed in San Francisco Dec. 23rd at 5:30 p. m., and was received at Burlington December 26th at 5:30 p. m.

Campaign Now Open----Ends Feb. 14, '25

TO WIN YOU MUST ENTER!

If You Enter You Must Win!

There Are No Losers.

The Rules and Regulations

- 1—Any white person of good character residing in this city or surrounding territory, is eligible to enter and compete for a prize. Nominations may be made at any time during the election.
- 2—No employee or near relative of any employee in this newspaper is eligible to enter this distribution. We reserve the right to reject any nomination.
- 3—The winners of the prizes will be decided by their accredited credits, said credits being represented by the ballots issued on subscriptions and by coupons clipped from the papers.
- 4—Candidates are not confined to their own particular town or community in which to secure credits and subscriptions, but may take orders anywhere in this section, or for that matter anywhere in the United States.
- 5—Cash must accompany all orders where credits are desired. There will be no exception to this rule. Candidates will be allowed to collect subscriptions and renewals as well as entirely new subscriptions and credits will be issued on both alike.
- 6—Credits are free. It costs the subscriber nothing extra to vote for their favorite. Subscribers should ask for them when paying their subscriptions.
- 7—Credits cannot be purchased. Every cent accepted through the election department must represent subscriptions.
- 8—Credits are not transferable. Candidates cannot withdraw in favor of another candidate. Should a candidate withdraw from the race his or her credits will be cancelled. Neither will it be permissible for candidates to give or transfer subscriptions to another candidate. Credits on such transferred subscriptions will be subject to disqualification at the discretion of the management.
- 9—Any collusion on the part of candidates to nullify competition or any other combination arrangement of effort to the detriment of candidates of this newspaper will not be tolerated. Any candidate or candidates entering into or taking part in such an agreement, arrangement, or effort will forfeit all rights to a prize or commission.
- 10—Any ballot issued on subscriptions may be held in reserve and cast at the discretion of the candidate. The printed coupons appearing from week to week in this newspaper must be cast before the expiration date appearing thereon.
- 11—In event of a tie for any one of the prizes a prize identical in value will be given each tying contestant.
- 12—No statement, assertion, or promise, either written or verbal, made by any of the solicitors, agents, or candidates will be recognized by the publishers or the campaign management.
- 13—In case of typographical or other error it is understood that neither the publishers nor the campaign manager shall be held responsible, except for the necessary correction upon the error.
- 14—Every candidate is an authorized agent of this newspaper, and as such may collect subscription payments from present as well as from new subscribers.
- 15—A subscriber once turned in by a candidate and extended at any time during the campaign beyond the time it was originally turned in for, will have the same vote value as though the full subscription had been turned in originally.
- 16—It is distinctly understood and agreed that candidates will be responsible for all moneys collected and that they will remit such amounts in full at frequent intervals or on demand to the campaign department.
- 17—There will be several big prizes awarded besides a 10 per cent cash commission to all ACTIVE non-prize winners, but it is distinctly understood that in the event ANY candidate becomes INACTIVE, failing to make a weekly cash report, he or she will, at the discretion of the management, become disqualified, and thereby forfeit all right to a prize or commission.
- 18—To insure absolute fairness and impartiality in the awarding of the prizes the campaign will be brought to a close under the "sealed ballot box" system. During the entire last week or the race, a ballot box—locked and sealed—will repose in the vaults of a local bank where candidates and their friends will deposit their final cash collections and reserve votes. When the race has been declared closed a committee of local men, who will act as the official judges in awarding the prizes, will take charge of the ballot box, break the seals, unlock the box and begin the final count of the votes. In this way no one, not even the campaign manager, can possibly know the number of votes held by any candidate until after the judges have made the final count, which precludes any possibility of favoritism and guarantees fairness to the minutest degree.
- 19—This newspaper reserves the right to amend or add to the rules of this election if necessary for the protection of the interests or both the candidates and this newspaper. The right is also reserved to increase and add to the list of prizes.
- 20—This newspaper guarantees fair and impartial treatment to all candidates, but should any question arise, the decision of the management will be absolute and final.

In accepting nominations candidates agree to abide by the above conditions.

THE PLAN IN BRIEF.

The object of this big distribution is two-fold, primarily to increase the already large subscription list of the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER and advance subscriptions from present or old subscribers, and at the same time to afford our friends and readers an unparalleled opportunity to profit, and in a big way, through their spare time during the next few weeks. So it is a plan that works both ways and to the ultimate good of all concerned.

In order to gain this end quickly and advantageously the most valuable and attractive list of prizes ever offered by a local newspaper in this section of the county has been made ready for distribution among those who participate most heartily.

Ambition and energy are the only requisites for success. The plan adopted is the fairest and most impartial conceivable. There will be no "double vote offers, extra prizes given, or any inducement whatever inaugurated during this competition. Neither will there be any long-term subscriptions accepted. The plan of the campaign is straightforward and simple, and is fully outlined in this announcement. Read it closely and thoroughly.

Let it be understood at the very outset that this is not a "beauty" nor "popularity" contest, but is a strictly legitimate competitive proposition for enterprising men and women, and boys and girls, and one in which no element of chance enters. One feature of this competition is the fact that there will be no losers in this race. You must be active to end of campaign.

How Votes Are Secured.

The next step is to call or write the campaign department for a free working-outfit (consisting of a special receipt book, sample copies of the paper and other information relative to launching an active campaign.

Thus equipped, you have but to go to your friends and neighbors, relatives and acquaintances and have them clip the free coupons from their papers. THIS IS THE WAY TO IT. However, you will not succeed unless you make the start; and while it will not be a very difficult matter to capture one of the big prizes, nevertheless it is necessary that you start early. You must plan out your campaign the same as any successful business man plans out his work for a season, and above everything else, let no one discourage you, but stick to it to the finish. Anything worth having is worth striving for. Seven short weeks and you may be riding in your own automobile.

It takes votes to win and votes are secured in two ways. First, by clipping the coupons appearing in each issue of the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER by gathering them NOW. The only restriction placed on voting coupons is that they must be deposited at the campaign department of the BOONE COUNTY

RECORDER on or before the expiration of the date printed thereon. Get your friends to save the coupons for you—they all count. The other and faster way to get credits is by securing new and renewal subscriptions to the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER. On each subscription turned in a certain number of votes are issued, the number varying according to the amount paid, and during which "period" same are received at the campaign department (see schedule below). So, you see, the more subscriptions you secure the more votes you can get and the better your chances are to secure one of the capital prizes.

How The Prizes Will Be Awarded.

The First Capital Prize $975 Essex Coach will go to the candidate polling the highest number of votes in the campaign.
The Second Prize $175.00 Three-Piece Brown Mahogany Bed Room Suite will be awarded the candidate polling the second highest number of votes.
The Third Prize $140.00 Crosley Tridyn Radio Set will go to the next highest.

The next highest will receive the $100.00 Diamond Ring.
The next highest will receive the $75.00 Wrist Watch.
The next highest will receive a pair of $30.50 Red Top Fisk Cord Tires.
The next highest will receive the $25.00 Cedar Chest.
The next highest will receive the $25.00 Radio Set.
The next highest will receive the $25.00 Pearl Necklace.

The next highest will receive $15.00 in gold.
After all of the above prizes have been awarded to the successful members then those who have not been awarded a prize will be paid in cash commission of 10 per cent upon the money they have turned in, providing they have remained active until the end of the campaign. (Remaining active means turning in at least one subscription each week from the time they enter the campaign until the end of the drive.)

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone county, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

STRAIGHT TALK

It becomes necessary that the RE-CORDER does some straight talking to some of our subscribers, especially to those of our readers who have been receiving the RECORDER and settling for same at their convenience. It has been a time honored custom in the Boone County RE-CORDER office to send the RE-CORDER to residents of Boone county. This paper has never sent out duns to delinquent subscribers. They have all been permitted to call at the office and make settlement at their convenience. Every week of the world some regular subscriber comes into the office and settles his back subscription covering several years. If we had cut these men off the list they would not have understood it. They knew what the custom was and always seemed to appreciate the fact that they were permitted to pay for the RECORDER when it was most convenient and did not discontinue his subscription unless notified so to do. Some of the best people in the county have been at times way back on their subscription and instead of being a reflection upon them it was an indication that the editors of the RECORDER deemed them honest, straightforward citizens who were good for their debt.

It has been reported to this office by some of our workers who are trying to get one of the big prizes that the RECORDER is giving away in our subscription campaign that they find some people who propose to repudiate their back subscription.
 This comes as a surprise to those connected with the RECORDER.
 We can hardly believe that and are inclined to think there is a misunderstanding some where. Now all we have to say is that if any one thinks there is some mistake about what they owe us, if they will come to the office we will meet them fifty-fifty in any fair adjustment of this matter. We do not want one penny more than is coming to us, but we want to be fairly treated. If any contestant has accepted any money from any one who is in arrears on his paper the amount must be credited on what is due now and does not pay for the RECORDER for future years. The subscriber will only be credited with the amount he pays on the balance due.

As we have already stated we want this matter straightened out in this campaign. We ask nothing dispute the amount due to come to the office and we will meet them four square and see that their account is properly straightened out, and we insist that this method be taken to adjust this matter. If any one fails to do that we shall feel that he is trying to evade their honest debts and that is the way it will look.

NEW YEAR THOUGHTS

There is a certain fascination in New Year's day, owing to the mystery of the unknown future. Our people of Boone county stand at the portals of a new period of time. It may contain great happiness, or great sorrow and trial. The look ahead has the absorbing quality of a great drama, the previous story of which has been full of action, and now the curtain rises on another scene, while human nature thrills with uncertainty.

It is a time of both serious and joyful thoughts. The most wholesome natures make it a very happy occasion. They will not borrow trouble until it comes. They have a trusting faith that things come out pretty well for courageous folks, and they have confidence that the new period of time will bring many pleasant experiences.

This is a point of view that is calculated to help one succeed in one's occupation, and to accomplish useful results in all our experiences. People who lack that faith in the future are not equipped for dealing with the problems that confront them.

Light hearted people naturally see the old year out with jollity, which may be wholly innocent and delightful, but which often runs into dissipation. A splitting headache and dark brown taste on New Year's morning is a poor beginning for 1925, and is not commonly an indicator that the results of that year will improve on its predecessors.

It is a good idea to take a little time on New Year's day for a bit earnest retrospection, asking ourselves if the things we are selling our souls for are worth while. Every year ought to bring some substantial gains, and we should be able to look back over 1924 and see that it has brought some clearer vision and higher wisdom. Let us also not forget to address an earnest petition to that higher power that shapes our ends, and seek a more intimate dependence on his guidance for the unknown days to come.

PROSPERITY FOR THE FARM PEOPLE

President Coolidge said some very true things in his addresses at Chicago, about the obligation which the whole country owes to those who are engaged in the rural industries.
 The commercial and industrial side of the nation has been giving us much thought to what our duties are, and to the importance of the rural industries. The rural industry is the backbone of the nation, and the men and women who are engaged in agriculture, to their welfare and prosperity.

The president aptly compared the present situation in the rural industries, to the one which existed in the finances of the government previous to the passing of the federal reserve act. While many people criticize certain workings of this law, it brought us through the war without any financial disaster, whereas otherwise the most destructive kind of a panic would have occurred. It has done a great deal to place the finances of the country on a firm foundation.

So now, he feels, we need some new kind of legislation for agricultural and related industries that shall do for them what the federal reserve act did for the financial system. The situation in agriculture also is a little like what existed in transportation before the interstate commerce commission was created and was given regulatory power.

We need some broad line of government action that shall accomplish as much for these great industries which are the basic activity of the country, as has been done for finance and the railroads by various legislative acts that regulate these forms of business.

Legislation can not hit at the worst of the evils in any sphere of industry. Farmers must to a large extent solve their own problems just as the bankers and the railroad men have solved theirs. But the government can help create new machinery that shall smooth down many of the rough places over which the rural industries find hard rubbing.

Charles Evan Hughes, Secretary of State has formally accepted an invitation from the League of Nations to participate in a conference on the traffic in arms to be held in Geneva next spring. This acceptance does not imply that the United States has reached the point of abandoning the position of independence of membership in the League, but it does mean that the President's attitude recently made clear, that it is wise for the United States Government to accept the invitation to attend conferences both for disarmament and for everything pertaining to war and its instrumentalities.

The folks who complain of dull business during the rest of the year, might ask themselves if they have informed the public through advertising what advantages people can gain by trading at their stores.

Although the estimate made by the state tax Commission indicate that about $2,000,000 more will be collected in taxes for state purposes next year than during 1925 we find that the State Road fund is exhausted and notwithstanding the fact that the advocates of the "Pay-as-you-Go" stated we had plenty of money for road purposes and that a bond issue was unnecessary, yet from reports that are being published in the press practically no work will be done on the state roads during 1925.
 During the campaign last fall the advocates of the bonds maintained that they were necessary to carry on the road work in Kentucky and the condition of the state road fund bears out that condition. The demands by the people for roads, on State Highway Commission, which in the construction of state roads amounts to much more than the amount that the commission receives.
 A number of the counties in the state make liberal payments for roads within their boundary, to the State Highway Commission, which in some cases amounts to as much as one half of the cost of building the road. The large number of counties in the state are not in a financial condition to make these appropriations to the State Highway Commission in order to have roads built within their boundary. The counties who are not able financially to make these appropriations must abide their time with patience until such time as finances are provided, either by an increase in taxes or a bond issue.

A CHRISTMAS GREETING
CHILD HEALTH TALKS

By Dr. Juanita McF. Jennings
 Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Health, Louisville, Ky.

The joyous Christmas season brings foremost to our thoughts our children and their happiness. What would we not each of us do for the good and even "the least of these."
 The children of Kentucky are Kentucky's most valuable assets. They should have the greatest possible opportunity for spiritual, mental and physical development. If they have the best chance, it must come first from the parents and then from the only when our young people who marry have cultivated self control, clean thinking and right living, valuing the virtues which perish not. It is such parents who teach their children self control and prompt obedience to home rule and then to the laws of the land. Such parents value education. Self control is one of the most important factors in the maintainance of health. It checks the appetite and desires of the body, making one do the right instead of the wrong thing.

Often the ideas of loving parents are false as to what is good for the child. That was true when parents used to give children explosives at Christmas and on the Fourth of July, so that many were killed or injured. Many parents now give quantities of candy at Christmas time to children and thereby injure them.
 Because quantities of sweets, especially between meals, so injure the digestion that it inclines one to take colds and other infections, there is therefore much sickness after the holiday season.

We are sending you this timely warning—wishing you and the little ones a happy healthful New Year.

At the meeting of the Commonwealth's and County Attorneys Association held in Louisville last week officers were elected from the Sixth District as follows: O. S. Ware, Covington, President, and John J. Howe Jr., of Carrollton, Secretary, and Warde Yager, of Warsaw, was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the County Attys. Association.

 the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide morning I could hear the ticking of the alarm clock that I was unable to hear before. Now my hearing is restored perfectly after many years of deafness."

This compound, which is known as Virex, is easily used at home and seems to work almost like magic in its rapidity, on people of all ages.

Be sure you get that Virex, and cure you, that we owe to send a large $2 bottle for only $1 on 10 days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory, it costs you nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to Dale Laboratories, 2086 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just let it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer

The Recorder Stands For BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES

ARE WE GOING TO REAP WHAT WE SOW IN LIFE?

Heretofore, I have written through these valuable columns to the unthinking young friends, whom I consider just as bright and intelligent, if not more so, than some of the learned, cynical dry goods box wisecracks around the public fires, always ready for an argument. I do not care to argue upon these vital subjects of the laws of nature, that I write upon, as our actions are either right or wrong to the natural laws of our being—if right, we are rewarded; if wrong, punishment is inflicted, and no argument will change the sentence or decree. I have written for the young, realizing that they will be in the political fields of the future, holding offices of trust over generations, bearing rule, for degenerated corruption, against our State and our glorious union, represented by the flag of colors—the colors typifying purity, truth and chaste honor, that we are so proud of, or, for life-giving glory, making that old flag more glorious is possible for those generations to bow in sublime reverence as the code monumental to our memory, as they sing "My Country 'Tis of Thee" we sing—realizing too, that their minds are tender, and easy moulded, like many of the mineral stratas of the earth, in the first stages of formation—soft and pliable to the sculptor's hands, so that the dirtiest, roughest material can be moulded into the most beautiful and perfect pottery and statuary, which becomes hard as adamant. Knowing too, it is easy to start a young mind for good or bad principles of life, but like the avalanches of snow of the Alps, after starting down the mountain, no earthly power can stop or turn aside—knowing this is the characteristic of young minds, I study, consider and weigh the thought of the subject of the laws of nature, that I write upon, to be reasonably sure of the right theory, before submitting to the press, knowing that the "sentence" of punishment for violating such laws of nature, will be more severe than any that could be devised for violating our statutory laws of "Blackstone" in our courts, where excuses and ignorance are not accepted.

I have been asked to write upon some subject of the kind, more suitable for those older in age. While I do not wish to be presuming or egotistical in trying to tell older friends something they do not know, for that would be impossible, so I can only hope to bring the positive facts of nature's laws you do know, before you with the causes and effect of the violation of such laws that has been experienced by all, as proof for I dare not "turn down" the request, for as unreasonable as it seems, the "Good Book" says, that there is a bit of good for you and I to do in the world—some one, that only you or I can influence for good, and such a chance to do so, may be given only once. If this is true, I bow humbly to the task. So I think the above common, familiar and positive scriptural declaration as an interrogational warning an appropriate subject, to base our New Year's resolves upon. As we study and analyze these vital laws of our being, we find that they are based upon a juristic commercial scale of "profit" and "loss." If we sow grain we expect, and the natural laws are obeyed, we get an increase with a reward of manifold times the amount we have sown, but, if "mildew," "blasting," or any of the many ravages to our crops, set in—which I consider is caused through violation of some natural law—as much as an disease is to our physical bodies—the balance sheet of the Books of Nature will show a loss—if gain is sustained through our power of will physically or mentally over the weak physically or through their ignorance, the action will be counted as a debt of "Loss" against us, which will and must be paid, and as our gain was manifold to the last. If the loss is long in coming the resources of penalty is only gathering to be more severe and torturing in effect, for "Whatsoever ye sow, that ye also shall and must reap" to a profit or loss, is a fixed statute of natural law, as well as a Law Divine positive and sure, that cannot be evaded.

Humblly and Respectfully,
KIRTLEY L. RICE,
Burlington, Ky.

John Whalen, who was indicted at the August term of the Boone Circuit Court on a charge of unlawfully possessing liquor was arrested in Covington Monday and brought to Burlington by Sheriff B. W. Hume. He was released on bond of $500 for his appearance at the next April term.

THE HOLIDAY SPIRIT

One of Burlington's attractive young women was forced to rely upon the generosity of another in order to complete her holiday shopping tour. In her haste to join the merry throng she left home without her purse, and did not miss it until she had boarded the car for the Ohio side. The conductor was in the act of putting her off the car, when a magnanimous fellow passenger very opportunely paid her fare over the river, where she cashed a check and all was well.

SICK IN JAIL

Dr. M. A. Yelton is attending Phillip Allender, confined in the county jail, who has been quite sick. Allender says that since he has been in jail his wife has been forced to stay in Covington, and that during their absence some one entered their home and taken therefrom a considerable portion of their belongings. Allender is serving a sentence for violation of prohibition laws.

TURN ME OVER

WHEN DECAY SETS IN

Any individual who thinks he is better than anyone else is rushing headlong into trouble.

Any social, civic or business organization that gets the idea it is superior to all others is going to come upon breakers sooner or later.

Any community that boasts of being better than its neighbors is liable to decay unless it is constantly seeking to improve itself.

Bigness consists in generosity. To prosper it is necessary to give—and this applies to communities just as it does to individuals and organizations of individuals.

No one has any corner on excellence. Those who realize their shortcomings and are constantly seeking to overcome them, will come nearer attaining their goal than those who travel the path of self-righteousness and egotistical self-satisfaction.

Having pride in the place you live and boasting of its good points is to be commended, but such an attitude is a millstone on the neck of the community unless words are backed up by deeds.

Dangerous Coughs Go Quickly With Old-Time Pine-Tar Honey

Perhaps the best remedy ever discovered for a persistent cough that has hung on and on, and which may develop into a more serious condition, is that old-time tried and proved medicine that our parents and grandparents relied on—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey. The prompt relief it affords is magical, and a day's use will often break up a cough that has lasted entirely too long. Dr. Bell's pine tar quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and cures, which are the cause of the cough, the healing sores, while the honey both soothes irritation and gives a pleasant taste.

But be sure you get the genuine and original Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey, and no other. There have been many imitations, but the original is still the best, as it is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief. For coughs, chest colds, bronchitis and almost every other throat irritation, including children's spasmodic croup. Often stops a severe cough overnight. Dr. Bell's is only one at any good drug store.

PUBLISHERS NOTICE

The publishers of the Boone Co. Recorder have been contemplating for some time the raising of the subscription rates to this paper. We did not deem it practical to make the new rates effective prior to or during our present subscription campaign. We desire now to make public announcement that on the 15th day of February, 1925, the day following the close of our campaign that the regular subscription price of the RECORDER will be $2.00 per year. This raise is absolutely necessary on account of the increased price of news print and other costs incidental to the production of the paper. The RECORDER is one among the last of the old established papers in Kentucky to raise its subscription rate. This raise will not be effective during the present campaign, and according to the rules of the campaign you will be permitted to take advantage of the old rate as far in advance as 1931, but the new rate will positively take effect upon expiration of the time for which you subscribe during the campaign. It will be our uppermost desire to make the paper well worth the price of your subscription.

CHEAPER SCHOOL BOOKS

CAN BE HAD THROUGH

STATE PRINTING PLANT

Urging the necessity of a State printing plant to be utilized in the printing of the text-books for our graded schools, the Beattyville Enterprise employs some very convincing arguments.

Referring to a personage in Louisville, self-styled the Educator, he says:

"He remained silent when told that Kansas put a 44-cent primer in the hands of her children for the sum of 22 cents. He knew this before it was printed in the Enterprise, and he knows more. Evidently it is his business to know things of like nature. He knows this—Kansas put out a $1.38 geometry for 75 cents; a $1.38 United States history for 69 cents and saved the balance to 18 cents on music books. What has been accomplished with a state printing plant in Kansas can be done in Kentucky. It should be done. It must be done."

"The experience of Kansas is enough—the result of her efforts in the printing business are measured by the hundreds of thousands of dollars left in the pockets of her citizens to purchase the necessities of life."

These figures are very convincing. It certainly seems that something should be done to lower the cost of school books to our patrons. The Beattyville paper is backed up in its contention by a very worthy contemporary, The Lexington Herald.

FUTURE OF THE MEAT INDUSTRY

As President Coolidge stated at the Chicago Live Stock Exposition, 53 per cent of the agricultural production of the nation comes from live stock. These remarkable figures show that the American people are a meat eating nation, and they give reason to believe that there is a great chance for the development of the live stock business.

As the country grows more prosperous, not merely will the number of live stock be increased, but many families which now feel they can not afford to eat much meat, will use this food more freely. Young people who learn the live stock business and become skillful in the care of farm animals, are devoting their attention to an industry that is sure to grow and become more profitable.

PETERSBURG.

The annual Christmas pageant and cantata given at the Christian church in Petersburg was largely attended. Of such interest is this annual event that although the entertainment was scheduled for eight o'clock, the house filled by seven o'clock. The decorative scheme was tastefully worked out in red brick columns, walls and entrance snow capped and evergreen flower decked, all with a background of white. The overhead decoration was of green and red, and the lights during the Christmas bells. The pageant was made all the more effective this year by the procession of twelve girls dressed in white, carrying lighted candles and singing "Silent Night," the light from the candles and a spot light trained on the manager, and the lights during the Christmas bells. The pageant was made all the more effective this year by the procession of twelve girls dressed in white, carrying lighted candles and singing "Silent Night," the light from the candles and a spot light trained on the manager, and the lights during the Christmas bells. The pageant was made all the more effective this year by the procession of twelve girls dressed in white, carrying lighted candles and singing "Silent Night," the light from the candles and a spot light trained on the manager, and the lights during the Christmas bells.

The girls approached the manger they knelt in a semi-circle until the conclusion of the singing of "Silent Night." The cantata, "The Real Santa Claus" was then presented by 32 boys and girls of the primary school.

Drills, chorus selections and songs revealing the plot of St. Nicholas, Jr., appearing as the Senior St. Nick, only to be routed by the appearance of the real Santa Claus, constituted the greater part of the play. While the drills songs and plot unfolded by the Fairies, and Christmas cadets, deserve special mention, the drum stick corps of eight drummer boys was an especial feature of the program. Millard Filmore Nixon as Santa Claus Jr., full-filled every expectation in a splendidly played role. Conducted by Misses Irene and Maudie Nixon, Miss Cordelia Berkshire, Mr. Edward Hinn and Mr. Millard Filmore Nixon were featured, displaying unusual talent. Too much cannot be said in praise of patrons and willingness of the pianist Mr. Albert Kelly Stephens to make the contest a success.

A very enjoyable and profitable afternoon was spent by more than 50 patrons of the school and citizens of the community at the Petersburg school year. From the primary room to the usual custom of entertainment and bazaar, friends and patrons were invited to a display and exhibition of work done in each grade of the school during this school year. From the primary room to the High School rooms, a spirit of rivalry prevailed in decoration of rooms and exhibition of written work, drawing, needlework, cooking, handicraft and manual arts. A money prize of $1.50 was offered for the best plate of biscuits, baked by the girls of the High School. Miss Ruth Chambers of the class of 24-25 was the winner of this contest. Of special interest was the display of the Mechanical Drawing work done by a voluntary class of five members of the Senior class, meeting with their instructor an hour after dismissal each day.

The needle work display of work done by the pupils during this school year received much attention and favorable comment.

The Manual training by the boys of grades as well as High School from flower stands, blacking boxes to toy sleds, carts, chairs, bird houses and development of transportation, was of especial interest to parents of the boys and their friends. An exhibition of a concrete crossing culvert constructed by the boys of Freshmen and Sophomore classes showed the practical side of the training in this department. A name card on each desk and a display of note book and special work made it possible for parent and friend to inspect work of pupil more closely. Promptly at 2 o'clock the visitors were invited into the auditorium where an hours entertainment of speeches, songs and stunts by the grades were concluded with experimental work as conducted in class rooms by Biology class. All were interested in the new piano recently purchased for the school. An enrollment of 66 out of school census of 174, bespoke an interest in new school year of which the foregoing is an evidence of the spirit of co-operation of teachers, pupils, patrons and the public in general.

In the life of today it seems an almost impossibility for immediate members of families to come together for a days communion, yet this seeming impossibility was made a possible one on Saturday Dec. 27, when the five brothers of R. H. Carter, along with their wives and children, and the mother of the six, met at the home of R. H. Carter and wife for a Christmas dinner and day together. Those coming together for the day were Mrs. A. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. H., Mr. and Mrs. Paul J., and children, Paul Jr., Dawson, Ann and Nancy Jean, Mr. and Mrs. David L. and children, Thomas and Mabel, Mr. Harry, Mr. and Mrs. Julius A. and Mr. and Mrs. Joe B. Carter.

THE WEEK AFTER CHRISTMAS.

'Twas the week after Christmas And all thru the town, After one week of pleasure We all settle down.

The ladies exchange all Their presents with care, If the donors were watching Of course they'd not dare.

While Bob with his necktie And pa with his cap, On the top of his head Makes him look like a sap.

Of course its too small And the color don't suit, On a boy ten years old It would look rather cute.

And slippers we find Under everyone's bed, All the shades of the rainbow They're green, white and blue.

Some mottled, some pink Some too large, some too small, Make you look like a "fapper" Goloshes and all.

'Tis a long time to wait Till "Old Santa" does come, And Tommy looks sad— There's a hole in his drum.

And Bobby's big horn That had such a toot, Has been badly weakened, And sounds like a flute.

While Nell's mams doll Will say mama no more, Since it fell off the chiffonier Onto the floor.

And Ma with the headache And Pa with the gout, Will clean up the place— Its their annual workout.

But at that they are thankful And glad they're alive, For its a long time till Christmas, In one, nine, two five.

Newport, Ky., Jan. 1, 1925. Boone County Recorder, Gentlemen:

Enclosed find my check for $1.50 to pay for another ride on the Band Wagon, for without the sweet music from the reliable old band wagon this wicked old world would seem more dreary.

The above is the comparative standing of all candidates in the RECORDER race for the Essex Coach, every candidate being allowed under tables to reserve a part of the votes issued to them on subscription payments, for the week ending January 10th.

The race for the Essex Coach is now on its feet. It prizes that the Boone County Recorder is offering in its Subscription—Building Campaign is now on. Every section of Boone county is represented in this grand free for all handicap.

Mrs. Della Goodridge Collins, the popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodridge of Florence, now occupies the enviable position as leader in the count of the votes as made in the Campaign Department last Saturday night at 9 p. m. It is now up to this young lady to hold her position. A number of the contestants are right at her heels and with a few days hard work it might mean that Mrs. Collins would be outdistanced. Of course the race is young yet. Only a comparatively small amount of money has thus far been paid into the Campaign Department by the contestants. With a list of two thousand dollars in prizes it will take some time yet for that amount to be collected by all the contestants. We are hopeful that the original cost of the prizes will soon be realized and it can be if the contestants will continue their present activity.

All the workers are to be commended for the splendid efforts put forth during the last week. And now the ones that continue in their present stride will be found among the prize winners in the final count. The one that weakens now is lost forever. A faint heart never won a fair lady, and a scared contestant never won an automobile. If you feel your feet slipping out from under you, get out of the way and let a fellow in that can run. No slow horses will score in this the greatest race ever staged in Boone county.

Subscribers who have promised their subscriptions to various candidates should see to it that these subscriptions are given to the contestants before January 24th. On that date there is a big drop in the vote schedule and the contestants will lose by further delay. Of course we understand that if any one happens to be short of money that the contestants will give them until the closing date to turn over their subscriptions. Our workers should be patient with those who find themselves short of money. Every promise made by the subscribers of the Recorder to the candidates will be redeemed. Mark our word for that. This is a home paper and the candidates are all neighbors and friends and we predict that every red-blooded Boone citizen will register his or her vote for their favorite candidate in this election. There are but few grouches in Boone county and these will be known by name and number before the close of the race. Some few have indicated that they intended to repudiate their back subscription to the Recorder. These names will be removed from the list as fast as they are handed in by the workers, but the amount will be recorded on the books so that we may know whom they are for future reference. A subscriber who does not pay when asked by his neighbors and friends will never pay. We understand that.

RAMBLINGS BY THE CLUB MANAGER

Mrs. Della Goodridge Collins is no doubt enjoying the seat of honor this week. She knows how hard she worked to get there.

Albert Willis scored heavily on the new subscription offer. He galloped several miles to get his list of new subscribers before he came home with the bacon.

Miss Francis Virginia Berkshire surprised her self by the number of subscriptions taken during the week. We feel certain that her mother helped some too.

Miss Fannie Lois Cotton comes from way down the list to a place of honor this week. Miss Fannie Lois will poll a heavy vote in the south end.

Lee McNeely is all swelled up this week. He comes from almost the bottom of the list to nearly the top. Lee is hinting to his friends that he has his eye right square on the Essex Coach.

Miss Cecile Brown, the hello girl at Walton, is answering her calls with a sweeter tone of voice this week than ever before. Cecile believes in herself and jumped out and wrote a nice bunch of subscriptions right off the reel.

Elmo Jergens, of Ludlow, is a young campaigner, but he tells his neighbors straight from the shoulder that he is in this campaign and asks for their subscriptions.

Down near Hebron lives Miss Georgia Burns, and the people down that way have just begun to find out that this little lady is in the campaign to stick.

Mrs. Alberta Kelly Stephens will doubtless enter politics after this campaign is over. She has a convincing argument and winsome ways. Anyhow she has a right to believe that she can get subscriptions to the Recorder.

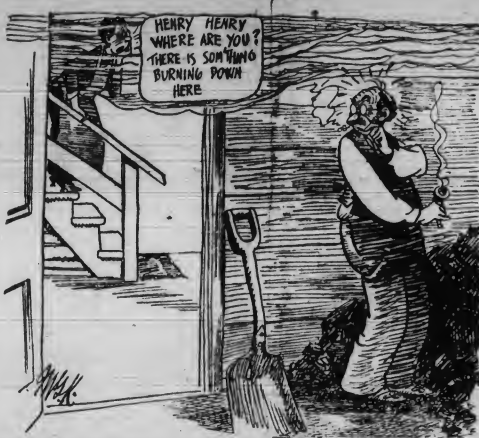

Mrs. Eva Kilgour has been scolding heavily all over the territory she has been covering. Better watch out for this seasoned campaigner in the home stretch.

Mrs. Keene Souther, of Ludlow R. D. 2, is conducting her campaign mostly from her home. Being a housekeeper prevents her making a very extensive campaign but how she is letting her friends know that she is working for a prize in this campaign.

Mrs. Lucy Garrison is riding a Kentucky thoroughbred over the hills of Union precinct in her campaign for votes. She reports a solid front from her home precinct, and we look for her predictions to come true.

Mrs. Lee Aylof, of Hebron, is not waging a strenuous campaign. She did not get out quick enough, therefore she is not regarded as a competitor for one of the big prizes.

Another New Year's Resolution Goes to Smash

Mrs. Alma Glacken is another formidable candidate for one of the big prizes. She is working her territory with vim and vigor. Keep up the good work, Mrs. Glacken.

A late entrant was Mrs. George Kottmyer, of Constance, but we are not exaggerating one bit when we say that she has been hitting telling blows from the very moment she entered the campaign. This lady has her eye on the grand capital prize.

Mrs. Thomas Hensley, the leader in the first count, is resting on her oars, so to speak, collecting up all the promises that were pledged to her in the beginning of the campaign. Yes, Mr. Hensley is still one of the big five in the race.

Plenty of pep and ginger will win the Essex Coach. Who has it?

Don't forget there are ten prizes in the prize. Don't pass up the other ten when figuring out what you can win in this campaign.

Mrs. M. B. Russell, wife of the Club Manager, will arrive in Burlington next Friday evening, and from then on she will assist in the conduct of the campaign. She will be one of the contestants and when she has sized them up you can bet she can pick the big four right off the bat. She can tell winners by their talk. Mrs. M. B. comes direct from her home town, Seward, Neb.

The RECORDER race is a grand free-for-all handicap. All the entrants are Kentucky thoroughbreds, born and reared in Boone county. There is but one thing more interesting than a horse race and that is the human race.

JAMES TAYLOR GAINES

Aged 77, Passes Away at the Home of His Daughter in Erlanger.

Again we are called upon to chronicle the death of another who was born and spent his entire life in Boone county. James Taylor Gaines died Sunday morning at 7:30 at the home of his daughter Mrs. Chester Davis, in Erlanger, after an illness of several months duration. He was born near Bullittville in 1848, was a son of Edwin M. and Angela Graves Gaines, and resided within a few miles of his birth until the final summons came. He had been spending the winter months in Florida for the past few seasons, but his condition was such this winter that he could not make the trip as usual, and after being stricken he continued to grow weaker and weaker until he breathed his last Sunday morning. He was the true type of a Kentucky gentleman and one who commanded the respect of all, doing all in his power for the benefit of mankind. He was spoken of in only the highest terms by his friends and neighbors and possessed a character that others may well exemplify. He was a member of the Bullittville Baptist church and after the funeral services were held in Erlanger Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. burial took place in Bullittville cemetery where he had seen many of his relatives and friends consigned to their last resting place. He is survived by his widow, Elizabeth and one daughter, Mrs. Chester Davis, of Erlanger and a number of other relatives and friends who mourn his demise. Undertaker C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Norris C. Gaines have bought of C. D. Aubrey the well known fair horse Judge—a 5-year old fine gelded sorrel saddle mare by Sanford Carpenter's noted King Chieftain—with this mare's breeding style and prospects she shows she bids fair to be a winner on next year's fair circuit.

PAYMENT OF CASH TO POOL MEMBERS TREMENDOUS TASK

More Than 120,000 Checks Required And About 600,000 Calculations Necessary—Big Sale Would Require Train 23 Miles Long to Haul It

An idea of the Herculean task involved in the payment to the members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association of the amount due to them on the 1922 crop, it was said at the Association office may be gained from the fact that about 120,000 participation certificates will figure in this distribution. On each of these certificates it is necessary to make an average of five calculations, or a total of 600,000 calculations, and after these calculations are finished there will be 120,000 checks to write, sign and mail to the members.

The amount to be distributed can not be known until all the tobacco is weighed and delivered to the buyers, and the calculations can not start until deliveries are completed. It is figured that about thirty days time will be required for the entire working force of the Association to make the calculations and prepare the checks for signature.

Some further idea of the magnitude of one of these great sales may be gathered from the fact that the 50,000,000 pound purchase of Burley tobacco by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, according to one of the Association's statistical experts would make a solid freight train twenty-three miles long.

Counting fifty loaded cars to the train it would require sixty-two trains to haul the tobacco, as each car will contain sixteen hundredweight of approximately 1,000 pounds each.

As three pounds of tobacco are required for the manufacture of 1,000 cigarettes, this fifty million pound purchase would make 16,666,666 cigarettes or more than one-fifth of the number manufactured in 1924 in the United States when the total was more than 71,000,000,000.

If placed end to end the cigarettes that could be manufactured from this purchase would reach a distance of 721,486 miles, or more than 28 times the distance around the globe, each standard-size cigarette being 2 1/2 inches long.

GO AHEAD PEOPLE

In any small town there are plenty of people who will admit that there are various things that should be done to put their community in the path of progress.

After a person has expounded these faults, you may ask him why he does not go ahead and call some kind of a meeting or interest some existing organization in the proposition, in order to remedy the situation of which he complains. "O, I can't do anything," he probably replies.

And yet anyone who has brains enough to point out an existing defect should have enough brains to induce other people to take hold to remedy it. We have all the critics that we need to point out defects here. But we would give almost anything for more go ahead people who would take hold and do things. All it wants in most cases is a little leadership.

The school teachers have been trying for 100 years to get the people to study the dictionary, which was accomplished in six weeks when the newspapers began to print cross word puzzles.

AN APPEAL TO CITIZENS OF BOONE COUNTY

To Support A Night School To Be Opened Friday Night, Jan. 16, 7 P. M., Florence School Building.

Someone has said, "The popular use or abuse of spare time will determine the future of the race and nation for good or evil." Education then becomes a matter of national concern, and as such should not only permanently endure, but constantly expand. Its importance therefore must be generally recognized. The Wizard Burrbank said "Produce a variety of corn that shall add one kernel to each ear now produced and you will add 5,000,000 bushels to the total crop." Who will attempt to compute the benefits to our civilization if a process be evolved to increase the productivity of each head and hand even by a single one percent? Physical mental forces latent in the life of a community are as a fertile plain, untilled.

Men and women engaged in the routine tasks of the home, the office the shop the farm have shown themselves eagerly anxious to secure educational service to be had by opening the day school for evening use. Kentucky although rich in natural resources ranks low with respect to income and education. In 1918, Dr. Ayres, one of America's greatest educational scientists, reported Kentucky ranked forty-fifth, compared with the forty-nine states—including the District of Columbia—with respect to the efficiency of their respective school systems.

The rural schools in Kentucky have felt the stimulus of a campaign for better schools, and when all the counties in the State come under the influence of the present scientifically planned county program urban population will increase.

I urge all who and this article to respond to this appeal to make Boone county a banquet county in the State. There is no age limit.

Prof. Yealey, of the Florence School, will be in charge. We have several over twenty years of age coming, there will be no charge, as the teaching will be volunteer work. Here is an opportunity to do something for yourself and your community. Keep this in mind, come to the Florence school building Friday evening, January the 16 at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. James C. Layne, Jr., "Dixie Highway" Boone County, Ch. Division of Education.

JUDGE GAINES, DEAD.

Prominent Citizen of County Passes Away as Result of Paralytic Stroke.

Judge William C. Gaines passed away Monday morning at his home on Euclid avenue Slater, Mo., aged 81 years, 10 months. Several months ago Judge Gaines suffered a stroke of paralysis. His condition had apparently improved, however, and he had been very much better. Members of the family had been with him constantly and had taken turn staying with him at night.

The funeral will be held from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. R. W. Settle pastor of the Baptist church. The burial will be at the Slater City Cemetery.

Judge Gaines has been connected with Saline county and his name associated with the county interests and history for the past fifty years. He having moved here from Kentucky in 1875. He was a member of the county court for four years and it is generally conceded that Northeastern Saline has never had better representation than during the four years Judge Gaines was on the bench. He was president of the bank of Slater.

William C. Gaines was the son of Henry T. and Melinda Corneilus Gaines, and was born in Shelby county, Ind., February 3, 1843.

On November 24th, 1868, he was married to Miss Pamela C. Graves of Boone county, Kentucky. She died at the home in Slater, November 21, 1910. After their marriage they lived in Boone county, Kentucky, until 1875, when they moved to Saline county, Mo., and settled on the farm about four miles north west of Slater. They lived continuously on the farm until 1908, when they moved to Slater.

Five children survive, three sons and two daughters: Mrs. R. J. Storrs, of Slater; Harry T. Gaines, on a farm near Slater; William E. Gaines on the old homestead; Edward C. Gaines, a civil engineer now located at Chicago, and Miss Bess Gaines, who lived with her father—Slater, (Mo.) Weekly.

During December 1924 264 head of cattle were tuberculin tested making a total of 10,920 tested to Jan. 1925, 17,092 cattle were condemned during 1924 by the government and state inspectors in the United States, 9,000 less cattle were examined for tuberculosis in 1921 than in 1923.

TIMELY AGRICULTURAL NEWS

GOING GOOD

E. G. Stephenson's pen of White Leghorns which he entered in the International Egg Laying Contest are still going good. At the end of the first week of the contest they stood in 39th place but they have been gaining rapidly until at the end of the eighth week they now stand in seventh place.

The ten pullets have laid 303 eggs in the first eight weeks which is an average of 15.1 eggs per pullet per month. This is a very good average.

There are 62 pens of White Leghorns entered in the contest coming from eight states and two foreign countries.

FARM BUREAU

The directors of the State Farm Bureau met last Friday at Louisville to meet last final development; on the new state purchasing association. Clem Kendall, President of the Boone County Organization, attended the meeting and reports back that he feels this new association will be of great help to the farmers. It will now be up to the farmers to pool their orders and their profits.

POULTRY MEETING

The Boone County Poultry Association will hold a meeting at the Court House today, Thursday, January 15th. The meeting will convene at 1 o'clock. Election of officers and plans for the ensuing year will be discussed. Effort is being made to have one or two reels of motion pictures which will be of interest to poultry raisers. All members should attend this meeting as the entire year's work will hinge on that day's work.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION

Contagious abortion in cattle is causing a great loss in Boone county. Its rapid spread deserves immediate attention. Last year the loss in the State was estimated at more than five millions of dollars. Serious, yes, very serious, so let's all get together and blot out, so far as possible this disastrous disease.

Doctors Randall, Ryle and Glacken have offered their services to do their part. The University of Kentucky is more than anxious to help in any way. Let's get together and stop a portion of this great loss.

The disease is spread through unsanitary conditions, carelessness, and often by dogs traveling over farms having infected cattle. In the past many farmers have refused to admit that their cattle harbored the disease but now that conditions are becoming very serious, I hope that every owner of a cow which he thinks might harbor the disease will call, write or get in touch with me in the near future. All information will be treated as strictly confidential.

In the near future I will have Dr. Polk from the Experiment Station at Lexington here to bleed cattle which we feel are infected. These blood samples will be tested and we can then tell the infected cattle. The bleeding of your cattle will not cost you a penny and it will allow you to know which of your cattle are infected.

So, for your own good, for the good of your neighbor, for the good of our country, let's try and remedy this very serious situation.

R. J. MATSON, County Agent.

Boone County Recorder,
Dear Sir:

Enclosed find $3.00 in payment for two year's subscription 1924-1925 to the Boone County Recorder. We are enjoying here in California a moderately warm winter, but I would like to be back home and with my relatives and friends again. I must confess that I am glad I am missing the cold weather that I enjoyed so much when I was a young man.

Wishing yourself and all my old friends a very happy and prosperous New Year, I am yours sincerely

GRANT COUNTY SUIT

Five citizens of Grant county have sued the Citizens Telephone Company for damages in the total sum of $125,000.

The suit grows out of a controversy between the company and its subscribers, of about a year ago over a raise in telephone rates, as a result of which nearly half of the subscribers removed their phones. County Judge F. A. Harrison, T. N. King, Frank See, Harry Simpson and Merton Seebare, all prominent citizens of that county, are the plaintiffs who pray for damages in the sum of $25,000 each for alleged defamation of character.

The next day of importance on the calendar is February 2—Ground Hog day.

KENTUCKY GRAIN VALUES IN GRAIN VALUES
Kentucky farmers realized $6,000,000 more on their corn, wheat and oats this year than in 1923, according to the Sears-Robuck Agricultural Foundation which reports that the national increase in grain values amount to $550,000,000. Oats alone were responsible for a gain of 1 1/2 millions, while wheat brought farmers of this state an added three millions and corn an extra 1 1/2 million, while the wheat brought farmers of this state an added three millions and corn an extra one and one-half million over last year, the report states.
While the Kentucky corn crop for 1924 fell considerably below that of the preceding year, the better price this year brought the total income to $9 1/2 million dollars as compared with $8 million the year before. The 1 million bushel increase in the wheat crop this year brought the value up to $8,250,000 as compared with $4,250,000 of 1923. The output of this state this year is up to 5 1/2 million bushels as compared to 4 1/2 million the year before with the result that farmers will have taken in 4 1/2 million dollars on this crop as compared with 3 millions the year before.
The yield per acre on corn in Kentucky the report states, dropped to 22.7 bushels per acre as a result of unfavorable weather, but the profit per bushel to the farmer was 24 cents as compared with 19 the year before. The wet days, on the other hand were a great help to the wheat and oats production, the former rising to 13.5 bushels per acre as compared with 12.4 the year before, and the latter to 24 from 21 in 1923. The profit per bushel of wheat this year was 36 cents where it was an even break last year and 14 cent profit in oats for the 10 cent loss of the preceding year.
The increased yield per acre of small grain and the increased price per bushel on all grains has aided materially in restoring the farmer to a better financial basis, the Foundation report concludes. The higher grain prices have resulted in higher live stock prices and this has brought a new vitality to agriculture.

Pigs and Pork Profits

One of the big jobs in hog raising is to get them to the market—quick! The longer it takes to put 100 pounds of pork on a hog the smaller the profit will be. Start right now feeding your little pigs on

A Contrast in Transportation
Henry Ford has brought a noted old stagecoach from Vermont, and will have it shipped to his home, where it will furnish an interesting contrast with modern transportation. It is hard to realize, in these days of swift movement, when people slip around from place to place with ease, how our great grandfathers were forced for many years to make all journeys in these awkward and lumbering vehicles.
Many of our ideas and prejudices are due largely to the fact that in stagecoach days travel was uncommon. People of different sections mingled little with each other. They handed down wrong conceptions of each other which we have not wholly shaken off.

THE NEW YEAR.
Nineteen and twenty-four has gone. The way of other years, It brought its sorrows and its joys, Its cares, its hopes and fears.
The New Year's facing us to-day, We know not what 'twill bring; But whether weal or woe may come, Let's do the bravest thing.
Let's acquit ourselves like men and stand Four-square for all that's right, And everything we find to do— Let's do it "with our might."
Let's make the world a better place This year than ever before, Let's live each day the Golden Rule If we can do no more.
Yes, let us crowd into the year Nineteen and twenty-five Just every good thing that we can; To that end let us strive. MRS. J. W. CAMPBELL,

PUBLISHERS NOTICE
The publishers of the Boone Co.
Recorder have been contemplating for some time the raising of the subscription rates to this paper. We did not deem it practical to make the new rates effective prior or during the present subscription campaign. We desire now to make public announcement that on the 15th day of February, 1925, the day following the close of our campaign that the regular subscription price of the RECORDER will be $2.00 per year. This raise is absolutely necessary on account of the increased price of news print and other costs incidental to the production of the paper. The RECORDER is one among the last of the old established papers in Kentucky to raise its subscription rate. This raise will not be effective during the present campaign, and according to the rules of the campaign you will be permitted to take advantage of the old rate as far in advance as 1931, but the new rate will positively take effect upon expiration of the time for which you subscribe during the campaign. It will be our uppermost desire to make the paper well worth the price of your subscription.

Mrs. J. L. Riley Passes Away.

Mrs. Kate Kreylich Riley, daughter of Frances and Jane Cleveland Kreylich, was born March 22, 1855, in Kenton county, Ky. She was married to James L. Riley, of Boone county April 12, 1888, who preceded her to the grave almost three years ago. For many years they had made their home in Ludlow, Ky. It being a most hospitable one, where their friends knew there was always a hearty welcome awaiting them.
After his death she remained in her home, to which she was deeply attached. One of her greatest pleasures being the visit of her friends there. For several years she had been in failing health, fighting a brave fight to regain it, but four weeks previous to her death she was taken seriously ill, and all her medical skill and loving hands could do was done, but unavailing a few days previous to her passing away she called her loved ones to her, telling them that she realized that her days on earth were few, and as she could not leave them so, asking them not to grieve at the separation, saying "I am only short at the most." And after instructing them in regard to plans which she wished to have carried out, said "all I ask is to go to sleep, and be at rest." And it was even so—for sinking into a sleep which lasted for hours, it ended in eternal sleep. Her spirit passing into the Great Beyond December 30th.

She leaves a brother George C.
Kreylich and a niece Mattie J. Kreylich besides many other relatives and friends to mourn her loss. More than thirty years ago she united with the Bullittsburg Christian church and although for quite a while not able to attend services, she remained a consistent, faithful member. Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon Jan. 2nd at her late home by Rev. F. H.
Schultz pastor of Ludlow Christian church, assisted by Rev. J. W.
Campbell in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends, after which she was laid to rest beside her husband in Highland cemtery.

The broken links will all be coming feet,

pand,

RED CROSS NEWS.

Miss Margaret East, Director of Public Health Nursing for the State of Kentucky, will be with the Boone County Chapter A. R. C. some time this month, at the annual election of officers. Miss East was Red Cross Nursing Field Representative in Kentucky for several years until October, 1924, when she was appointed as Director of the State Board of Public Health Nursing. Definite announcement of the date of meeting will be made later.

High schools now enrolled as Junior Auxiliaries will be sent in addition to their Junior News a new publication "High School Service" —until the expiration of their enrollment, when they should receive their enrollment on the new basis.

Another year has passed and a new one is before us, to be whatever we shall make of it. It is young and pliable and may be moulded to suit our fancy. When we write its history a year hence, will it be a story of progress or one of backsliding. Time never carries, days slip-by with great rapidity. Unless there is a plan for improvement the 365 days will have gone into history without an accomplishment to our credit. If we get careless, if we are satisfied to "let well enough alone" and unrelentingly drag along thru the year without ambition or hope of betterment, there is no hope of any advancement.

Mr. Edgar Berkshire has had a light plant installed in his residence.

COUGHS

Quick Way to Stop Them

Persistent, racking coughing, which by rapidly weakening your entire system lays you open to more dangerous diseases, can be checked often with the first dose of that old-time tried and proved remedy
—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. And there's a reason. Doctors say there is nothing like pintar to quickly loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing, while the honey gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation. It is often astonishing how quickly this combination relieves the stubbornest cough.
But be sure you get the original Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pin-tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—free for spasmodic cough. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at any good drugstore.

BOONE COUNTY RICHER.

Boone county is richer yearly by $140,000 because of the soil fertility here, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. The figure is based on data resulting from many carefully kept records on a considerable number of farms.

The average quantity of manure recovered for use on crop lands in the area studied was 7.4 tons per cow, and since the fertilizing value of a ton of manure is $2.60 the by-product value of each cow is approximately twenty dollars. The application of this figure to the 7,000 dairy cattle in this county brings the total added value to the soil fertility here to the almost unbelieveable figure given above.

In keeping with its better feeding program the Institute estimates that from 25 to 50 per cent greater profit from each ton of feed can be made by local farmers who milk cows through improved feeding methods, alone. This was demonstrated it tested by the experiment recently conducted by the University of Minnesota. The school's dairy division about a year ago purchased four average cows with available records but without a scientific feeding ration and by merely placing them on a home-grown ration suitable to their needs increased each cow's production at most forty per cent.

CONSOLIDATION IS IMPROVING
S. C. SCHOOLS

The State department of education of South Carolina, through its official journal for the year 1924-25 is promoting school consolidation according to School Life, a periodical of the Interior Department, Bureau of Education. The State rural school supervisor reports for 1922-23, 1,256 consolidated schools and only 782 one-teacher schools. Reports from 22 county superintendents state that nearly all of these counties are carrying on programs of consolidation, building better school houses, extending the term length and transporting pupils. Already in this school year Union county has consolidated five districts and has eliminated four one-teacher and two-teacher schools.

Spartanburg county is improving its schools and enlarging many buildings as new facilities are attracted by the opportunities for their children.

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone County, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

The force in the Recorder office has been quite busy the past two weeks.

Unless the people make it their habit to shout for their home town every chance they get, it may not be worth shouting about.

Not merely do the farmers raise good crops last year, but the politicians say they raised quite a rumpus down at Washington.

An apartment house with a total of 1,000 rooms divided into 155 modern apartments is to be constructed in Montreal this summer.

After shaking hands with thousands at the New Year reception President Coolidge probably wishes he was back in Vermont pitching hay.

Old fashioned people come down
 the streets with a splendid dignity, but that does not prevent automobile drivers from running over them.

If they are going to coin more silver dollars, they should give people plenty of notice, so they can have their trousers' pockets reinforced.

People who can't get away for winter vacations, can obtain great benefit by saving wood in the back yard and doing housework in the kitchen.

Many of the school pupils are getting ready for the mid-year examinations by going to all the dances and other late parties anywhere around.

Over 70 per cent of all cooperative cheese factories in the United States are in Wisconsin, and they market 70 per cent of the cheese business.

The people who spend money as fast as they get it, are not reported to be worrying so far about the burden of carrying the big car-wheel silver dollars around.

Some folks think things will be better for them just because it is 1925, but they have got to do something in their place of work other than hang up a new calendar.

The president does not expect to make any change in his cabinet, but the cabinet can continue to mention themselves as suitable appointments to fill possible vacancies.

Starting with the first day of the New Year all railways in Ireland came under one management. The new system ensures more effective service and a greater degree of prosperity.

It is becoming more and more apparent that wars will be no more just as soon as the "money powers" so decide. But so long as wars mean profits in gold peace talk is waste of energy.

Apparently sugar will be plentiful next year. Europe will produce millions of tons more than ever before and Cuba will produce more than ever. Of course, this may be "cornered" as coffee is now held, and the speculators reap a harvest of gold.

Many thousands of cotton mill workers in Fall River, Mass., have been out of employment for nearly a year. Thirty manufacturers have agreed to start the mills if the employees will accept a 10 per cent reduction of wages. It will be decided in this month.

The Kroger 256 chain stores last year had a net profit of 11.08 cents on each $1.00 of sales. The total sales amounted to $30,000,000. Besides paying 8 per cent dividends on stock the company has also issued stock dividends totaling 147 per cent, and now has a surplus of $19,- 000,000 to divide.

On Saturday, Jan. 24th, between the hours of 6 and 9:30 a. m., there will be a total eclipse of the sun.
 This eclipse will be visible in the United States, and doubtless will be seen by more persons than have seen such a occurrence in the past.
 An eclipse is not a rare event; one or two occur every year, but this one is notable for the fact that it occurs in a territory from which the light of the sun has not been wholly obscured by the moon within the memory of any one living.

Since 1919 the public debt has been reduced from $62,596,000, 000 to $20,978,622,700—about one billion of this occurred last year, not quite as much as the year previous. The income and profits tax paid during the year amounted to $31,773,509,732. If France and Italy can be coaxed into following the example of England and repay the money loaned them to carry on their war, our public debt ought to be wiped out during the next twenty years. Meanwhile the interest amounts to nearly as much as our other expenses combined.

CORDER

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL IS

EXPECTING the greatest crowd in its history for the inauguration ceremonies on March 4th. The hotels are already making reservations for the inaugural period and the Washington Chamber of Commerce is making plans for the parade and other festivities in connection with the administering of the oath of office to Calvin Coolidge. The President has approved tentative plans for the parade, but is not so interested in the proposal for a grand inaugural ball in the evening. "If a ball is held," he puts it, "I suppose I'll have to go." The understanding is that the ball will not be held at the White House, but will be at the New Willard Hotel, the proceeds to go to charity.

THE BIGGEST FIGHT now going on in Congress is over the President's veto of the postal pay bill, which would add about $68,000,000
 to the income of postal employees.
 The Republican insurgents and the Democrats in the Senate are trying to force a vote to over-ride the veto, confident that they have enough strength to do it. The President is trying to forestall that vote, having been privately informed that his veto will NOT care whether it passes or not. The proposal to increase postage is being heartily opposed by thousands of newspapers, who would suffer chiefly under the provisions of the bill.

THE MUSCLE SHOALS battle in Congress has developed into an effort to delay any action until the adjournment of the present Congress in March. The Senate is debating the plan of Senator Underwood of Alabama to sell the Muscle Shoals nitrate and power plants before July 1925, and there are indulgences that the Underwood bill will be passed, at least by the Senate. The House has passed a bill accepting the offer of Henry Ford for the property, but Ford, tired of the delay in Congress, has withdrawn his offer, so the action of the House doesn't mean anything. Under the Underwood plan, Muscle Shoals would be operated by the Government after July 1st of next year if it was not sold before that time. Senator Norris of Nebraska believes, however, that no opportunity should be given for the sale of the Alabama property to private interests, and is urging continued Government operation. He is therefore seeking to delay action as long as he can, supported by the Republican insurgents and some of the Democrats. The Hearst newspapers have become involved in the Senate fight by charging that the Underwood plan for disposing of Muscle Shoals is comparable to the leasing of the Teapot Dome oil reserve in Wyoming to Harry Sinclair. The Senate is now investigating the attacks of the Hearst papers on the Underwood bill.

HAVE COWS FRESHEN IN FALL, SAYS DAIRYMAN

Lexington, Ky.—Cows that freshen in the fall and winter reach their peak production when milk and butterfat ordinarily are their best prices, says Prof. J. J. Hooper of the University of Kentucky dairy department, in reply to a question recently asked by one of the hundreds of new dairymen in the state.

Prof. Hooper cited data presented in research bulletin No. 213 of the Kentucky Experiment Station, which summarizes records for 100 dairy cows located in various parts of the state. Fifty cows that freshened in the fall and winter milked over a longer period of the year and produced more milk and butterfat than 50 cows that freshened in the spring and summer, according to this bulletin.

The cows that freshened in the fall and winter produced 10 per cent more milk and butterfat than those freshening in the spring, and 20 per cent more than those freshening in the summer. "The reason for this larger production for winter-fresh cows," says Prof. Hooper, "is that the cow that freshens in the fall is stimulated to give a her young calf and when this stimulus is lessening in the spring she is turned on green grass, which again increases her milk production."

With the spring-fresh cow, the stimulus of calf and grass both tends to dry off in the fall therefore it is nothing to again stimulate her production. Also the winter-fresh cow is the most profitable one, because milk is scarcest and most in demand at this season of the year.

Weakening Night
Coughing Banished
Very Simple Way

It is really astonishing how a persistent, exasperating cough that has kept you awake night after night, and is rapidly wearing you down, usually stopped short by a very simple method. Hundreds have found that they can sleep the whole night through undisturbed often the first time they try it.

The method is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing.
 Getting at the cause like this, in a perfectly simple way, it stops the cough almost instantly.
 You get your best night's rest perhaps in weeks, and in a very short time the whole cough condition is gone.

Dr. King's New Discovery is splendid not only for coughs and chest colds, but also for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and almost every kind of throat trouble, including children's spasmodic croup. Very economical as the dose is only one teaspoonful. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENTS

In many country town schools through the winter, the teachers and children are devoting considerable attention to getting up entertainments. Such attempts are sometimes criticised, on the ground that they divert the attention of the young folks from their regular lessons. Yet on the whole these entertainments, if they are not permitted to absorb too much energy, would seem to serve a very useful purpose.

Country town children are usually intelligent, as the result of faithful study. Yet there are many of them who are very bashful as the result of living in a quiet way at home, and not having much chance to go into company and do things at public functions.

If you take a bunch of such young folks and give them parts in a little play or recitations and songs to present, they acquire the ability to do things in public, which adds to their self confidence. It will give them power to take their own part in their later experience.

It is a fine thing when the parents of such a group of children are brought together. Many of them may not have known each other before. Some of them feel awkward and embarrassed, as if they were strangers, and away from home.

The fact that they all have a common interest in these children, draws them together, and helps them get better acquainted, so that they feel happier in their surroundings.

A good school entertainment is an advertisement of what a school can do. It suggests to parents what have contemplated taking their children out of school, that they will miss something and fall behind other children, unless they complete the school work offered by their home towns. It induces them to take advantage of all the educational chances of their own neighborhoods.

MOTOR COMPETITION

A high official of the Boston and Maine railroad has recommended that about 1,000 miles of its track which has been made unprofitable largely by the competition of automobiles and trucks, be sold to road builders who would also like to drop branch lines for a like reason.

In many districts where the railroads once operated heavily loaded trains filled with passengers and commuters, now a few poorly fitted cars pay the bills. And many high speed cars are even faster business come in to take many freight trains go light loaded.

Railroad managers, instead of investing this change, will often be able to make money out of it, by running their own trucks and buses. The country must always have railroads, and see that they earn a fair income. The people demand speed, but if buses and trucks wish to run on railroad schedules, they will eventually need many private rights of way where they will not interfere with other traffic.

KEEPING A DIARY

Many old timers kept a diary regularly each year, and these records are a most interesting picture of the habits and thoughts of those days. They tell the story of incessant work and small means. Many people of an introspective and emotional character used to keep such records to give outlet for their tumultuous feelings.

Probably a good many people keep brief records of their activities now, but not many write out their experiences and thoughts at great length the way the old timers used to. Our days are too busy keeping up with the procession, and earning the money to procure the things which are considered necessary
 now. There is less of that effective temperament that formerly made many people good diary keepers. It is a good plan to keep such a record one has the time, as it will lead one to realize the importance and interest of the experiences of every day.

Only sixty-four days until spring, which begins March 20.

CONSERVING THE VISION OF CHILDREN

Is your child one of the large number found by nurses and doctors in schools with eyes diseased or defective to the extent that he did not derive the benefit he should have received from his class because he could not see properly?

Were you advised to secure glasses for him and perhaps this has not yet been done? Or perhaps the glasses were secured and he has tired of wearing them and has laid them aside? If for any reason glasses have been prescribed for your child, see that he wears them by all means. If, because of complaints of dizziness, headaches, frowning when reading, holding the page too close to the eyes etc., you think he may need glasses, be sure to take him to a competent eye specialist for examination and advice.

Many children appear to be dull and backward in their school work when in reality their minds are all right but their vision is so poor that it is impossible for them to see the blackboard. Last year one of the nurses of the Bureau of Child Health who was doing demonstration work in a rural district found a little girl like this. The child had reached the fifth grade without any difficulty but had repeated the third grade work. The teacher told the nurse that she did not seem to be interested in her work, especially her arithmetic and that she would probably fail again that year. When the child's vision was tested it was found that she was so nearsighted that she could not see the board from her desk. The child said she had asked to sit on the front seat but the teacher would not let her. When the condition was explained to the teacher she volunteered to see the child's parents and assist in having glasses fitted. A recent report from this child states that her glasses have been fitted and that she is doing good school work.

FARMERS AND EDUCATION

Farmers sometimes grumble at the cost of education and enlightened individuals among them know and admit that they owe a great debt to the schools including the whole research system. But, according to records compiled by the University of Illinois covering the period from 1913 to 1923, the most striking feature is the decline in students from the farms. While the total registration increased 141 per cent, those from the farms increased only 70 per cent. Children of skilled laborers increased 247 per cent and children of business men show an increase of 169 per cent.

In the College of Agriculture at the same university less than 43 per cent of the 706 students enrolled last year came from the farm. Contrast this with the showing made at the university by the children of parents engaged in other occupations. Between 1913 and 1923, the registration of the children of carpenters increased from 52 to 318, mechanics from 52 to 114, electricians from nothing to 22, barbers from 15 to 31, miners from 19 to 55, painters from 8 to 37, plumbers from 4 to 35, tailors from 15 to 56.

The total of 994 children of skilled laborers registered last year contrasted with 244 in 1913. There is an intangible but enormous mass of benefits for the rural community through education. Village life is made sweeter and more tolerable by the development of intellectual interests. The exercise and straightening of the artistic faculties adds joy to lives which might otherwise be dull and vacuous. Thus contentment and happiness are fostered, and the country becomes more able to retain its hold on the people.

Some definite practical effort should be made to remedy the conditions shown by the foregoing records which are typical of other state universities. It is a matter in which all the people of the nation have an interest.

TAXING THE FUTURE

There were more tax-free bonds issued during the first six months of 1924 than during any other period of six months in American history. There is something that recommends itself for the sober consideration of every taxpayer.

Unless something is done to curtail the reckless and wanton method of taxing the coming generation to pay for present convenience, there will be no end to the havoc that may be wrought.

Increases in taxes may be traced largely to the craze for issuing bonds in which investors place their money and avoid responsibility in paying for their just share of the cost of government.

The dollar invested by labor, by agriculture and by commerce ought to have an equal chance with the dollar invested by wealthy bondholders in public improvements constructed under direction of local or national politicians.

The income taxpayers are now kicking because they have to make out returns again, and nontaxpayers are kicking because they don't have to.

Many people exemplify Sunday as a day of rest, by sleeping through the minister's sermon.

HOME-BUTCHERING MONTH IN KENTUCKY.

This is home-butchering month in Kentucky. Probably 75 per cent of butchering and curing meat on the farm is done in December, according to Grady Sellards of the College of Agriculture, who is giving pork-cutting demonstrations in a score of counties.

Mr. Sellards recommends a system of cutting in which the backbone is split and the upper third of the shoulder is removed. The removal of the upper part of the shoulder facilitates the penetration of the cure around the shoulder blade, and consequently improves the cured product.

"I have observed that shoulder meat as ordinarily cured is strong," said Mr. Sellards. "Whereas there should be little difference between it and ham. It is recommended that the shoulder be used for sausage, since a large percentage of lean meat is necessary for good farm sausage. A good proportion is three-fourths lean and one-fourth fat. The shoulder butt may also be cured, just as hams and shoulders are cured, and used for seasoning purposes.

"We recommend that the backbone be split. This assists in freeing the carcass of animal heat, which is responsible for considerable loss, when meat is put in cure. In addition, splitting the backbone makes possible the pork chop cut, which can be used for boiling or frying, whereas the backbone, when taken out whole, can be used only for boiling.

"Another factor in favor of making the pork chop cut is the greater value of this cut when sold to local butchers. It has been observed that there is in many cases as much as 8 to 10 cents a pound difference in the price of old-fashioned backbone and pork chops. The pork chop is more desirable from the city butcher's standpoint, because his trade is educated to the use of pork chops.

The question is often asked at pork cutting demonstrations as to whether the loin strip can be used for sausage. It can be, under our system of cutting, just as when any other method is employed."

A CORRECTION FOR HILL

Our attention has been called to an error in the regular advertisement of Geo. W. Hill & Co., grocers of Covington, in last week's issue. The adv. as it stood quoted Silver Floss Sauer Kraut, 14-gal. keg at $5.52, when it should have been $5.25. It was merely a case of transposition, but meant a difference of 27c in the price of sauer kraut.

JUDGE CAMMACK IN BURLINGTON.

Judge J. W. Cammack, of Owen county, ex-judge of the Circuit Court for the Fifteenth District, was in Burlington on business last Tuesday. It was the first time the judge had been in our town for several years and his many friends here were glad to see him. Judge Cammack is still an active practitioner and prominent figure in the political life of the state.

Only one holiday in the month of January—the first—New Year's day.

EDITORS "KNEAD" BREAD

The following was taken from the National Monthly Magazine: Read this to-day! It is a review of a newspaper editor: It is reported that one of the fastidious newly married ladies of this town kneads bread with her gloves on. This incident may be somewhat peculiar, but there are others. The editor of this paper needs bread with his shoes on; he needs bread with his shirt on; and unless some of the delinquent subscribers to his "Old Rag of Freedom" pony up before long, he will need bread without a damn thing on, and Wisconsin is no Garden of Eden in the winter time.

The only change we desire to make is that this is Kentucky instead of Wisconsin.

"You say Mrs. S. is a busy body?" "Yes, she wiggles all over when she does the new dance steps."

The Recorder Takes Great Pleasure in Presenting This Grand Galaxy of Star Contenders for Honors in our Subscription Building Campaign

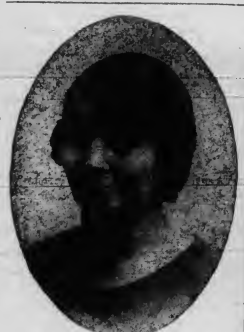

MISS FANNIE LOIS COTTON

From the extreme south end of Boone county the Recorder is proud to say that we have a representative in this campaign who will have strong backing for first honors. We refer to Miss Fannie Lois Cotton, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cotton, of Verona. Miss Fannie Lois got a late start but by and with the assistance of her mother, and probably of her father, she has gradually and surely placed herself in a position that must be regarded as dangerous to the other contestants that are seeking first place in this campaign. Her father, "Bert" Cotton, the wheel horse of the south end, has a host of friends who are eagerly watching the outcome of this race and we believe that many subscriptions will be turned in by Miss Fannie Lois during the remainder of the campaign.

MRS. GEORGE KOTTMYER

In introducing Mrs. George Kottmyer in this campaign we want to mention that there has not been a more conscientious worker in any organization effort that was ever before launched in this county than Mrs. Kottmyer. Her work is splendid and her friends are now certain that she will be almost, if not at the head of the list at the end. Mrs. Kottmyer is the daughter of the late Woods Riggs, a man who played an important part in the early days of Boone county. She is the wife of George Kottmyer, the well-known grocerman of Constance, and all in all Mrs. Kottmyer must be recognized as one of our best workers in the campaign. Her friends are very enthusiastic about her possibilities in this race.

MRS. THOMAS HENSLEY

Burlington
Mrs. Thomas Hensley has as many well wishers and supporters in this campaign as any candidate that we have heretofore presented. Mrs. Hensley is the wife of Thomas Hensley, nearby Burlington farmer, and comes from one of the old line families of Boone county, the Schrecks. Her winsome disposition and her willingness to put in hard work makes her a real contender for the Essex Coach. She is backed by an army of friends with the assistance of her husband. She is certainly putting up a fight that is making some of our other workers sit up and take notice. Mrs. Hensley has kept up an even pace from the very beginning.

MRS. EVA KILGOUR

Hebron
The Recorder does not have the pleasure of reproducing a likeness of this worthy candidate, for the reason that we were not furnished a picture. Mrs. Eva Kilgour, of Hebron, was one of the first to enter the campaign and from the outset she has proved that she is sure enough business getter. Her reports are a credit to her candidacy and the Recorder recognizes in her one of the real contenders for the first prize. She is the wife of Emmett Kilgour, the well-known Hebron farmer, and the daughter of the late John Conner, who was one of Boone county's pioneer citizens. It is stated that Hebron precinct will come 100 per cent for this lady in the final count.

MRS. ALMA V. GLACKEN

Florence

Here is a hard working candidate and deserves special credit for the high toned campaign that she is making in the Recorder race for the big prize. Mrs. Alma V. Glacken is a Boone county woman, born and reared here, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Snyder, and the wife of Elmer Glacken. Mrs. Glacken is endeavoring to win one of the big prizes by putting forth honest, conscientious effort and truly she has made a most consistent campaign, and her friends are now predicting that if she keeps up her present hustling qualities that there is no way in the world to prevent her being one of the big four in the last count.

MRS. ALBERTA KELLY STEPHENS

Petersburg

One of the very first to enter the Recorder campaign was Mrs. Alberta Kelly Stephens, of Petersburg, and she has been going a two-forty-eight since, not allowing any grass to grow under her feet. Mrs. Stephens is the daughter of the late respected Eugene Kelly, of Burlington, and is the wife of Albert Stephens, who comes from one of Boone county's most worthy families. Mrs. Stephens is conducting a clever campaign and she is surely getting her share of subscriptions to the Recorder and if she keeps up her present pace there is no doubt about her having to be considered right up to last minute as a strong competitor for first honors. This prediction is based on Mrs. Stephens record up to date.

ALBERT WILLIS

Bullitsville

Albert Willis, of Bullitsville, is a young man of good standing in the community in which he lives and he is making the effort of his life to make a good showing in our campaign. He is the son of the late lamented, Tom Willis, former assessor and well-known wheel horse of Boone county. If Albert shows any of the fighting spirit of his father he will doubtless score one of the prizes in this campaign. His wife, formerly Miss Laura Aylor, is giving his candidacy considerable thought and attention, and if Albert has the time to make a whirlwind finish he may score one of the listed prizes.

Now and then there is a jury that has the nerve to return a verdict in accordance with the law and the evidence.

FRANCIS VIRGINIA BERKSHIRE

Petersburg

Here is a little lady that has ambitions to score first honors in the Recorder race. Miss Francis is blessed with good looks, a pleasing, winsome disposition and a will to work. Besides being a graduate of the Petersburg High School she has distinguished herself as a housekeeper, cook and seamstress. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Berkshire and has a host of friends who are boosting her candidacy. She is being ably assisted by her mother, formerly Miss Mary Gaines, well-known Boone county school teacher. That she will make a good race is already conceded.

MISS CECILE BROWN

Walton

Walton is represented in our campaign by Miss Cecile Brown, the popular telephone operator at that place and we pass it to the other candidates that in this vivacious, peppy and conscientious worker they have a foe worthy of due consideration, for Miss Cecile is waging a well organized campaign to carry off first honors in this race. No one need be surprised to see her ambitions realized for she is certainly putting real effort behind her candidacy. Miss Cecile is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Brown, of Beaver lick, and her old friends and neighbors are standing steadfastly behind her candidacy, as well as her home town of Walton.

MRS. DELLE GOODRIDGE COLLINS

Florence

One of the formidable candidates for first honors in this campaign is Mrs. Delle Goodridge Collins, the accomplished and extremely popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodridge, life-long residents of Boone County. Mrs. Collins has put pep, ginger and grit into her race from the very beginning, and with the assistance of her mother she has been right along toward and at the top of the list. Her friends are backing her to win the Essex Coach and it is our belief that her total vote will be of large proportions when the final count is made by the judges on Saturday night, February 14. Mrs. Collins deserves to score a big prize.

Many college professors are trying to rewrite the Bible, but most people will continue to believe that the garden of Eden was not a park.

MRS. LUCY GARRISON

Union

Here is a very aggressive and hard working candidate for the Essex Coach. Mrs. Lucy Garrison is the wife of Russell Garrison, of Union, and is a daughter of George H. Stephenson, of Union. Lucy, as she is familiarly known to her friends, is a great lover of outdoor life and her entry into the Recorder race has been more or less interesting and enjoyable to her. She loves horse back riding and she has possibly galloped more miles across the hills of southern Boone county than any other contestant in the race. She is a natural born rider and if she wins the car she will have to give her beautiful horse some of the credit, as many have admired her strenuous activity and are now standing behind her in this race. Mrs. Garrison has proven that she has real business getting qualities and day by day she has enhanced her chances of driving away the Essex Coach as her valentine.

ELMO JERGENS

Ludlow, R. D. 2

Of the younger set we have for one of our contestants Elmo Jergens, of Ludlow, Route Two. Elmo is the son of Henry Jergens, the well-known and thrifty farmer of that section and the Jergens family belongs to Boone's best representative citizens. Elmo is a school boy and only gets to work after school hours. He does not hope to win one of the big prizes but is still making an effort to get one of the smaller ones. Elmo is a good boy and we are glad to have him in the race.

SAYS ALFALFA WOULD REDUCE FEED BILLS

Statistics show that Fayette county farmers five years ago were spending for commercial feeds $3.60 annually for every acre of land in the county, according to Ralph Kenney, extension agronomist for the College of Agriculture. He estimates that this feed bill has been greatly increased, and perhaps doubled, by now. "At least half of this big feed item could be kept at home by growing a sufficient acreage of alfalfa," declared Mr. Kenney. "That this is true is proved by what has been done in Pendleton county, which has almost the same number of live stock, in proportion to its area. Pendleton county has 11,000 acres of alfalfa, and its farmers spend only 47 cents per acre for manufactured feeds. There is a large dairy industry in Pendleton county, which means that feed requirements are high."

Commercial feed costs per acre of land in 17 other Central Kentucky counties in 1920 were: Anderson, $5 cents; Bourbon, $1.60; Franklin, $6 cents; Harrison, $0 cents; Lincoln, $9 cents; Montgomery, $1.25; Shelby, $1.30; Boyle, $1.30; Clark, $1.10; Garrard, $6 cents; Henry, $1 cents; Madison, $1.08; Nicholas, $0 cents; Woodford, $2.25; Jessamine, $1.40; Mercer, $1.20, and Scott, $1.20.

By counting 7 sheep or 10 hogs equal to one horse, mule or cow, the comparative live stock population of the counties in question may be obtained. Mr. Kenney figures. Then, based on the amount of money spent for commercial feeds per comparable head of stock, Fayette county leads with $12.85, followed by others in their alphabetical order. Anderson, $5.43; Bourbon, $10; Boyle, $11.17; Clark, $7.37; Franklin, $7.44; Garrard, $6.20; Henry, $7.03; Jessamine, $11.35; Lincoln, $7.42; Madison, $7.55; Mercer, $9.45; Nicholas, $4.46; Pendleton, $3.66; Scott, $9.40; Shelby, $10, and Woodford, $10.00. Of the 18 counties which Mr. Kenney compares with Pendleton, only seven have a greater live stock population. Five years ago Pendleton county had more alfalfa than any other Kentucky county, and the effect on farm expenditures for feed is shown to be remarkable.

Although the days are already a little longer, no one has been discovered so far getting up any earlier in the morning.

THE DANCING SEASON

Whatever other alterations in popular fancy occur, dancing is just about equally popular from one year to another. Its styles and manners change, but the human desire to step out in time to rhythmic music is about as permanent a feeling as hunger or the love of music.

So about now the young element of Boone County, and a lot of the middle-aged ones too, are enjoying the dances of the season. It is a pretty slow night when several of them are not going on in some circles.

It is a splendid amusement when not overdone, and when nicely supervised and chaperoned. The wise heads will say that it dances could be held earlier in the evening, so as not to involve so much dissipation through late hours, this diversion would be more useful. Perhaps some day when all wrong things are reformed, this will be done. When that time comes the school teachers and office heads will take a little more cheerful night after a popular assembly.

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone County, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RE CORDER

THERE IS MUCH waiting and gnashing of teeth on Capitol Hill and elsewhere in official Washington over the disclosures in the Scott divorce case. Most of it results from the threat of Mrs. Scott's wife of the Michigan Congressman, to bring new sensations concerning drinking and gambling among officials in the course of her efforts to win a divorce from her husband. There are any number of legislators who will vote dry as a matter of record and then not hesitate to take a drink or two, but they do not like to have their names and photographs published in the newspapers. It leads to embarrassments when they have to go to their homes to run for re-election.

AS A SEQUEL to the Scott expose, opponents of the dry law are seeking the enactment of legislation making it specifically incumbent on Government officials to observe the Volstead act as well as all other laws. All such agitation does not originate with the wets, either, as witness the visit of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Judge Elbert H. Gary to the White House to urge President Coolidge to call upon all officials to rigidly obey the laws that they pass or that they are sworn to uphold and enforce.

IN THE MEANTIME, the whole problem of prohibition enforcement being given an airing by a Senate committee, but the public is not being let in on the affair, as the inquiry, unlike similar Congressional investigations, is going on behind closed doors. It had been understood that the probe would be open to all, but a demand for secrecy was made by Senators on the committee.

RUMORS CONTINUE to crop up in Washington that Frank B. Kellogg, American Ambassador to Great Britain, is to retire from his position in London, but they are met by vehement and repeated denial from Kellogg himself. It begins to appear that Kellogg does not want to get out of the diplomatic service, but that persons with more influence than himself are determined that his resignation will be made available to the President. James M. Beck, one of the leading lawyers in the world and the present Solicitor General of the United States, is looked upon as a likely successor to Kellogg.

THE VENERABLE Oliver Wendell Holmes, son of the famous New England novelist and essayist, is now the senior member of the United States Supreme Court as a result of the retirement of Joseph McKenna the other day. Justice Holmes will be 33 years old in March, but he is as spry and active and his mind is as keen as when he graduated from the Harvard Law School after the Civil War. He still carries in his neck part of a bullet that wounded him when leading his company in a charge against the Confederates in 1862. Holmes and Justice Louis Brandeis are looked upon as the two most "liberal minded" members of the great court.

SOME REAR OLD fashioned oratory was heard in the Senate when his democratic colleagues pounced upon Senator Nathaniel Dial of South Carolina, and mauled him around for his caustic criticism of the present day policies of the Democratic party. Dial, who was defeated for reelection in the primary election in his state last spring, said in his speech, that the party had deteriorated and that it lost the presidential election last November because it "ought to have lost." He started to offer some amendments to his remarks the next day, but the storm that greeted him when he arose in the Senate caused him to withdraw the whole speech. No apology has been offered, however, by Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland, also a Democrat, whose criticism of his own party was just as vitriolic, if not more so, than Dial's.

THE BUDGET BUREAU has succeeded in lopping off $10,000 from the estimated cost of the inaugural ceremonies on March 4. The congressional committee in charge of the affair had estimated the total expense at $50,000, the same as four years ago, but the Administration has cut it to $40,000. The local committee which will arrange the public portions of the celebration plans the most elaborate ceremonies in history.

Felix A. Gaines, a former citizen of Boone County, but has for the last twenty years made his home in Philadelphia, was in Burlington, last Thursday, meeting with friends of former days. All were glad to meet and shake his hand. He was called here on account of the death of his Uncle James T. Gaines. It has been about four years since his last visit to the graves of his beloved ones. His friends were glad to see him, but he was well.

FRIENDS ARE YOUR CAPITAL

Make friends and stick to them.
 No man can hope to do much with out friends and no man can expect to rise if he depends upon the advice of his friends.

Most business failures are due to timidity. A man is afraid to grasp an opportunity and goes off to consult a friend who doesn't know the proposition at all and he is discouraged because his friend hesitates to give a favorable opinion.

Don't listen to folks who tell you you can't do this or can't do that—if you have any confidence in yourself or in the proposition go to it to win.

Make friends with business people. Business men have faith in the young men who are not afraid to take a chance and make a determined effort. Meet your obligation promptly. Your banker instead of being hard-fisted, hard headed watchman over a vault full of money, is really more concerned with the industry and integrity of folks. Its business to know human nature, and his eyes are always on the young man who is not afraid to take a chance, who will make the responsible business man and bank customer tomorrow.

All business is grounded upon the confidence of man, and most bankers are eager to help the right sort of young men.

Don't think you will ever become so affluent that you can afford to stop making friends. Don't be afraid to help the other fellow and don't be discouraged by ingratitude.

PUBLIC BENEFACTORS

What does it profit a man, if he accumulates a fortune commensurate with his needs, and then continues to make money just for the sake of adding to his wealth?

The logical answer is that it profits him nothing if he does not use the surplus above what he actually needs, for the good of others.

He would be unwise to retire, unless his condition of health made such a step necessary, because he would be unhappy in a life of ease and the community would suffer from the loss of his business judgment and experience.

The business which he built up would lose the value of his counsel and those whom he had given employment might be unwitting sufferers through a complete failure of the enterprises in which he was interested.

When such a man reaches a place where he is financially independent, he is untaken good by continuing to make money and spending it for the betterment of others, less fortunate and with less ability than he.

Such men discharge their full duty when they become public benefactors and use their wealth to good ends.

MIDWINTER TRADE

The period following New Year may or may not be quite a lively time in the field of retail business. If people just wait for business to come to them, it may not come very fast. It is a period when the majority of families have bought the bulk of the stuff that they need for the rest of the winter. There is a temptation, unless they hear of some special inducement, for people to go slow on purchases, and think they can get along now until spring before buying much more.

Meanwhile, the people are keeping their eyes on the newspapers, with a feeling that about now they should hear something that will be of interest to them. When ambitious merchants come out with advertisements in which they offer special bargains in order to get their winter stock cleared out, it is amazing how people will conclude that they want some more things after all, and are willing to stock up ahead to some extent, if they feel that they are getting exceptional values.

WHAT IS PROGRESS?

A noted English Dean takes the position that there is "no such animal," and many historians support his contention. They point out that five great civilizations fell and no less than seven came and went in Egypt alone, and ask, "What reason is there for believing our own civilization is exempt from the historical rhythm of life and death?"

A writer in the New York Times asserts that one reason is that there are no more barbarian races left to wipe out.

It may be true that the only great reservoir of backward peoples is in Africa, and we can always keep them at bay by a superiority in fighting weapons such as the ancient empires never enjoyed.

China and Japan are already civilized and have developed the weaknesses of civilization. The sole danger for white civilization is from within. The white peoples cut each other to pieces as they came pretty near doing a few years ago and are preparing to do again.

If we refrain from flinging ourselves at one another's white throats, brown and black and yellow goblins will never bother us.

Mussolini, the Prime Minister of Italy, and leader of the Fascists, is making a desperate fight to retain his political trip in the face of the latest report he has adopted the identical measures that resulted in forming the Fascist. Mussolini does not believe in democracy, and this fact alone means his downfall sooner or later. The day of the dictator, as well as the monarch, seems to have come to an end in Europe as well as in America.

Coughs Always

Dangerous—Quick

Way to Stop Them

Chronic coughs and chest colds often lead to more serious diseases. The infection itself dangerous, but the continual coughing spells day and night go to weaken your entire system that you can no longer fight off disease.

So stop a cough the quickest way you can. Do this there is nothing better than that old-time tried and proved remedy—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. Doctors say there is nothing like pine-tar extract to quickly loosen and remove the mucus from the throat, which is the direct cause of the cough, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation. The quick relief to the stubborn cough often seems almost magical.

But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original pine-tar honey and has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which make it a cough remedy that is in quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—fine for spasmodic cough. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's. Only 30c at any good drug store.

John L. Cable

Representative John L. Cable, Republican, of Ohio, introduced in the house a bill which proposes that should the house and senate fail to elect a President after a deadlock, the secretary of state would automatically become President. If anything prevented the secretary of state from assuming the Presidency, the next ranking cabinet member would take the office.

"PERFUME"
 "Perfumes," now used as luxuries, once were necessities. The word comes from the Latin words which mean "from" and "smoke." The first perfumes were derived from the combustion of aromatic woods and gums. They were used originally to counteract the odors which resulted from the burning of flesh in living sacrifice.

There is no verification yet of the report that the shouting fish found off the California coast has been signed up by a neighboring chamber of commerce.

A French general says France will pay America what she owes, but thinks the debt ought to be reduced. If France pays won't that take care of itself?

Alchemists are said to be preying on the credulous in Germany. What on earth do they sell their priceless secret for? A dime's worth of real magic?

Furthermore, cleaning up Philadelphia—or any other place—isn't the whole job. It will require quite as much energy and resourcefulness to make it stay clean.

A foreign correspondent says Europeans take a keener interest in politics than Americans. They should; in some sections practically everyone has been a cabinet officer at one time or another.

WHEN TRAGEDY STALKS

A picture—An automobile filled with happy people returning home with thoughts of a happy Christmas; a steep grade at the top of which is a railroad crossing; automobile engine chokes climbing hill and stalls on crossing; train running fast to make up lost time snuffs out the lives of four persons and fatally injures a fifth.

Another picture—A district school house packed to the doors; nearly all the bags of good things have been passed into anxious little hands; jolly Santa Claus reaches for the last one and knocks over a candle on the Christmas tree; cotton used for decorations flames up; scores rush forward to put out the fire; the tree falls and the dry cedar pops as the blaze devours the dry branches; frenzied people break out window panes and the wind-fans the flames; thirty-two dead all because of thoughtlessness.

This is not fiction but fact. The man who drove the automobile knew the train crossed the highway at the top of the steep grade and he knew the motor engines were likely to balk on cold days.

But he didn't think. The school house with played with death in the little district school knew the danger of fire was great and that lighted candles on dry Christmas trees decorated with cotton and flimsy ornaments were the tinder that might cause the tragedy which was enacted.

But he didn't think. When tragedy stalks, the principals never think. And there's the pity. Countless victims fall graves all too soon because someone failed to think.

PARENTAGE

A Chicago scientist says that the child born of older parents has a better chance of attaining distinction in the world than one born of young parents.

He asserts that his investigations covering a period of almost 50 years shows many great men were born when their parents were well along in years and that most of the morose-headed young fathers and mothers at birth.

But is it an infallible rule? For every instance that he has cited, another one could probably be found that would disprove the theory.

While parentage doubtless counts as a factor and fixed rule by which the future of boys and girls can be estimated.

There are poor boys whose parental influence was valueless and who, when they became great, forgot the struggles, the sorrows and the problems of the poor.

And there are rich boys who would be expected to inherit with their riches a kind of contempt for the poor—not bitter, yet sneering or at least patronizing, but who become great public benefactors.

To carry the contrast further—some prodigal sons become drunkards and prodigals and some duncards' sons become preachers.

Thus it goes. And what does it all prove? Nothing much perhaps except the tangle of life and the uncertainty of all rules.

A QUERY TO PARENTS

In many communities doctors and nurses are working in schools endeavoring to give your child a better chance for health than you had. They weigh and measure the children, make a physical inspection and note the parents' conditions. found. Are you, as parents, doing your part by cooperating with this health movement? Answer for yourself the following questions:

1. Are you teaching your children good health habits?
2. Are you practicing what you teach?
3. What does the school health program mean to you?
4. Do you ever visit your school?
5. Do you know the sanitary condition and equipment of the building?
6. Do you know the district superintendent, teacher, school doctor and nurse (if you have one)?
7. Do you have anything to do with the selection of your teacher or school doctor?
8. Did you employ the best one or the cheapest?
9. Did you ever see a school medical examination?
10. Have you scales in your school?
11. Is your child's weight recorded on the report each month?
12. What are you doing to keep his weight normal?
13. Do you respond promptly to the notification of physical defects found by having corrections made?
14. Do you serve a hot lunch in your school at noon?
15. Do you provide the right sort of luncheon for your child to take to school or does he fill himself with "trash"?
16. Do you include a bottle of milk in his lunch box?
17. Are you giving your children as careful attention as you are your live stock?

Easy Way to Break Severest Cough

No matter how long you have had a persistent, weakening cough—no matter how many remedies you have tried without success—you can usually get relief instantly, and often relieve the entire cough condition in 24 hours, by a very simple method. The method is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. The prompt relief which the whole cough condition disappears is often simply amazing. There is nothing better for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and almost every throat irritation. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. "A ONE HORSE TOWN"

Many smart young folks some years ago, used to refer contemptuously to their communities, as "one horse towns." The phrase is not so common in these automobile days, but it deserves attention since it represents a common state of mind. "One horse towns" have sent out a multitude of wonderful young colts, who have won the most difficult races in the world's great show. These youngsters have entered the various competitions of the business sphere, and have proved themselves faster steppers than others who seemingly had a better training. A very large part of the best work is done in one horse towns by one horse teams of people. If a person has limited opportunities, such a lack often makes him more resourceful and ingenious.

The man who used to make New Year's resolutions has a son who resolves he will hit more high places during the New Year.

PLAN YOUR GARDEN

By J. S. Gardner, College of Agriculture, Lexington

The trouble with a good many gardens is that they are too often last-minute affairs. A garden, at its best, will furnish vegetables in some form the year around, if enough space can be provided. But even where space is no object, and even in cases where the garden is actually large enough the supply of vegetables is by far too heavy in some part of the season and entirely cut off at others.

Often the fault lies with the varieties chosen. The matter of seed buying is put off until gardening weather comes, and after more provident gardeners have selected the choice varieties. What is left is sometimes quite mediocre, and the garden is an unceremonious thing.

Often the method of fertilizing is at fault. Garden crops are not all alike in the food they require, and indiscriminate top dressing with manure may result in tomatoes and potatoes with splendid tops, but no fruit to speak of, and radishes and turnips with just enough root to keep them from blowing away. Yet, in the same garden, the lettuce and onions and greens may be yellowed and small and quite disappointing.

Often the method of managing the garden is at fault. Equipment pays in gardening as in other business. But many gardeners fail to give thought to their gardening equipment until the season is upon them, and the bugs and blights descend. The only thing to do then is to fight with makeshift weapons, with the chances against the gardener and his crop.

Proper garden planning will eliminate these troubles largely. To equalize the gluts and famines, a budget should be made up, and the garden adapted to that budget. The seed requirements may be worked out, and the seed secured before favorite varieties are gone. The fertilizer requirements of the various crops should be learned before hand, and fertilizing materials to balance up the manure provided. At the same time, equipment and materials for fighting disease and insects can be leisurely and properly chosen, garden helps, as special tools, secured, and the gardener will not be caught unawares.

All this is garden planning, and this will mean the difference between a good garden and a poor one. To help Kentucky gardeners plan their gardens a budget and a plan to fit it have been worked out, and can be had by writing to the College of Agriculture, Lexington, for it.

COOLIDGE ON CO-OPERATION

President Coolidge takes decidedly advanced ground on the subject of co-operation—a position, in fact, which applies with equal force to the principle of trades unions and one that big business has persistently opposed for many years.

Discussing the subject of co-operative selling at the convention of the National Council of Farmers Co-Operative Marketing Association, he advised that "co-operation be preached as a doctrine, not as a panacea."

The supposition that Americans are not the sort of people who possess the genius for co-operation, the President dismissed as in conflict with the whole course of society. "People who indulge this kind of nonsense invariably assume that co-operation is a new and comparatively untried formula," he said. "Their whole treatment of it proves that they have not caught the idea. They have completely missed the forest because there were too many trees growing all about. They have overlooked the fact that all human society is a vast system of co-operations and co-operations. It began with the discovery that two people could together carry a heavier stone or move a bigger log than could be done by one alone. All the way down from these earliest discoveries to the Ford achievements of a motor car every 15 seconds, the material advance of the race from savages to chauffeurs has been merely the development of co-operation and the adaptation of new tools for it to use."

Some say that it requires tact to keep a cook and often times a vivid imagination is needed to call her one.

122 Acres Hill and Bottom Land

To be sold at the Court House Door in Burlington, Ky.,

Monday, February 2d, 1925

at 1 o'clock P. M.

These farms are owned by Frank V. Craig and are located in

The East Bend Bottoms of Boone County, Ky.

The 104 1/4 acre tract is all bottom land and very productive, located on pike and the Ohio River. Good brick house, good barn and other outbuildings. This is one of the best Ohio River Bottom farms in Boone County. A Government light is located on this farm which pays the owner of this farm $132.00 per year.

The 122 acre farm is located near the 104 1/4 acre tract and could be handled nicely together. This 122 acres is good productive land as well as affording splendid pasture with some timber. Two houses and two barns, crib and other outbuildings. There is a fraction over 97 acres in one tract of the hill farm and 24 3/4 acres in one tract.

It is proposed to sell each of these two tracts of the hill farm separately then as a whole, to be sold the way the 122 acres brings the most money, or a sufficient number of acres to be sold to raise the amount of money necessary to be raised.

Purchaser must be prepared to give bond for the purchase price payable in six and twelve months. Easier terms can be arranged by seeing the Peoples Deposit Bank at Burlington, Ky., in advance of the sale.

Prospective purchasers are invited to look at these farms before day of sale by calling on Mr. Frank V. Craig at the farms or the undersigned at Burlington, Ky.

Farmers in several Counties of the State have started a movement to raise tomatoes as a substitute money crop to take the place of tobacco.
A representative of a Cincinnati
Cannery was at the Farm Bureau
Headquarters in Burlington, last Thursday afternoon, where he met quite a number of the farmers and explained his proposition to induce them to sign up for the raising of tomatoes. He reported that he had already signed about 400 acres in the County. As an acre of tomatoes will bring almost as much as an acre of tobacco, it would be a good thing for the farmers of Boone County to try the tomato raising.

PUBLISHERS NOTICE

The publishers of the Boone Co.
Recorder have been contemplating
for some time the raising of the subscription rates to this paper. We did not deem it practical to make the new rates effective prior to during our present subscription campaign. We desire now to make public announcement that on the 15th day of February, 1925, the day following the close of our campaign
that the regular subscription price
of the RECORDER will be $2.00 per year. This rate is absolutely necessary on account of the increased
price of news print and other costs
incidental to the production of the paper. The RECORDER is one
among the last of the old established papers in Kentucky to raise its subscription rate. This raise will be effective during the present campaign, and according to the rules of the campaign you will be permitted to take advantage of the old rate as far in advance as 1931, but the new rate will positively take effect

CUT-OUT ON AND GROWINGSTROKER

The cut-out board of directors wish to commend the disposition as shown by the farmer to care for the interests of their tobacco tenants during the year 1925.
Delegates from five states on November 15th last, adopted a resolution pledging their counties to eliminate the 1925 crop of Burley tobacco. The cut-out has been decided on and its effect since that date. For the benefit of a few growers who still ask, "How is the cut-out coming out?" the cutboard of directors wishes to say plainly, "That it is not coming on at all, that it is all over with."
It is the wish of this organization that every Burley tobacco grower fully understand that next year's crop is to be eliminated in accordance with the pledges made by the delegates at the interstate convention.

The reasons for eliminating are, at this time, more generally understood than ever before. President Coolidge himself, said a few days ago, that the government is willing to lend all possible aid to the farmers, but the farmers themselves must bear the lion's share. The government, the bankers, no one, can do much for us when we have ourselves created a surplus of tobacco, and it is the growers themselves who must take necessary steps to see that this surplus is reduced before we can hope to stabilize the price for our product.

We cannot ever hope to cram 400 million pounds of tobacco into a hole that will only hold 200 million, any more than we can expect to put a quart of water into a bottle which will only hold a pint. We, as tobacco growers, have the key to unlock the door to our troubles. Let us use it.

CUT LAND TAX IN TIMBER CRISIS

LOUISIANA'S LEGISLATIVE ACTION RECEIVES BIG INCENTIVE FOR REFORESTATION

Similar Measure Suggested for Kentucky—President of Hardwood Company Sees Early Advance in Retail Price of Hardwood, Due to Increased Demand For 1925.

Louisville—Abolition of taxes on all lands in Kentucky where reforestation is under way as a solution for the timber crisis illness that is facing the state, was advocated by C. H. Sherrill, president of the Sherrill Hardwood Lumber Company, which owns 35,000 acres of hardwood timber land near Merryville, La.

Mr. Sherrill pointed out that reforestation would be carried out only on lands that as a rule will not produce sufficient crops to pay for their cultivation.

Mr. Sherrill sees an early advance in the retail price of all hardwood merchandise due to the sudden demand that has hit the industry thru the 1925 prosperity prospect route.

An old saw in retail prices of from 10 to 20 per cent is predicted, he said.

"Manufacturers of automobiles, musical instruments and furniture dealers are drawing heavily on the whole-sale lumber dealers," Mr. Sherrill said. "The reserve supply is only normal, with the rainy season at hand."

"Altogether I have never seen a brighter prospect for business in general than is witnessed now."

Mr. Sherrill was organizer and first president of the Hardwood Manufacturing Institute, which is now headed by E. B. Norman, of Louisville. Mr. Sherrill is also president of the Sherrill-Russell Lumber Company, of Paducah, Ky.

In discussing the reforestation idea, he pointed out that two of the South's largest lumber firms have taken up the plan purely from a business standpoint.

"Freeing the land of taxes by the Louisiana Legislature received a big incentive for the reforestation movement," Mr. Sherrill said. "The hardwood companies have never taken up the idea because it would take from 100 to 150 years for the trees to grow to a size that would be of any use."

He pointed out that in this length of time there might be an invention to take the place of hardwood.

Crittenden Has Woman Candidate.

Marion—For the first time in more than twenty-five years Crittenden County has a woman candidate. Twenty-five years ago Miss Mina Wheeler was elected county school superintendent.

From that day until this, however, no woman had undertaken to win an election in this county.

Miss Leaffa Wilborn, for sixteen years deputy county clerk here and for many years county treasurer, has announced as a candidate for the office of county clerk, subject to the action of the Republican primary in August. Miss Wilborn, who is very popular in all sections of the county, has many friends, both men and women, who are glad to see her in the race which is regarded as one of the most important in this county.

Cock Fight Investigation

Frankfort—Gov. W. J. Fields has requested Herbert Moore, county attorney of Boone County, to make a thorough investigation of the cock fight held last week in Clark County. Tunic Blouse Leans Toward Flaring Lines

In the realm of blouse fashions the attention of designers is centered on tunics and overblouses. The tunic blouse shows a decided leaning toward lines that are less straight and severe than those that have prevailed this season, and the overblouse is taking on a little additional length. By means of slashed seams, godets and frills at the bottom, the tunic blouse is widened below the knees. It also appears with set-on panels as in the blouse of black satin pictured with six panels faced with brocaded velvet, which covers three of the panels and partially covers the alternate ones. A few tucks at each side give a little definition to the waistline.

The above is the comparative standing of the candidates up to Saturday night Jan. 24th, candidates under the rules of the campaign being allowed to withhold a part of the votes that have been issued to them on subscription payments.

Two weeks from next Saturday night the most exciting and interesting race ever staged in Boone county will come to a close. Only fifteen more working days remain. The time is short and it is now up to candidates to get a lead and hold it if they want to drive away that Essex Coach as their Valentine.

Miss Cecile Brown, the popular operator at the Walton Telephone Exchange, is taking her spin at the wheel this week. Miss Cecile has worked hard for a place of honor in this campaign and we are going to take our hat off to her for the effective work she has been doing. She is carrying her campaign into other counties and the success with which she is meeting is marvelous and most pleasing to the management of the campaign.

There are many of the contestants right up at the top of the list. The difference in their standing is of small consequence. A day's hard work would make a great difference in the standing of any one of those at or near the top of the list.

All sections of the county are now more or less interested in the outcome of this race. In fact there is not a spot left in Boone county where you will not find an enthusiastic booster for one of the candidates. Day by day the race gets warmer. Who will win the Essex Coach is a burning question and will soon be decided by the votes of the subscribers of the Recorder.

This is the closest race thus far that the Recorder Club Manager has ever experienced in the conducting of circulation drives.

EXTENSION SUBSCRIPTIONS

Last Monday morning the second period began. Workers are now giving their time and attention to EXTENSION SUBSCRIPTIONS. This is a most important announcement. Read it carefully. A subscription extended by a subscriber who has given on a subscription in the first period is called an Extension subscription. For instance if you get a subscription from a subscriber who has paid a subscription in the first period you will be entitled to take credit for a two-year subscription. In other words add the number of years one extends his subscription to the one he has already paid then take credit for the full number of years. EXTENSIONS WILL COUNT UP FASTER THAN ANY SUBSCRIPTIONS YOU CAN GET. Go back to your friends and show them how they can really help you now and they will be glad to EXTEND THEIR SUBSCRIPTIONS. When you write an extension please designate same on report sheet by marking extensions, from so many years to so many years more. A subscription given in the first period for one year and was extended for two years making a three-year subscription in all, could earn 10,001 votes plus the Club Vote. Be sure and do not take credit for an extension unless you are sure of same.

as these extensions will be checked from the original reports, and when correct proper credit will be given. Fill out the votes on your report sheets and run up the total count yourself.

HONOR ROLL

During the second period from Jan. 26th to Feb. 7th the Honor Roll will be established and the following offer will be effective.

For the best cash daily report, a certificate good for 10,000 extra votes will be issued.

For the best Daily Report on Extensions of subscriptions, a certificate good for 10,000 extra votes will be issued.

It will be possible for a contestant to win both these extra certificates in one day.

A large blackboard will be found in front of Blythes Store, Burlington, and upon this board will appear the name of the contestant who is entitled to being placed on the honor roll for the best reports turned in the day previous. Those winning a place on the honor roll will be announced in the Recorder each week. Contestants should by all means make an effort to get on the Honor Roll. This will show to your friends that you are working.

DUST FROM THE TRACK

By the Club Manager.

"My money goes on the blondes," says a race track enthusiast. Called, says the backers of the brunettes.

Yes sir, the farther they run the faster they go.

Lee McNeely is having more fun than any man in Boone county right now. You see Lee is travelling in fast company, and the funny thing about it all he has most of the good looking women looking right square at his heels. It won't do for Lee to face any of the women in this race. You can't win an Essex that way.

Mrs. Thomas Hensley did not like her picture that we reproduced in the Recorder last week. Mrs. Hensley claims that she is whole lot better looking than that picture and so far we haven't heard her word disputed. In fact we thought so much at the time, anyhow the picture did not hurt her race for she landed a big bunch of subscriptions after the paper came out.

Mrs. Alberta Kelly Stevens, the undisputed long distance racer is holding her record right up to the minute. You see she has been running right from the beginning, and if some of them don't watch out she will get to take her rest while riding in the Essex coach after the race is over.

Mrs. George Kottmyer who was at the top of the list last week is deserving of a larger territory than she commands in this race. Mrs. Kottmyer is a racer of real ability and will be entitled to much consideration for the efforts that she has put forth, regardless of where she may land in the final count.

Miss Cecile Brown is certainly doing double duty in her race for the grand capital prize. Besides working twenty-four hours a day for the Recorder she finds time enough to hold down her shift at the boards in the Walton exchange. Cecile Brown is one of the wonder girls in this race.

Miss Francis V. Berkshire has changed horses and is now stepping right out to the front. By many Miss Frances is regarded as the prettiest girl in our race. The Campaign Manager does not dare say this even though he believed it. However we feel justified in repeating what we have heard others say.

Mrs. Eva Kilgour's ability as a racer cannot be over estimated. She never gets in a hurry, never slows down and never fails to bring in a nice big fat report. She possesses real race winning ability and so she will have to make long steps to pass this lady in the home stretch.

Miss Georgia Burns is still in the ring with bells on. She is a stick and never thinks of giving up. Georgia would have fared much better had it not been for the fact that her mother was physically unable to help her in the campaign. Anyhow, Georgia will be there at the last count.

Mrs. Lee Ayloer will probably not see a prize but she will always be known as one of the "also-rans." She should have tried a little harder and then she wouldn't have been outdistanced so far.

Elmo Jergens, a likely colt, will not make a track record in this campaign. He was too young for the rest of the bunch, but the experience gained may help this young fellow sometime in the future.

Mrs. Keene Souther is still in line for a prize. She goes right on with out looking back and we believe she is going to score one of the prizes regardless of the fact that she did not get very far from her home in her work for the Recorder.

Miss Fannie Lois Cotton doesn't know which she had rather win, the Radio or the Essex. Well Fannie Lois one is going to be just as hard to win as the other, but if you win the Essex and don't want it we will see that you get a Radio outfit and we'll take the coach, provided you don't change your mind.

Mrs. Lucy Garrison has never faltered in her quest for subscriptions to the Recorder. Lucy believed she could sell the Recorder and now she knows it. And she wants the Essex Coach, and if the others are willing she will take it right now and stop the race. We don't believe that this arrangement can be made, right now, Lucy.

The Kentucky Belle, Mrs. Dell Goodridge Collins, is a decided favorite in some quarters and it seems that she manages to find just where her candidacy is the strongest for she comes to the front with another big bunch of subscriptions for the close of the high vote period.

Mrs. Alma Glacken, whom we presented to our readers last week as the blushing bride, has gotten over her timidity and is still going a rapid gallop right down the line for the home stretch. Alma is a racer of the stick-to-it kind.

Albert Willis the rider of that beautiful horse, Tricky, is gaining speed rapidly. Albert encountered one of the Recorder's oldest subscribers last week in his rounds for subscription. "Hey there!" Albert beckoned to a prospect. "I am in the Recorder race for the Essex Coach and want your subscription. 'Akrish' was the prompt reply, Albert further inquired are you a subscriber to the Recorder?" "Yes sir" he said. "How long have you been taking it?" "Albert came back." "Ever since you have been talking to me" replied the prospect. Albert handed him a receipt for three years. That is what we call picking the grapes.

The Eclipse

FRANK WILSON

A Former Well Known Boone County Citizen Passes Away.

Son of Richard J. and Eliza (Donitt) Wilson, was born near Burlington, Ky., Nov. 27, 1882, died Jan. 15, 1925, at the Good Samaritan Hospital, Cin., O., of a wound received at the Addison Pipe Foundry.

The funeral was held at the Methodist Church in Addyston, Sunday the 18. He was a member of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. The sermon was preached by a minister of that faith, from Eccl. 7:12, after which the K. K. K. took charge at the church and the Junior Order of American Mechanics at the grave. In cremation at Cleves cemetery.

He leaves to mourn his untimely death his aged mother, two brothers, Seymour and William, two sisters, Sarah Subree and Arlie Schaefer, and seven children. His wife was Mrs. Bessie Wilson. He died about two years ago. His character was attested by about 1000 witnesses at his funeral.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE CO.

By A. M. Yeasley.

About the year 1725 there resided near Montreal, Canada, a French family by the name of Longueuil. This family consisted of a father, mother, and six boys. The father had held important positions in the army in France before emigrating to Canada and consequently during the wars between France and England he was entrusted to help carry on the military operations against the English in the Ohio Valley and by taking an active part, father and sons became well acquainted with the territory between the great lakes and the Ohio River.

"We should know during the period 1680 to 1739 France claimed the Ohio and Mississippi Valley as far south as Louisiana." During the year 1739 the Chickasaw Indians were causing the French considerable trouble by attacking their settlements which were located in the western part of Tennessee. The French Governor of Canada, M. Longueuil the third son of the above family to stop the raids on the French settlements in that region, on his way down the Ohio River he came to the little stream now known as Big Boone Creek ascending this stream he discovered Big Bone Lick 1739.

Therefore, being the first white visitor to see his foot on Boone County soil. After completing his journey, and being defeated by the Chickasaw Indians he returned to Canada and in his report to the Governor he mentioned what he saw at Big Bone Lick. And from 1739 to 1763 it became a stopping place for the French explorer.

"To be continued in the next issue."

By R. J. Matson, Co. Agent.

SELL JERSEYS

During the past two weeks 10 Pure bred Jerseys have been sold to go out of Boone County. Two go to Maineville, Ohio, ten to La Grange, six to Trimble County for Boys and Girls Club work and one to Boyle County. These cattle ranged from a ten week old calf to a five year old cow. One yearling bull went in the lot.

C. P. Kinsey of Hopeful made the largest sale of twelve head. L. T. Clore and son sold two, J. Scott and Sons sold two, and Dr. Ryle of Walton, three.

This lot of pure bred cattle brought $2,005, which shows that there is still a demand for good stuff and that it is more profitable than grades or scrubs. It does not cost any more to raise a pure-bred than it does a scrub.

OFFICIAL TEST

Two Boone county names appear on the honor roll of the state cow testing association for the month of December. There were 71 Jersey cows on test, that month and three were owned by local breeders.

Volunteer's Vida, a six year old cow, owned by Hubert Ryle and Son of Grant, stood second among this number with 88.2 pounds of milk and 4.88 pounds of fat in two days. Holly Dewdrop, a cow owned by Harry Harkle, stood high in the list with 489 pounds. Regis Leoni Gold, owned by O. C. Haff of Hebron, stood third with 71.8 pounds of milk and 4.602 pounds of fat. Exiles Viola, owned by Hubert Ryle and Son stood eleventh with 57 pounds of milk and 3.575 of fat.

These are some real good records that our breeders can well be proud of.

COMMUNITY PROGRAMS

The new movie machine which was demonstrated at the six community meetings held at Verona, Hebron, Union, Florence, Grant and Petersburg created quite an interesting feature of the program. An average of over 125 people turned out to the meetings which assured quite a bit of interest. One reel of the movie shown dealt with the Value of Limestone to the Soil, another showed Niagara Falls from every angle and gave a good story of its history and usefulness and was followed by two reels of good comedy.

The movies should be of great educational value to the boys and girls of the communities in which they were shown, as well as the parents.

EGG LAYING CONTEST

Mrs. B. E. Ayler's White Leghorn pullets which she entered in the Murphysboro contest are holding their own although one of the best pullets died.

The five pullets have laid 171 eggs during the first two months or an average 17.5 eggs per hen which is very good. They now stand in second place in the contest.

TOMATO MEETING

There will be a tomato growers meeting at the Burlington Farm Bureau Office on Monday, Feb. 2nd, at 2 o'clock. C. A. Wueck, Field man for the Lippincott Co. will be present to discuss the growing of tomatoes in this locality. He will tell you some things about the amounts and kinds of fertilizers, methods of growing and control of diseases and insects.

These things will be of importance to all who are thinking of growing any amount of tomatoes. Mr. Wueck has been working as a field man in Indiana for several years and knows many things about tomato growing.

Every farmer planning to grow tomatoes should attend this meeting and get some information that will be valuable to him a little later in the season.

ALFALFA

Alfalfa is a very valuable crop. Why not sow more this spring and reduce feed costs?

The tobacco grower raises a few acres of tobacco and but little else. When this crop of tobacco is marketed then come the necessities for man and beast, and they must be bought with the money this little crop brings in. Now, in all sincerity, this certainly looks like a big piece of foolishness. Work twelve months in a little crop in order to buy corn, oats, wheat, potatoes, hay, cabbage, etc., the very things every farmer ought to produce. Back a few years one never heard of a farmer buying his cabbage, potatoes, etc., why should he do so now?

Falmouth Outlook

Next Tuesday, Feb. 3, is Candlemas Day, the day on which Mr. T. H. Harg will let you know what kind of weather we are to have for the next six weeks.

Our 1920 taxes were $54 per head. 1925's should be $77. Mellon says "For this relief much thanks," but make it uniform.

A GREAT PLEASURE.

January 16, 1925

Mrs. Thomas Hensley, Burlington, Kentucky.
My dear Mrs. Hensley:
It is a pleasure to give you the benefit of my personal to the Recorder. I hope you were as prompt in soliciting other out-of-the-county subscribers, as a day or two later, I also received a request from your Burlington competitor.

Your letter started me to reminiscing. I have wondered, "Who is Mrs. Thomas Hensley, and is she the wife of him with the wavy hair who used to sit in the corner of the old Lexington school house and so gracefully dodge my paper words?" If so, please give my sincerest regards to Tom. I should be delighted to hear what has taken place since those days.

I congratulate you on your success thus far and hope very much that you head the list at the close of the campaign.

Very cordially,
H. DeCoursey Adams.

NOT FORGOTTEN

In Memory of W. H. Rice.

Contributed by his niece.

W. H. Rice passes away after a long illness of pneumonia at his daughter's home in Erlanger. He was born September 27th, 1840, and died November 24th, 1924. In October, 1862, he united in marriage with Sarah Jane Ayler, who departed this life several years ago. He leaves one son, Robert P. Rice, one daughter, Mrs. Effie Snyder, two grand children, Miss Sadie Lee Snyder, and James R. Rice, four great grand children and a host of friends.

He united with the Florence Christian Church when 20 years of age and was a faithful member until death. Uncle Will was an excellent citizen and neighbor. He was a farmer and for several years lived near Gunpowder, owning one of the best farms in the county, and in later years moved to Florence and retired. He was President of the Florence Deposit Bank until he became too aged to serve, when he moved to Erlanger and spent the remainder of his life with his daughter. He was a kind and loving father, husband and grandfather, and owing to his kind and loving disposition it was a pleasure to be with him and to talk to him, as he wore a smile for everyone. Owing to his beautiful christian spirit, his life being as pure and sweet as the sweetest flower, tender hearts are filled with never fading memories of the departed loved one, while to the church and Sunday school his gracious presence is missed. There his steadfast uprightness made an impression for good that can never be erased, and his memory will ever be cherished in loving remembrance. Although talented and ambitious he never forgot that life is only a pilgrimage, and when the call came he was found ready.

"He then faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown."

THE KIND OF MONUMENT THAT LASTS

Mrs. Kate K. Riley, who, together with her husband, the late L. L. Riley, established and endowed the Jas. L. and Kate K. Riley Memorial Scholarship some time ago, died at her home in Ludlow, Kentucky, December 30. These friends have built a monument which will endure the life of this College and be cherished in the lives of men and women.

—Transylvania College Bulletin

John W. Ward, 74 years old, a former well known Petersburg citizen, died at his home in Covington Wednesday, Jan. 21st. He is survived by his widow, who was a Miss Spaul before her marriage, and seven children. Funeral services were conducted at the home Thursday afternoon. Burial at Highland Cemetery. He worked at the Coopers trade at the old Fryburg and Workum distillery at Petersburg many years ago.

A few days since one of the town's splendid ladies who is of marriageable age, informs the RECORDER representative that she had launched out on the bymenial voyage, a journey that leads through all the thrills and glories of this life, and that we need not be surprised if we heard of another wedding soon. Miss is a splendid lady who has the best wishes of the entire community. As the voyage extends may the richest blessings become her heritage and life's path way a bower of roses.

A card was received from Rev. Sam W. Allen and his wife, who were in the city of Dania, Fla., this winter. The people of Burlington and surrounding territory will not soon forget the Allen's, as they have conducted two of the most inspiring revivals ever held in this town.

SECOND PERIOD OPENS WITH A RUSH

Extension Subscriptions Now Have Greatest Vote Building Power.

Contestants please bear in mind that the Second Period spells success or failure for all contestants in the Recorder Circulation Campaign. The importance of EXTENSION SUBSCRIPTIONS as announced on first page of this week's paper will not be overlooked by a real contender for the Essex Coach. The value of these EXTENSIONS cannot be stated too plainly and every candidate is strongly urged to write every EXTENSION that they can during the remaining few days of this exciting campaign. Just one EXTENSION SUBSCRIPTION may register the difference between the Essex Coach and one of the smaller prizes. Explain this Extension feature to your friends who have given a subscription before---explain the tremendous voting power of EXTENSIONS--get them to extend another year at least--better still insist on the limit and in this manner save the subscriber 50c per year on their subscriptions written during this campaign. Work EX-TENSIONS strongly-it will pay you handsome dividends. Second Vote period ends Saturday night, Feby. 7th. During the last period the vote schedule will go down. No extension, no bonus, no special offers just the vote schedule as listed on the back of your receipt books that's all. This is final. Score all the points you can during the Extension Period. Contest closes two weeks from next Saturday night. The time is growing short. Now is the time to get in the lead. Be patient, work hard and success is bound to crown your efforts.

THE ISLE OF PINES

The Isle of Pines, located about 80 miles south of Cuba, is about the size of Rhode Island. It has a population of 4,250 people of whom 700 are Americans. For twenty-one years Congress has struggled with the problem of whether the island belongs to Cuba or to the United States, and now the question is again before the Senate.

American citizens own 90 per cent of the land, purchased on the understanding that the Pines would be annexed to the United States as a sister colony to Porto Rico, under the written agreement made by Spain at the close of the Spanish war.

In 1898, John Hay, as secretary of State, opposed the annexation of the island, because he has repeatedly asserted that the war with Spain was in no sense a war of conquest, regardless of the written record and United from Spain. When Cuba was set free he relinquished all claim to the Isle of Pines, asserting that it belonged to Cuba. The Senate of the United States ratified only part of this treaty and ever since that time the matter has been unsettled. President Roosevelt authorized Elihu Root, then Secretary of War, to untangle the diplomatic knot, and he held that the United States had no substantial claim to the island. Manville Cuba believes it will come to them sometime and are at present governing the island.

Senator Borah declares that the island belongs to us, and to relinquish the title now would do a great injustice to the Americans who have developed it as a fruit land. So, once more the 20-year-old controversy before the Senate, and like the Muscle Shoals situation, may be disposed of some way to get rid of it.

COCK FIGHT FANS MAY DODGE TRIAL

MANY PLAN TO PLEAD GUILTY OF ATTENDING COCK FIGHT HELD IN CLARK.

Mr. Sterling—Many of the 200 persons summoned to appear in the investigation of the cock fight held on the Harry B. Clay farm, nine miles from Winchester, in Paris-Winchester Pike, will plead guilty to County Attorney H. H. Moore of Clark County rather than go through a trial. It has been learned here reliably. Mr. Moore was instructed to investigate the cock fight by Gov. William J. Fields.

A dispatch from Paris told of the wild fight of some of the participants and declared the second day's fight was called off.

No Court, Report.

It is unlikely the court of inquiry will be held in Winchester, it was stated here. It is believed about 450 persons were present. Automobile license plates showed the audience from at least nine States.

The information of the main went even to Governor Fields, who said he had heard the fight would be held in Bourbon County and had instructed the County Attorney of that county to take steps to prevent this violation of the law.

Calls for Inquiry.

The County Attorney of Bourbon reported to the Governor that he had investigated and found the fight was to be held in Clark. His information reached the Governor too late for him to notify the Clark officials.

50,000,000 Pounds 1924 Weed Sold.

Lexington—The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, through its vice president, Theodore H. Kirk, purchased 50,000,000 pounds of the 1924 crop of burley tobacco from the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association at association prices, according to an announcement made by James C. Stone, president and sales manager of the Burley Co-operative, who represented the association in the deal. In December the Reynolds Company purchased 50,000,000 pounds of tobacco from the Burley co-operative, including its holdings of the 1922 crop, amounting to approximately 17,000,000 pounds; ready for manufacture, the remainder being taken from the re-dried crop of 1922.

250 Pound Man Overbalances Car.

Taylorville—Thomas E. Tipton, 50 years old, farmer and stock raiser, was crushed to death beneath an overturned automobile on the Taylorville Road, three and a half miles east of Jeffersonville, while the driver of the motor tried vainly to extricate himself and so save Tipton. The two men were returning to their home near Taylorville in a small roadster when the driver, John W. Snyder, 56 years old, a farmer, steered too near the right edge of the newly built road in rounding a curve. Tipton, who weighs about 250 pounds, was seated on the right side of the car. He was thrown overboard, causing it to go over the brink into a five-foot ditch, pinning both men.

Ashland Mayor Attacks Pastor.

Ashland—The Ashland City Council unanimously passed resolutions condemning Mayor William Salsbury for his alleged "wantonly malicious and untruthful attack" on the Rev. E. R. Overly, pastor of the First Methodist Church, whom the Mayor haled into the Police Court for interrogation in his enforcement. The Council declared the Mayor's action was not "decent" and it warned Mr. Salsbury to desist from such practices.

Vigilance Band Organized.

Harrodsburg—Residents of McAfee and Talmadge, neighboring communities four miles from here, met and organized a vigilance band for the purpose of suppressing thievery and other law enforcement. The Council declared the Mayor's action was not "decent" and it warned Mr. Salsbury to desist from such practices.

K. K. K. Stages Spectacle.

Marion—The first Ku Klux Klan demonstration in this county was held here on the Judge J. W. Flynn farm, just north of the city limits, near the new Paducah-Evansville pike. The first indication which the populace had of an exhibition was when two heavy blasts of dynamite were exploded in the Flynn field and a moment later a huge "fiery cross" was seen to burst into full flame. Perhaps a hundred men and women from the town attended.

Dispute Telephone Rates.

Owensboro—The city commissioners have informed the officials of the Central Kentucky Telephone Company that they will not agree to allowing telephone charges under a unified system of more than $3 for residence phones and $6 for business houses. The officials of the telephone company threaten to take the matter to Federal Court, claiming they will be entitled to a rate of $2.25 for residences and $4 for business houses under the expansion they propose to make in Owensboro combining the two systems.

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone County, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RE-
CORDER

THERE IS MUCH waiting and CHANGES IN THE personnel of the Government has taken place with such rapidity of recent date that the observer is reminded of nothing less than a change of administration, when cabinet officers drop off like apple blossoms and it keeps one busy to remember just who is who. It all started with the retirement of McKenna from the Supreme Court. This took some from the Department of Justice to fill the judicial vacancy, leaving a Cabinet hole to be occupied by Charles Beecher Warren, former Ambassador to Japan and Mexico. Then, like a bolt out of a clear sky came the announcement of the resignation of Secretary Hughes, the recall of Ambassador Kellogg from London to become Secretary of State, the transfer of Ambassador Houghton from Berlin to London and the resignation of Bacon Slemmons the President's secretary. This vacancy to be filled on March 4 by Congressman Sanders of Indiana, who, but for the objections of Senator Watson of Indiana, would now be the Vice-President elected in place of Dawes.

THESE ARE ONLY a part of the important changes which are expected to occur before March, when President Coolidge will formally begin elective term as already that he is now engaged in making over the personnel of the administration to suit himself, still diverting himself of officials left over from the Harding regime. Some of these officials, of course, will remain, but the President is making an effort to gather around him an official family from which harmonious work and constructive achievements may come during the next four years. Instead of making all these changes abruptly after he takes the oath of office in March, the President is announcing his intention piecemeal, thus giving the country time to understand what is going on here in Washington, besides giving the newly designated officials an opportunity to learn something of their new jobs.

THE MOST SURPRISING of all been that of Ambassador Kellogg as Secretary of State. Kellogg first came into prominence during the Roosevelt administration when, as an United States Attorney in Minnesota, he prosecuted some of the big trusts which in the Senate he was known—behind his back—as "nervous Nellie," probably because his extreme excitability and his inclination to remain in a state of indecision on important public questions. It is known here that Kellogg was about to retire as Ambassador when Coolidge decided to bring him back here as Secretary of Foreign Affairs. In view of this feeling that Kellogg, in comparison with Hughes, will be "weak" Secretary of State, there have arisen reports that the President henceforth intends to run the Nation's foreign relations himself and that Kellogg will merely sit in the State Department to hold up the social end of the Government in its relations with the foreign envoys stationed here.

THE OUTSTANDING event internationally of the week has been the breaking down of the aloofness of the United States with regard to European politics through the agreement concluded in Paris for the operation of the Dawes plan. Under this agreement, the United States will receive a percentage of the reparations payments made Germany and is bound, in the view of European statesmen, to assist in any effort, armed or otherwise, to compel Germany to pay in the event that nation breaks down economically and defaults. Secretary Hughes holds that the Paris agreement is not a treaty and does not require ratification by the Senate, but strenuous objections at the Capitol to that point of view would not be surprising.

A TOMB OF PINK Minnesota Limestone has been built for the remains of Woodrow Wilson in the National Cathedral at Mt. St. Albans. It is the plan of the Episcopal Church, which built the Cathedral, to make it an American Westminster Abbey, where the nation's leading citizens may lie for all time. Wilson is the first to be interred there, although a stonemason working on the Cathedral tried to conceal his wife's body in the foundation while the building was under construction.

THE CHIEF OF the Washington Fire Department has started an investigation to find out where his smoke-smokers are getting so much liquor. Two of them have been arrested for drunkenness in the past week—one while on duty at a fire which wrecked a big department store, while the other, driving a fire engine, ran into a parked car.

BIG BUSINESS HAS "FREE HAND."

Indications are that private enterprise will now have a free and open hand, and we are promised great industrial expansion. While this will be welcomed, it also carries with it certain responsibilities of power that heretofore have been abused to such an extent that Federal interference became a necessity. Industrial students and writers have sounded many warnings to which the New York Times adds: "If the country finds the limiting of the functions of the General Government means the creation of haughty and greedy corporations, defiantly asserting that they may do what they will with their own, the swing back to rigid Government control will be rapid and remorseless."

This "free hand" also means that the states will have new and increased responsibilities. They will be compelled to do the work they are not willing to let the Federal authorities assume, and then will be called upon to set their own houses in order.

The movement against centralization by the government should not be construed to mean in favor of centralization of industry alone.

The new movement promises certain results, but the dangers involved must be kept constantly in mind.

COLLEGE GIRLS ARE GOOD HOUSE-KEEPERS

Five home economics students in the College of Agriculture have just completed a term of residence in a "practice house," where they demonstrated the practicability of their classroom teachings. In a house leased by the college, they lived for eight weeks at an average cost of $1 each per day, only 50 cents of which was for food. They are Mary Elizabeth Atkins, Louisville; Mary Lucile Dalbier, Lexington; Dayle Ganser, Providence; Mary Lee Taylor, Owensboro, and Virginia Newman, Lexington.

The girls did the house work, including cooking, cleaning, washing and other tasks. With the exception of house rent, they paid all bills at a cost of $1 per day each, including the cost of food, heat, light, water, gas, electricity, telephone and incidental expenses.

They took turns serving as manager of the house, cook, dining room girl, and general house girl. Each had prescribed duties, laid down by Miss Marie Hopkins, head of the home economics department, and Miss Minnie M. Kennedy, supervising instructor in charge of the practice house.

The practice house course rounds out the work which girls do in home economics. Miss Hopkins said, and determines whether they can use the knowledge obtained in classrooms. It also tends to promote orderly living, industry and economy. While at the house the girls work in a business-like manner. Meals and work are planned so as to economize on cost and time. Rations are balanced, so that in spite of the low cost, some of the girls gained in weight.

The girls keep household accounts, shop carefully, check grocery bills, study market prices and food values, and practice all the separate methods of housekeeping. Spending only 50 cents per day per person for food requires care in its purchase and preparation. Miss Hopkins emphasized.

While living costs go up, stock boom and melons are being cut, about 90 per cent of the people of this country are wondering if the volume of trade increase warrants steady employment, and commensurate wages? There certainly is no boom in industry as yet, and the prospect of an increased foreign trade is rather remote. The larger bank clearings appear to be due chiefly to stock speculations. Many conservative financial authorities are sounding emphatic warnings that the air is full of bubbles.

The BULL'S EYEEditor and General Manager
WILL ROGERS

Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star, and leading American humorist, announces a series of "Bull" Durham advertisements. They are worth waiting for.

If you want the real truth about why I signed up to write a lot of pieces for these people, it's because I love animals. Have you ever studied that picture of the "Bull" carefully? . . . have you ever seen such a kind-looking animal? I thought this:—certainly no one who cares as much about dumb creatures as they do would put out anything but the best smoking tobacco possible—so I said all right, I'll write your stuff. Honestly, the money part of it didn't have much to do with it. That is, not very much.

Seriously, though, out where I come from, unless a male member of the population has got that "Bull" Durham from the shirt pocket, he's liable to be arrested for indecent exposure. And, you believe me, you can't sell those western hard-boiled eggs much and keep on selling them unless it's got class.

Will Rogers

P. S. I'm going to write some more pieces that will appear in this paper. Keep looking for them.

TWO BAGS for 15 cents

(To the tune of Betsy and I are out.)
 (Mix up them papers, Lawyer
 Make 'em good and stout
 For we are with the majority
 And they say "cut-er-out.") Because I reasoned with Betsy
 And Betsy has reasoned with me
 And after reasoning together
 On a cut-out we agree.
 You know them Big 4 fellers
 And how they want us to grow
 And the prices they're goin' to give us
 Don't always make it so.
 Then again them city fellers
 Are inclined a little slicker
 And by buyin' the 50,000,000 lately
 They think they'll "turn-the-trick"
 But by "cutting" the 25 crop of burley
 With all we still have on hand
 It will tend to make it scarcer
 And 'twill create a better demand.

Queen Incubators and Brooders

High Percentage Hatch With The QUEEN INCUBATOR.

Everyone wants big hatches, and the QUEEN will deliver them. Hatched being wonderfully well constructed, in the way of materials and workmanship, the QUEEN embodies the most scientific principles of artificial incubation.

The QUEEN is doubly insulated. First there are double walls of California redwood forming a dead-air space. Second, corrugated strawboard is used between the wooden walls. Proper insulation adds considerable expense to the manufacturing cost, but it is an absolute requirement of a good incubator.

The QUEEN is the only incubator that carries out the double redwood wall construction all around, and provides a double wall front in the way of two separate doors. The outer door is a solid panel of redwood that is hinged entirely independent of the inner door, and is fastened with a snap lock that draws it tight, thus making the loss of heat impossible.

The inner door is also of redwood construction, containing a panel of glass the full length and height of the egg chamber.

QUEEN BROODERS ARE GOOD STEPMOTHERS.

They are designed to raise the chicks in all kinds of weather at any time of the year with complete protection day and night. The heating system gives an abundance of heat, distributed properly, while plenty of fresh air is provided automatically without draught.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Fifty-two calves fed by members of boys' and girls' clubs in Garrard county last year, sold for an average of $100 at the recent Fat Stock Show in Louisville, according to County Agent C. E. Houk. Making full allowance for feed and the original cost of the calves, the average profit was $55.

More and better poultry and larger acreage of legumes, especially soybeans, hold the center of interest among Magoffin county farmers this winter. County Agent L. F. Morgan reports. Several farmers are building new poultry houses, and many plan to sow soybeans next spring. A recent meeting at Sandyville was attended by nearly 600 farmers interested in poultry raising, live stock and fruit growing.

The Madisonville Ad. Club is co-operating with County Agent W. D. Sutton in promoting better live stock in Hopkins county. Purebred animals are given away as premiums on trade days. Much interest has been aroused among farmers, especially in sheep raising and dairymaking.

A recent corn, fruit and poultry show drew a large attendance at Corbin, Ky. County Agent Earl Mayhew, of Knox county, reports. There is much interest in fruit growing and poultry raising in the county. Several new orchards have been laid out and many farmers report good profits from poultry.

A southern Kentucky county agent, in his summer report to the College of Agriculture, says, in part: "A representative of a creamery machinery manufacturing company appeared in the county during the month, and, as a guest of a local luncheon club, suggested the proposition in which he was interested. The matter was then presented to the Chamber of Commerce. At the request of the county agent, J. O. Barkman, of the dairy division of the College of Agriculture, was called to the county. It also was decided to send a committee into Tennessee to investigate creamery operations. When this committee returned and reported, it was evident that the College of Agriculture has saved the public-spirited citizens of the community about $10,000 by preventing them from investing in a proposition which could not succeed in the community, due to the lack of a sufficient number of cows."

PAYS TO SELECT BREEDING FLOCK

Records gathered from demonstration flocks owned by farmers throughout the state co-operating with the College of Agriculture show conclusively that it pays to select a breeding pen to produce hatching eggs, according to James E. Humphrey, extension poultryman for the college.

One point emphasized by demonstration flock records is that it is better to use hens than pullets for breeding purposes. Mr. Humphrey said. Early hatched pullets usually come into production in November, if grown out properly, and when the breeding season arrives they have been laying heavily, and have exhausted their vigor and vitality, which often results in low fertility and weak chicks.

Mr. Humphrey advises the selection of hens that molted in October or November, as they have had an opportunity to rest at the right time to be most beneficial to them as breeders. He suggests other rules as follows:

Reject as breeders all birds with standard disqualifications, such as stubs (little feathers) on the shanks or toes; or single-comb varieties with side sprigs, also single-comb birds in the rose-comb varieties, as is often found among Wyandottes. All birds "off" in color should be rejected.

After culling for breed characteristics, vigor and vitality are the main points to consider. These are shown by depth of body, especially at the front and rear of the breast bone. The body should be "slab-sided" rather than round. The head should be broad, deep and rather short. Crow-headed birds should not be used as breeders.

The same qualifications apply to roosters as to hens. The rooster is half of the flock, and if a poor individual he more than half. He should therefore, be selected with care.

In mating birds, it is important that both male and females are not weak in the same places. Birds selected for breeding should be paired together at least two weeks before the eggs are used for hatching. In mating general-purpose breeds, such as Barred Rocks, Wyandottes or Rhode Island Reds, 12 to 15 hens may be mated to one male bird, while with the lighter breeds the number may be 15 to 18 hens.

THE HOME BUYER

Many business firms are ruined by their failure to buy their goods economically. They may produce efficiently, but their sales with economy and system. But if they are paying too much for the materials and services that they have to buy, their products are fundamentally defective.

The same is true in making purchases for the home. Every home has its purchasing agent. In the majority of cases the housewife. If her service is wastefully performed, if she buys thoughtlessly, without forethought and planning, if she lacks intelligence regarding the state of the markets for the things she needs, the operation of the thing she needs, the amount of the purchase and the advance of that family is handicapped.

The buyer for a business concern is himself for his lack of careful inquiry into the state of the markets. He would not be considered competent unless he followed very carefully all price movements and other lines of information related to the articles entering into his line.

Similarly the home buyer needs to follow carefully the information relative to the lines of the things he has to use. The way to do that is to follow the advertising in the news papers, to watch for price reductions on the articles that are being used and also looking for information about goods which helps one buy more intelligently and get full value for one's money.

The home buyers as a rule understand quite well that close watch of the advertising is one way in which to reduce the price level on the things they buy. The people who fail to give this close scrutiny to these business announcements are not keeping up with the modern game of efficient home making, and are not performing efficiently their function as buyers for the home.

Talking Too Much

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

IT IS Mark Twain, I believe, who tells the story of listening to an appeal for financial help presented by a returned missionary. At the end of the speaker made such a strong case that Mr. Clemens at once decided to contribute ten dollars to the cause, but as the speaker rambled on and on in his talk the enthusiasm of his listener gradually waned until when the time came for passing the contribution box, instead of giving anything, he managed to slip a quarter from the box. The man had killed his case by talking too much.

My father used to say that he had never in all his life, and he was not a young man, been sorry that he had eaten too little or talked too little. Most of us talk too much without thinking much or saying much that is worth while.

The best salesman with whom I have ever done business, says little, and in saying that little, never suggests that I buy. He studies me and my tastes and my desires, and then places his wares attractively before me, and lets them sell themselves. He has learned, what is very difficult for most of us to learn, that one gains his case, often, or wins his argument quite as much by keeping still as by talking continuously.

It is part of the weakness of youth to talk too much. It seems well, however, if it were confined to youth. Many women do it until they and themselves and those who listen to them in a state of physical exhaustion. Men, too, are not exempt from the practice, the reason being perhaps, that we all like to cast ourselves in the role of hero, or wise guy, or of some sort, and we foolishly imagine that by talking of our own virtues and enlarging upon the weaknesses and errors of the other man, we strengthen our own position. It is really mostly talk, and often harmful talk.

It was George Eliot, I believe, who said that one of the tests of real friendship is that two people bury together for an hour and say nothing and feel no obligation to say anything. We should all be better off if we talked less and thought more.

FARM PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR 1925.

The year 1925 promises much for farmers, declares Director Thomas P. Cooper of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, in a New Year's message to Kentucky farmers. His message follows:

"The New Year of 1925 is one of promise to the farmer. Agriculture as a whole has made more progress toward complete recovery in 1924 than in the past 4 years. Agricultural prices as a whole have reached the highest point since 1920. Meanwhile the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar has increased, not only by the downward movement which has taken place in commodities, but by increased farm prices.

"There is much to encourage the Kentucky farmer. Production the past year has been generally profitable. Other than tobacco, the supplies of farm products in storage are not unduly large. Conditions of industry warrant the assumption of a continuance of consuming power. The financial situation has improved to the benefit of the farmer and its effect upon confidence and farm progress is noticeable. Grain supplies have become a shortage. Beef cattle are moving through the bottom of the price cycle. Improvement may not be so marked, but it is as certain as the improvement that has taken place in hog and sheep production.

"In looking forward to 1925, it may be well to remember that a part of the rise in farm prices is due to the situation of world shortage. This may be followed by increased production. Good farm practice, therefore requires a continuance of a properly managed farm. The home production of ample food for farm use, and the necessity of continuing the most economical methods of production.

"The New Year, too, should mean much to the farm home. New opportunity is offered to develop the school, church and road programs which increase the value of country life. The purpose of a desire of farm prosperity should be to provide the comforts of the home, the joy of living and the well-being of the family, which should be the privilege of country life.

To all farmers and their families a happy and prosperous New Year is the wish and message of the staff of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station."

WHERE ARE WE DRIFTING

"If the court please, we desire to enter a plea of temporary insanity."

For several years we have witnessed a never-ending procession of notorious murders—murders in that they involved people of prominence, as wealth and position goes, and because each presented the always dread but enticing story of some heart-tragedy wherein men and women battered and sold their ill and lived in defiant illicit relation until sudden death closed the door.

Never one of these but knew its inevitable wage. All could count the cost and feel sure the price must be paid. No one can plead ignorance in behalf of the living or the dead.

As a nation we have a very keen sense of justice, but nothing can justify indiscriminate murder in vengeance for private wrongs.

The honor of women, the sanctity of the home, are sacred, but always within certain limits. Are we not developing an exaggerated standard of so-called chivalry whereby half-drunk men and women are actually encouraged to kill in provoked retaliation and know that the extreme penalty will be no hindrance to a sea of sympathetic sighs and tears?

Criminal procedure was once a wholesome fact to be feared, but today it is a pretense of inconsistency and absurd anomalies. May the poor fool who has shed his pound of flesh when an overcoat is involved, but really doesn't matter much if you have only taken human life in guise of illicit love.

There is such a thing as love—the highest, noblest, sweetest and most precious gift a good God gave. But nowhere in holy writ, or legal or moral warrant does love stand for license, neither in the sense of lascivious desire, or as a justification for that indifference to the taking of human life which, as now seems, is likely to make killing a popular pastime.

John R. Copping Co., gave five one-year subscriptions to the Boone County Recorder to the Florence H. School, to be given to the child in each room receiving the highest average. The lucky ones were Edna Jettors, Paul E. Tanner, Hazel Satehill, Dorotha McHenry, Dorothy Markberry.

RURAL MAIL SERVICE

Few institutions in the history of American progress can be credited with a more salutary effect upon the march of that progress than the Rural Mail Service of the Postoffice Department.

No other single instrumentality has done more than the Rural Mail Service toward "bringing the city to the country" and relieving the prosaic existence of farm life, or has been as effective in establishing closer contact between the farmer and his markets. It has been the most important factor in making agriculture an exciting business instead of its one-time precarious classification which conveyed no broader meaning than "tilling the soil."

Twenty-nine years ago the farmer and his wife, and children, led an existence of almost complete isolation, living upon widely scattered farms, some of them miles apart. They had comparatively little communication with their neighbors or the outside world, except that derived from weekly trips to the adjacent village. More often has not the farmer lost a full day's work and his crops were neglected in order to obtain expected mail at his village post-office.

In those days the farmers' mail consisted largely of communications from relatives and friends. Today the daily mail includes usually on the very date of publication, the metropolitan newspaper, containing market reports and agricultural news; the weekly and monthly farm journals and magazine and business letters from the village merchant and the more pretentious establishment in the distant city. All of these are now brought to his door or to the box a few yards away.

The rural carrier is the agent of the postoffice and his agent. Through him he conducts transactions for the sale of his live stock grain and other farm produce. From him he buys stamps and pays his bills by postal money order. In short, the letter carrier medium that has transformed the once secluded habitation of the rural district into a cosmopolitan citizen, conversant with current affairs and occupying a larger place in the destinies of a great nation.

It was Postmaster General John W. Wainwright who first officially suggested in 1891 the rural mail idea to Congress. The plan was fought in the legislative branch of the Government for five years before it was given a try-out.

"BOOKS"

WHAT LITERATURE ARE WE PLACING BEFORE THE YOUNG FOLKS AS LITERARY DIET?

I have spent much time in patient thought, and study upon the above title as a subject for a writing this time for I consider it a subject of vital importance for the upbuilding and cultivation of young minds in training for a social life, as well as a commercial career for the future. It is said, reading is as essential to the bright, intellectual young mind as food is to the physical body. We know that if good, wholesome reading by good, well known authors is not furnished at home, in many cases it will be secured out from home—and it may be of a questionable character for good future results. So what literary foods are placed upon the literary table in the home to use? It is not literature that will pollute or corrupt the morals of the youthful readers—making them bank robbers, auto stealers, illicit liquor makers, as much now, for, before any book or periodical can be submitted to the press for publication now, it has to go through the rigid and severe hands of critics and proof readers, backed by a Government staff, and the Postoffice Department has issued a warning to their employees with a punishment affixed for passing obscene literature over the country. But there is literature not obscene which would not incite a desire, in the young mind for any improvement, so what literature should be placed in the home? We could not place our own selfish curriculum of reading, for probably mother, full of domestic home cares, would say there's the old family Bible, "Pilgrims Progress," "Sons and Daughters of the Revolutionary War," "Mother's Cook Book" let the children read those. Father, too, full of business cares, would say, there's the Stock Exchange, Farmer's Journal, and if business went well with him at the time, would add, there's the Base Ball Bulletin. The Bible should be read by all—it is a guide to human life; while games are essential to the young, active, growing generations, for both muscle and intellectuality. I do not think studying the chronicles of any game would fire their ambition to emulation in a business career of the future; the other selections would have been good in their day and for maturity of years, while there are many young nature—no two are exactly alike, so we have to fit their intellectuality, like a foot with a shoe. We cannot give them literature suited to the old, seasoned scholar of Shakespeare's and Byron's classic lore, nor Longfellow, Tennyson or Moore, from the poetical standpoint, for those caring little for poetical verse. If their natures crave adventure and strenuous outdoor life, there is Robert Louis Stevenson for them, Hall Cain adventures of a finger print expert telling how crimes are detected infallibly by this wonderful new method. If a christian effect is desired too, there is Ben Hur, Barnabas, Titus, based upon facts from Bible History, and all of them clean and very thrilling and interesting. Is it worth the trouble? What have you in your possession that is of more value than your children? If it does no more than give them a taste of the home fireside, the gain will be yours, which will last through all generations of the future, as well as a pleasure and satisfaction in your homes now.

A friend of all bright, intelligent young people.

THE COST OF LIVING

According to statistics compiled by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States the total volume of retail business last year was $22,000,000,000, or about $60,000,000 per day. This represents a per capita expenditure of $207.62 for food, clothing, furniture, fuel and light and miscellaneous commodities of which $97.58 was for food. In other words it costs an average family of four $830.48 not including rent, doctor's and dentist's and barber bills, medicines, insurance, amusements, church donations, traveling expenses and undertakers' bills. In arriving at this average, however, statistics always include the 10,000,000 of population who are inmates of prisons, poor houses, insane asylums, homes, and on the books of charitable institutions, as paupers. When these other items are taken in to account it will be found that the lowest survey made by four different organizations that the cost of living for a family of four was about $1,000 per year, is not far from correct.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

104 1/4 Acres Ohio River Bottom Land
122 Acres Hill and Bottom Land
To be sold at the Court House Door in Burlington, Ky., Monday, February 2d, 1925
at 1 o'clock P. M.]

These farms are owned by Frank V. Craig and are located in
The East Bend Bottoms of Boone County, Ky.

The 104 1/4 acre tract is all bottom land and very productive, located on pike and the Ohio River. Good brick house, good barn and other outbuildings. This is one of the best Ohio River Bottom farms in Boone County. A Government light is located on this farm which pays the owner of this farm $132 00 per year.

The 122 acre farm is located near the 104 1/4 acre tract and could be handled nicely together. This 122 acres is good productive land as well as affording splendid pasture with some timber. Two houses and two barns, crib and other outbuildings. There is a fraction over 97 acres in one tract of the hill farm and 24 3/4 acres in one tract.

It is proposed to sell each of these two tracts of the hill farm separately then as a whole, to be sold the way the 122 acres brings the most money, or a sufficient number of acres to be sold to raise the amount of money necessary to be raised.

Purchaser must be prepared to give bond for the purchase price payable in six and twelve months. Easier terms can be arranged by seeing the Peoples Deposit Bank at Burlington, Ky., in advance of the sale.

Prospective purchasers are invited to look at these farms before day of sale by calling on Mr. Frank V. Craig at the farms or the undersigned at Burlington, Ky.

R. E. BERKSHIRE, Master Commissioner.
PEOPLES DEPOSIT BANK, Burlington, Ky.

We are gradually becoming accustomed to feminine names in high places. We are familiar with "Ma" Ferguson as governor of Texas, and "Nell" Ross, governor of Wyoming. Just before retiring from office Governor Neff appointed three judges to the State Supreme Court, Texas, who answer to the names of Hortense, Ruth and Hattie. In State Houses throughout the Nation lawmakers are addressing one another as Lena and Gertrude and Diana. A Florence opens the New York Legislature. A soprano, Mabel, in the Department of Justice ousts a District Attorney named Mike who can sing half a foot lower than Chalapin. Maude and Marjorie and Dulcie carried the votes of their States to the Electoral College and a petite young thing, who was called "Bee" at Vassar, jells a whole Black Maria load of bootleggers. Yes, verily, these be wondrous times.

After traveling around in a circle the original Underwood bill provided for private-leasing of Muscle Shoals was adopted by the Senate by a vote of 50 to 30 and was immediately referred back to the House. All amendments were rejected. Opposing the Underwood bill on the final vote were 13 Republicans from western states; 16 Democrats mostly from southern and western states, and one Farmer-Labor. Thirty-four Republicans, 14 of them from western states, and 16 Democrats, three of them from western states, voted for the bill.

After three or four years of preparation the turn-around and flip-flop and the several votes on the Muscle Shoals question does not indicate that degree of business sagacity that the people expect of United States Senators. The trouble seemed to be too much lobby, and not sufficient public interest. Unless the measure is perfected in conference somebody ought to be impeached.

NON-PARTISANSHIP
Gov. Smith, of New York in his inaugural address pledged himself to pursue a non-partisan policy. Political opponents will say that as the noted governor is surrounded by state officials of the opposite party, he would naturally look favorably on non-partisanship. However, in calling for the non-partisan spirit he strikes a popular note. The people are weary of needless strife in politics and playing for partisan advantage.
We need political parties which shall take responsibility, and insist on certain standards of attainment. But the first thought of the politician is too frequently, "How can my party and I make political capital out of this proposition?" Instead of "How can my party and I contribute to shape this proposition for the benefit of the people."
Claimed that regular exercise is beneficial to the health, and the young crowd are willing to attend to this by being present at all dances.
AN AIRSHIP FLEET
The day when passengers and freight will cross the American continent regularly in two days or less would seem to be brought quite near now that a corporation is being organized by New York and Boston capitalists to develop a fleet of airships for commercial uses.
The dream of one day become the reality of some other day not far distant. When our present government was founded, our ancestors would have said it was preposterous that people could ever cross this continent in the time made by modern express trains. Similarly the skeptics on air navigation are likely to be equally confounded in the near future.
Anything that reduces the obstacles created by distance, binds our sections more closely together, removes prejudices, speeds up communication, and helps the industries to operate more efficiently.

PUBLISHERS NOTICE

The publishers of the Boone County Recorder have been contemplating for some time the raising of the subscription rates to this paper. We did not deem it practical to make the new rates effective prior to or during our present subscription campaign. We have now made public our announcement of the new rates, effective February 1, 1925, the day following the close of our campaign that the regular subscription price of the RECORDER will be $2.00 per year. This raise is absolutely necessary on account of the increased price of news print and other costs incidental to the production of the paper. The RECORDER is one among the last of the old established papers in Kentucky to raise its subscription rate. This raise will not be effective during the present campaign, and according to the rules of the campaign you will be permitted to take advantage of the old rate as far in advance as 1931, but the new rate will positively take effect upon expiration of the time for which you subscribe during the campaign. It will be our utmost desire to make the paper well worth the price of your subscription.

JOHN HENRY UTZ

Aged Seventy, Dies at His Home in Marion, Kan., Was Born in Boone County, Near Bellevue.

Announcement of the death of John H. Utz, who died at his home in Marion, Kansas, last Friday Jan. 23, was received in Burlington last Sunday morning. He was a brother of Mrs. Lavinia Kirkpatrick of this place, and a son of the late Jackson U. and Mary Miller, Ind. He was born near Bellevue, this county 70 years ago. Besides his sister, he is survived by his wife, three children and a mother. He was a member of the M. E. church.

RATS! RATS!

It is reported that in some sections of the county rodents are plentiful and have become so savage that your life is in danger when you lie down at night.

We were informed a few days since by a friend that one of the good housewives in his section of the county upon retiring a few nights ago, took her false teeth out and laid them on a chair near her bed, and while she was wrapped in the arms of sweet morpheus, a rat stole her teeth, which has caused her great deal of inconvenience and work, as she has had to run her food through a food-chopper until she could secure a new set.

Had we known this sooner we could have furnished the necessary molar, as we have a set of teeth in the office, left here by a friend who found them, and for which we have been unable to find an owner, and will be glad to loan them—free of charge.

Our friend also informed the RECORDER man that everybody in his community was now singing:

If it don't rain any more,
We will have a awful drouth,
The way to save your teeth
Is to keep them in your mouth

B. H. S. NOTES.

Our mid-year exams began Jan. 14th and ended Jan. 16th.

Four from High School were exempted in all the subjects. They were Kathryn Clore, Hazel Marie Clore, Mildred Gaines and Mary Louise Renaker. These girls had such a good vacation that they decided they were well repaid for their daily studying.

The pupils of the High School and 7th and 8th grades have been selling all kinds of garden and flower seeds. A certain percent of the proceeds goes to the P. T. A. for the building of our Auditorium.

The P. T. A. met Wednesday night Jan. 21st. They discussed the record over the play which they are planning to give some time soon.

Mr. Well visited our school again Wednesday afternoon and reported our orchestra progressing rapidly.

Mr. O. H. Sadden, Field Manager of the Country Gentleman visited our school Thursday afternoon and gave us a very interesting talk. He asked us to get subscriptions for the Country Gentleman. There are several prizes given for a certain number of subscriptions and one-half of the proceeds goes to the school. The High School and 7th and 8th grades are divided into three divisions and the winning side is given a party by the losers. The contest closes Jan. 30th and everyone is working hard to win.

Kathryn Arvin was absent from school three days last week on account of a serious cold.

The annual meeting of the Boone County Chapter A. R. C. will be held at the Christian church in Florence Wednesday Feb. 4th, at 1:30 p. m. Miss Ella, Director of Public Health Nursing in Kentucky will attend the meeting and help plan the work of the Chapter for next year. An active Red Cross Chapter can be of great benefit to a community and every one at all interested is asked to come to this meeting.

Next Monday is County Court.

ALL CREDITS HAVE BEEN MADE

New and corrected lists containing the dates of expiration of all subscribers have been made and turned over to the contents. All collections reported to the various subscribers of the Recorder. The date of expiration will be shown on every paper mailed out this week. For every dollar and fifty cents paid to Contestants a year has been credited to those entitled to same. THE DATE TO WHICH EACH SUBSCRIPTION HAS BEEN PAID IS SHOWN ON THE ADDRESS OF EACH RECORDER. Look now and see the date of your expiration. This correction was made to enable the workers to look and see just how many was left on the list who have thus far failed for some reason or other to pay up their subscription or advance the same. Now is the time to pay up and advance your subscription if you really want to help some one win the Essex Coach, for on February 7th, another big drop in the schedule of the votes will take place. Help your favorite candidate now. The Recorder expects every one of its subscribers to advance their subscription at least one year before this campaign closes. On Feb. 15th, the Recorder goes to $2.00 per year in advance. This is the rule of all established weekly papers in Kentucky. The Recorder put on this campaign for no other purpose than to establish the new rate as well the paid in advance rule.

Parent-Teachers' Meeting

The Parent-Teachers Association held its regular meeting last Friday night at the school house. The subject for the evening's discussion was "The Child's Enthusiasm For Its School Work."

Mrs. Walter Hafer discussed the home side of the question and Prof. Lucy brought out the school side. Mr. Charles Riley discussed "Morale." O. C. Hafer and family played two selections. The officers of the association served lunch after the meeting.

The electric lights were used for the first time Friday night.

There are about fifty members and the meetings are very helpful as well as entertaining.

Meetings are held the second and fourth Friday nights in each month at 7 o'clock. All are invited and urged to be present.

The school orchestra took its second lesson last Thursday.

County Clerk, M. E. Rogers, has received conflicting instructions in regard to collecting a twenty percent penalty on all automobile licenses issued after January 15, 1925.

The State Revenue agent says that the Clerk must collect this penalty of twenty percent. A suit to test this question has been brought and is being prosecuted by the Automobile Club, contending that the penalty should not be paid, the Circuit Judge who heard the case decided that the penalty must be collected and that question is now before the Courts of Appeals and it is hoped that a decision will be rendered in a short time and until that Court decides the question the County Clerk must collect the penalty.

This condition not only causes the County Clerk quite a lot of trouble as well as the automobile owners who has not secured his 1925 license.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.
At a meeting of all the directors of the Farm Bureau held at their headquarters in Burlington, Monday, Mr. Clem Kendall who attended a meeting of the State Association held on the 9th inst., read some correspondence from the State Association in regard to the cooperative buying. After considering the proposition the board agreed to buy through the Association as long as they could get better prices.

Mr. Kendall was employed as manager of the Farm Bureau for another year with Russell Yocley as an assistant.

From present indications the Bureau is in better shape at present than it has been for some time.

OUR ARMY OF FIRST GRADERS.

Every year we draft some 3,000-4,000 boys and girls into our vast public school army. And we do this in a very haphazard manner. The parents of more than half this army eagerly await the day when the child can be unloaded, as it were, on the public school teacher. Approximately one-fourth of all our school teachers fall of promotion at the end of the first year. Only about one out of ten has enjoyed the preparatory advantages of a kindergarten or the smallest degree of home instruction. More unworked problems of mental and educational hygiene are heaped up at the threshold of our public school system than elsewhere and as a result of this neglect about one-third of the total deaths of the country occur below the age of 12 years.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Twenty-six scrub or grade bulls were replaced by purebreds in Campbell county last year, according to County Agent H. F. Link. A contest among the precincts to see which could replace the most scrubs will close April 1st, when $200 in prizes will be divided among the winners.

Eight new Junior Agricultural Clubs have been organized in Knott county communities which have never had clubs before, County Agent D. S. Greene reports. Eighty-seven fathers, mothers and boys and girls attended one meeting, and 71 another meeting.

Demonstrations of the effects of spraying will be conducted by County Agent S. W. Anderson in Nicholas county this year. Ten orchards will be used in the work. Two pruning demonstrations were held in December.

The Boyle County Jersey Breeders' Association was organized recently, with 21 members. A four-year-old imported bull, from a cow that produced 580 pounds of butterfat in 318 days, was purchased for $250. A two-year-old he sold for $1,025, County Agent C. E. Miller reports.

Many Russell county farmers plan to grow soybeans this year, according to County Agent M. H. Sasser. E. Mann, living near Creelsboro, planted 70 acres of corn last year to soybeans, which he hogged down, making a profit of $641 on his hogs. F. Polston, another farmer, reported good results from hogging down soybeans in corn. The county's slogan is "1000 farmers to grow soybeans in 1925."

County Agent C. V. Bryan has been conducting a better feeding campaign among farmers in Taylor county. He assisted several dairymen in making up balanced rations, and sent 100 letters to sheepmen, calling their attention to the benefits of better feeding for ewes.

PT. PLEASANT
(Last Week)

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Allen were among the guests at H. V. Tanner's surprise party.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Dolwick, Jr., called on Miss Sarah E. Tanner Sunday afternoon.

Billy Wunderlich from Blue Ash, a former pupil of Pt. Pleasant School called on his teacher Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Souther and little girl Winona Pierce spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Tanner.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Buckler called on Mr. and Mrs. Souther Saturday evening and took them to the surprise party at H. V. Tanner's.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wernz had their subscription date moved up two more years, last Friday—many thanks for the votes good friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hannah and children, Myrtle Lorraine, and Edgar, also Mrs. Joe Ellerman and daughter Jessie Lorraine, all from Riverdale spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Keene Souther.

Many wise people are taking advantage of this great opportunity of receiving the Recorder at the old reasonable rate of $1.50 and are moving their subscriptions up for the next five years, only 23 more days in which to decide—after that the price will be $2.00.

A large crowd of Mr. Howard Tanner's good friends slipped in on him Saturday evening and had a surprise birthday party. We are not exaggerating one bit when we say, he was shocked speechless, nevertheless the surprise was agreeable and he immediately took his place in the receiving line welcoming all with his broad grin and charming manner. Later on in the evening, an elegant supper was served and enjoyed by all.

TOM GAITSKILL

Well-Known Horseman Moves to Falmouth and Will Take Charge of Fair Grounds.

Tom Gaitskill, of Cincinnati, one of the best known horse trainers and turfmen in this part of the country, has moved to Falmouth, and with his family is occupying a house on Riggs street. Mr. Gaitskill will move to the Falmouth Fair Grounds March 1st, and purposes to train a large taring of horses for the county fairs the coming season.

Mr. Gaitskill has been coming to the Falmouth Fair with his horses for many years, and has carried away thousands of dollars in premiums with his fine thoroughbred trotters and pacers. Last year he entered several horses belonging to Mrs. Diehl, Cincinnati, turfwoman, and won several good stakes with them.

Besides training his own horses Mr. Gaitskill will take a limited number of animals and train them for Pendleton county horsemen. He is one of the best men in the business.—Falmouth Outlook

Boone county horse lovers are well acquainted with the success of Mr. Gaitskill.

From the number of deaths from poison liquor one would think men would fight shy of it, but they prefer to take a poor gambler's chance. Mental deficiencies of this type will leave no very pronounced aching void in to word after the undertaker completes his work.

The above is the comparative standing of all candidates up to Saturday night Jan. 31, candidates under the rules of the campaign being allowed to withhold a part of the votes that have been issued to them on subscription payments.

The big snow followed by real cold weather has had a distressing effect upon the race for the Essex Coach in the RECORDER Campaign. Many of the leading racers floundered in the snow and when they came in with their reports this week they certainly looked like selling platters and not the fast steppers that their former reports had indicated.

Mrs. Lucy Garrison, while her reports were below normal, came to the limelight as the special driver of the Essex Coach this week. Mrs. Garrison declares that she ran into a snow bank early in the week and that it took ten men to dig her out. We are now wondering if she got ten subscriptions from her rescuers.

Mrs. Lucy is making a splendid race—her running qualities are of a high order and now that she is indicated at the top of the list we wonder how long she will be allowed to sit on the seat of honor.

The campaign is fast coming to close. The workers are now girding themselves for the final stretch. During the remainder of this week all are making the effort of their lives to extend all subscriptions given to them in the first period. EXTENSION SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL more than likely decide who will be awarded the Essex Coach. The wise candidate will write every extension possible during the remaining days of this week. The vote schedule goes down at nine p. m., next Saturday night and it is good business to get all extensions possible by that hour.

After next Saturday the ballot box goes to the bank where it will remain sealed until it is opened by the judges on the last night of the campaign. Contestants will make a more reports to the Campaign Department after next Saturday night. After that date they will seal their reports in an envelope and deposit same in the box in the bank. This method prevents any one from knowing how many subscriptions are being placed in the box by the different candidates and offers the fairest and squarest way of bringing a contest to a close. No one connected with the campaign department or the RECORDER will have access to this sealed ballot box. The ballot box will be placed in the Peoples Deposit Bank at Burlington Monday morning where it will remain until called for by the judges.

The Nature Faker

all of her time to the RECORDER race. Georgia is one of the real little ladies in this friendly struggle for honors in the campaign.

Cecile Brown, of Walcott, feels that she is entitled to first place in our race. Cecile has a friendly way in campaigning and she actually believes in herself and is still anxious to do all she can to win. That's the spirit, Cecile.

Miss Francis Berkshire, did not come up to the scratch this week. Too much snow and cold weather for this young lady to speed much. Miss Francis has her plans laid for a scoop this week. We are going to look for a nice report for every time she has thus far no fied us in advance what she was going to do, she has delivered the goods.

Miss Fannie Lois Cotton from way down in Dixie suffered from the cold snap too. She is probably getting her mount in shape for a whirlwind finish and if she does it will take two to see her—one to say she she comes, another to say there she goes. You have plenty of support. Miss Lois if you can get it organized.

Mrs. Delle Goodridge Collins, of Florence, is still a strong favorite. Time Kentucky Belle has shown quality from the very beginning and while the cold weather deterred her some in her progress yet she did not weaken as much as some of the others. Mrs. Collins is one of our most conscientious workers.

Miss Alma Glacken cannot be overlooked in this lively and interesting race for the big prizes that the RECORDER is giving away in this campaign. Alma believes in herself has many friends, and is a willing and tireless worker. She, too, means to do all she can in order to win the Essex Coach.

Lucy Garrison, the dare-devil rider from Union precinct, never looks back but keeps her eyes to the front and is now getting ready for the home stretch. Lucy deserves special commendation for the fight that she is putting up. Yes, she thinks she is going to own the Essex.

Mrs. Thomas Hensley is now dreaming of the many subscriptions that she is going to land in the next few days. Mrs. Hensley is so serious in her work that she doesn't find much time to do any joking. The Essex Coach is yours for the asking, Mrs. Hensley—provided you ask enough people for subscriptions to the RECORDER. Ask them!

Mrs. Eva Kilgour does not bragging. She just keeps on writing subscriptions day in and day out, and when asked who she had to hear for the Essex Coach she quickly replied—every one in the race. Mrs. Kilgour is a consistent worker and seems to have no trouble in finding something to do. There has not been a day since the campaign has opened that she has not landed a few subscriptions, regardless of snow, rain, or mud.

Mrs. Geo. Kottmayer is gradually smiling her way on to victory. She is as sure to land one of the big prizes as the sun shines. Mrs. Kottmayer has never weakened (only once and she knows when that was and why) since she stepped into the ring. That is one of the best signs we know of when figuring out who is going to score heavily in this race.

Lee McNeely can not now figure out how it could be possible for him to lose the Essex Coach. Well, Lee, we can answer that very easily—if you fail to get enough votes you will never ride in the Essex Coach, unless you are invited to do so by some one of the good looking women who are pitted against you in this race. From here on Lee you will have to do some talking.

Alberta Stephens is not at all contented when she thinks she is going to drive that Essex Coach home with her when the race is over. She surmises that some of the fastest and best racers will dismount their riders in the home stretch and then she intends to put the spurs to her speed and go under the wire with colors flying. And such a thing may happen, who knows?

Mrs. Keene Souther has never let up in her activity for the RECORDER. For this lady is serving two purposes in this campaign—doing all the good she can for the RECORDER and win a prize if possible. That is certainly a commendable spirit.

Albert Willis groomed his horse and hit the trail of the "Lonesome Subscriber" last Friday and came in to headquarters Saturday night with his report. He was accompanied by his wife and little son Maurice Earl. The Club Manager enjoyed a splendid visit with this trio. Maurice Earl is some boy—takes after both father and mother. The Willis family promised to make us another visit next Saturday night, and we hope they will.

Mrs. Lee Aylor and Elmo Jergens have not been able to get back on the track since they had trouble getting up speed in the beginning. Well they are going to see a good race anyhow, even if they do have to stand on the side line.

The Club Manager is still having a lot of fun out of the campaign, regardless of the fact that he is a pretty busy man. We enjoy calling up the contestants and having a little chat with them after supper. Makes work a great deal easier.

Chester L. Tanner, one of the county's bustling young farmers of the Limaburg neighborhood, was a business visitor to the "hub" Thursday of last week. "Cheek" as he is called by his many friends, has developed into a silver tongued auctioneer and in another column will be found his ad. When wanting anyone to cry your sales don't overlook "Cheek."

An epidemic of pneumonia is prevailing at Horse Cave, Ky. Nine deaths are the results of this fatal disease at that place in the last three weeks. The doctors and undertakers have been kept busy.

OLD FASHIONED WINTERS

No More Do You Hear The Cherry
Jingle Of The Sleigh Bells—Only
The Frosty Honk of the Auto Horn.

The heavy blanket of snow that has covered Old Mother Earth since Tuesday of last week, and the merry making of the boys and girls with their sleds on the hills near town, reminds us of fifty years ago, when a thing of swish and curves and spidery grace. In the winter of 1875, "hob-bled" always stood, unopened since the previous spring. In the towns everybody who possessed carriage and horses, singular or plural, was sure to have the sleighs their stations demanded.

And when the first real snow came there was general rivalry to see who should be out first with sleigh and bells. A pretty sight it was, a heartening thing to hear the bells. What fun to "jump the bobs" and ride far into the country on the sled of some obliging farmer, until the return ride could be negotiated on some homeward bound "bobs." When the snow got firmly packed on the roads, "jumping bobs" gave way to "catch on" rides on one's own sled, with certain ways of attaching your rope so that you could let go when the spirit moved. Or, for those too old for such juvenile fun, smuggling down in the deep cut or seat, or piling into big sleighs with many others, well covered with buffalo robes, makes motoring seem tame indeed.

Instead of road alive with dashing horse-drawn turnouts, all that is to be seen is an endless line of automobiles chugging thru the drifts of snow. Instead of the cheery jingle of the sleigh bells, all you hear is the frosty honking of the horns and the slap of the anti-skid chains. Winter in the North, without sleighing and without sleigh bells can be nothing but plain cold weather and little to recommend it.

BY PROF. A. M. YEALLEY

George the II, was king of England from 1272 to 1760. In the year of 1750 he issued a patent of 500,000 acres of land to the Ohio Company, which was composed of four prominent Englishmen and two Virginians. This land was in the Ohio Valley and the Ohio Company gave Christopher Gist and Mr. Lawrence Washington (a brother of George Washington) instructions to explore along the Ohio River and find a place that would consist of the above number of acres of land. Gist and Washington crossed the Allegheny River to the Ohio River and descended it to where Portsmouth is now situated. While here he met two French traders who had been at Big Bone Lick, and his diary states that they gave him a jaw-bone of four pounds in weight, several rib bones 11 feet long and a skull 6 feet across, and several teeth called horse bones. 5 feet long. They also gave Gist a very good location of the place where they found the bones stating that it was 20 miles below the mouth of the Big Miami River and up a small stream that flowed into the Ohio from the south, and that it had been six years since they had been there, which would have made their visit at Big Bone Lick 1741.

We have no account of Gist ever having visited this place.

Our next visitor was Mrs. Mary Ingles in 1756 with her two little boys, her sister-in-law Mrs. Draper, and several men taken prisoner by the Shawnee Indians from her home in now what is West Virginia. They were taken down the Ohio in flatboats and on reaching the Shawnee town (Portsmouth) she was separated from her boys and Mrs. Draper. Some French traders from Detroit continued their journey to Big Bone Lick and took her and an old Dutch lady with them. One day while the men were engaged in making salt, Mrs. Ingles and the Dutch woman decided to escape, and under the pretense of gathering grapes, they left and after 40 days of untold hardships they reached home. One of the boys died while captive among the Indians. The other was found by his father after 13 years of separation. Mrs. Ingles died 1813, aged 84 years. (Continued in next issue)

BADLY HURT

Hubert Parsons, a former well known citizen of the Bellevue neighborhood, was badly hurt in a car crash last Thursday, in Cincinnati. He suffered a deep cut in the nose when a work car of the Cincinnati Traction Co. backed into a Crosstown car, which he was operating. His many friends in this county will be sorry to hear of his misfortune.

SOCIAL CENTERS IN COUNTRY TOWNS.

If some of the old timers of 25 and 50 years ago could see all the lively doings that are going on in a progressive country town today they would not know what to make of them.

In those old days things were not hopelessly asleep in these communities. They had pleasant and helpful things going on. The churches held services regularly, there were Sunday schools, church and fraternal society suppers and socials, the young people were having dances and parties, etc.

There activities were apt to be restricted to certain cliques. A large part of the population went to bed about every night at nine o'clock or earlier, because there was nothing else to do. Today many of these towns have been ennobled with some kind of community center, in which activities seem to grow naturally. Some of them have put up nice community buildings. Others simply use some existing church or hall for such purposes.

These communities now have the women's and men's and girls' and boys' clubs. There is usually some organization of the men for better agricultural and marketing methods, or for improvement of the soil and manufacturing business. The clubs are not merely collections of people that get together for fun, but groups that have some definite aim of achievement. The men are trying to improve their industrial and business methods, the women to do more efficient work in their homes and gain broader intelligence, the boys and girls to express some talent or strive for some particular achievement.

There is said to be much high stepping in society, but it does not help lift one up the ladder of success.

It takes ten years to break into the contentment of married life, and about ten days to break out of it.

One thing sure, there weren't many divorces in the days when all the girls knew how to cook stank and mufins.

Many being hurt by Cupid's darts, and Cupid does not have to chase them very hard either, to get within shooting distance.

It's a good thing for Linotype operators they didn't add motor fatalities to those 350 murders reported in Chicago last year.

A lot of people kick all week about the weather, and then on Sunday go to church and praise God from whom all blessings flow.

So far no scientist has attempted to estimate how many million miles the American people travel while they are installing their officers for 1925.

A successful man is one that can likely to find his communications in the wastebasket as he was before election.

 would also consent to have people

Did you ever stop to consider how much money rolls into your town on wheels? Did you ever stop to consider ways and means of encouraging this trade—of meeting at half way with a smile of welcome.

The entire Kentucky agricultural delegation called on President Coolidge last Thursday, and urged him to give the weight of his influence to convert Mammoth Cave and its environments into a national park.

The purchasing power of agriculture products compared with 1913, is 11 per cent below the average, in spite of the higher prices now prevailing. That means that agriculturists are 11 per cent worse off than in 1913.

This day and age is a stage of excitement. The people are seldom out of one thing before another bobs up.
 One election is hardly over before another is rearing to go. This year county officers are to be elected from county up on down the list.

The Senate vote requesting the President to call a disarmament conference does not meet with a very pronounced degree of favor among the statesmen of European nations with the exception of Japan. The attitude of the British government is very lukewarm.

Fifteen years ago the number of lynchings in the United States averaged about 90 per year. In 1922 only 57 were reported and in 1924 only 33. For 40 years the Tuskegee University has maintained an interesting record of these affairs by tapes, and it has frequently happened that more whites were lynched than blacks. Lynching is most frequent in 10 Southern states, while Montana, Missouri, Oklahoma and Wyoming hold the record for lynching whites.

During the past year 2,328 boys between the ages of 16 and 21 years were arrested on criminal charges in New York City. Some of these were charged with murder.
 Investigations found nearly all of them utterly unconcerned about their condition, and gave abundant evidence of lack of parental attention or direction. Thirty-three per cent of all convictions were of persons 21-years. Brooklyn and Kings county judges assert that not only had seven pictures but the still worse spoke word on the stage, is largely responsible for a social condition that creates more criminals than it corrects.

OAK TREE IS FAVORITE TAR-GET FOR LIGHTNING

Trees with wide-spreading root systems or with roots that reach deep into moist soil are relatively good electrical conductors, and generally speaking, are in most danger of being struck by lightning, says
 the Weather Bureau of Agriculture.
 The lightning of a tree is therefore strongly recommended.

No tree is immune, but among trees of the same kind the one standing well above its neighbors is the most danger, even in a dense forest.
 This may be due to the greater height of the tree or the kind of ground it stands on. Trees growing in the open are in more danger than those in a thick stand of timber, as are those growing along an avenue or border of woods. Those growing in moist soil along the banks of a stream or lake are better conductors for lightning than those growing in drier soil. Sound trees in general are less likely to be dan-gered than those with rotten wood.
 Trees growing in loam and sandy soils are struck more frequently than those in clay, marl and calcareous soils. Oaks often grow to great height and mostly in loam and sandy soils. Moreover, they are a good example of a starchy tree, which is a better conductor of electricity than an oily tree like the beech. The oak also is a tap-rooted tree, with its root system extending deep into the soil, which constitutes another factor of danger from lightning for it.
 Studies in various localities, particularly in western Europe, have shown conclusively that the oak is struck much more often than other kinds of trees. Elm, ash, poplar and gum trees are also very susceptible to lightning damage, while those least attractive to lightning are chestnut, maple, alder and mountain ash.

THE AILING CHURCH

Now and then someone says the churches are slipping. The self-an-pointed critic frequently broadcasts his views to the effect that the churches are losing the influence that they once had and that they will never become effective until they join under one banner and put an end to the rivalry for lost souls.

But are they slipping? Do they lack the influence that they once had in the community?
 These are questions that everyone will answer in his or her own way. Those who feel the need of an altar for not supporting the church will continue to publicly proclaim at every opportunity that the church has failed, but they never make bold to criticize the Christian religion, for which the church stands.

The church has many grave problems to face, but they will never be solved by the fellow on the streets who feels free to judge the church as an institution, but would resent the judgment he deserves being passed on him.

However, the church still has a wide appeal for many people, despite the handicap that it has. It is still the greatest agency in this world for good because it holds continually aloft the teachings of Him who by example showed mankind the right way to live and proved there is life beyond the grave.

A SENSIBLE DECISION

An Indiana man was sentenced to serve ninety days for non-support of his aged parents and the conviction was upheld by the state supreme court.

It was charged, and evidently proved, that he let his parents go to the poor farm, where his mother died, because he was paying for an automobile on the installment plan.

Every man is morally bound to support his parents when they are in need if he is at all able to do so, and such treatment of mere old and not recognize their obligation will meet with universal approval.

It will be much more effective, if the courts take this position, that all of the old age pension laws that might be passed, which would burden the state with the expense of supporting the aged people whose irresponsible children have lost all sense of debt they owe their parents.

CAPITAL NEEDED FOR MARRI-AGE.

A Pennsylvania authority declares that no young couple should get married without having at least $500 for purchase of furniture, with $300 additional for incidentals.
 Hope is a foe in youth, and many have married with little but hope for capital. Some of them come out mighty well too. But others have not fared so well. Sickness came, or children created expense, and they could not keep up their payments, and lost their furniture. Love must be rather intense to survive such a strain. It would seem better to have waited a few months longer and have at least saved up enough for the first essentials of comfort.

Editor and General Manager
WILL ROGERS

Another 'Bull' Durham advertisement by Will Rogers. Ziegfeld Folies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

I WANT it distinctly understood that this is an ad.
 What's more, it's one of my first attempts. Of course, the logical question is what does Will Rogers know about writing an ad? My answer is simple—everything!

The first thing any ad writer has got to know is how to get paid. I found that out. The first letters of the alphabet I learned were P. I. A.—that means Pay in Advance.

The real truth about why I started writing ads for these people is that I got a family kicking the toes out of lots of shoes daily and I read where my employers sold enough of their stuff so that I could buy a new pair.

end to end they would stretch further than an ad from Oklahoma to Yokohama—and that's some stretch. So I think this looks good to me. That's why I signed up.
 I hope it turns into a steady job. At any rate, I'll have another piece here two weeks from now.

Will Rogers
 P.S. I like to forget to tell you what I was advertising. It's 'Bull' Durham.
 I don't smoke it myself. I don't smoke anything, but somebody does or else what happened to all those legs?

IT'S MORE ECONOMICAL of course, but the real reason thousands of men swear by good of 'Bull' Durham is because of its sheer goodness of flavor, you just can't tie it.

LEARNING FROM EACH OTHER.

Business men nowadays learn a great deal from each other. If you go to some manufacturing center, you will probably find that the majority of the business men belong to business organizations. They are especially interested in their own trade associations, and they get many ideas from those who are engaged in the same line of business.
 The country town business men and farmers need likewise to gain ideas from each other's experiences. The wise man is said to learn from other people's experiences rather than from his own painful experiments.
 The wide awake man goes well to meet frequently with people in his own occupation, to exchange experiences, learn how they avoid difficulties, and become familiar with the modern ways of promoting success in these fields.

ALFALFA YIELDS

More than 21 tons of alfalfa per acre have been harvested in the past four years from a five-acre field on the Experiment Station farm at Lexington. The average yield thus has been more than five tons per acre per year. In the four years the alfalfa was cut 14 times, which means that there to four crops a year were obtained.
 Yields like the foregoing are high, but they can be obtained on many farms, according to S. C. Jones and Ralph Kenney, extension agrono-mists for the College of Agriculture,
 The Experiment Station field was a fertile piece of land, and no fertilizer was used. It was limed previous to sowing alfalfa.

Good yields of alfalfa are the rule rather than the exception in the blue grass region, Messrs. Jones and Kenney said. A farmer living near Versailles cut four to five tons per acre this year. He sold most of it at $22 a ton, soon after harvest. Part of it was purchased by a race horse owner to feed to colts.

A good idea of the yields to be expected from year to year is shown by experience on a field formerly used by the Experiment Station near Lincoln Ridge in Shelby county," said Mr. Kenney. "The first season after sowing in the previous fall gave a yield of 3.8 tons of hay to the acre. The second year the yield reached 7.2 tons, and the third year it was 4.8 tons, and the fourth year 3.8 tons. The highest yield is normally secured in the third season, regardless how long thereafter the field may remain in alfalfa."

A gang of railway coolies at work near Asenai, India, dug into a piece of rock which, when unearthed proved to be a fossil tree about 70 feet long. It retained some of the knots and marks where branches sprouted and distinct marks of the grain of the trunk, together with other irrefutable evidence. The tree is entirely different from anything known in that part of the country and geological experts believe it was brought down some extinct river long ago and lodged in this spot. Natural scientists say it is at least a million and possibly two millions of years old, antedating the earliest recorded things in history. All of which goes to once more impress us with the fact that all speculation as to the age of the earth is mere guesswork.

Senator Smith, of South Carolina, asserts that the farmers of that state pay more than $25,000,000 every year for fertilizer. The total for the Nation is $1,600,000,000. On top of this the fertilizer dealers recently advanced the price by $6.00 per ton —an increase of 25 per cent that seems to be wholly unwarranted and due to combinations or trusts. Senator Smith does not believe the proposed disposition of Muscle Shoals to private operation will remedy this trouble in any particular.

Claimed the back of winter is broken, but possibly it is merely lamed up by cold weather.

BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES!

This and That.

Reforms, like charity, should begin at home.

The person who gives short change is within prison range.

Men slowest to make promises are the last to break them.

Much happiness is overlooked because it doesn't cost anything.

The older you grow, the more your respect for age increases.

Better pin your faith to luck than waste your energy pushing luck.

A woman convinced against her will is of the same opinion still.

Never forget that the home run hitter has to touch all four bases.

Some folks never reach the top because they want to start there.

Men who "do nothing in particular" generally do it exceedingly well.

The man who turns a difficulty into a tonic has all of the capital he needs to go ahead.

Some young men are so energetic that they never go to bed until just before dawn.

Animals are not the only things skinned so that women folks can wear beautiful furs.

Forget to tell your troubles to other people and you will never feel any better.

Don't be too free with your advice, because if it is any good, it is so good to give away.

Some let their brains loaf, some their bodies, while the general inclination is to do both.

Being told that they need more sleep, many folks are perfectly willing to sleep later in the morning.

Once upon a time there lived a popular girl who thought she was neither beautiful nor attractive.

It is sometimes the case that when you want to do the right thing, there is a law forbidding it.

Many people are judged by their associates, and likewise by those who refuse to associate with them.

The people who are tired of having their eyesight, will stand a chance to get rid of it if they drink bootleg liquor.

Claimed here are too many idlers in this country, but the idlers say it is dangerous to hustle and get out of breath.

Petty soon the school pupils will be demanding the privilege of examining the teachers to see if they are qualified.

The time for the girls to propose has gone, but as usual they are permitted to lead the men up to the proposing point.

Scientists declare that 1925 will be a dry year, and the bootleggers are properly pursued, it will be in this country anyway.

The college students who get married before graduation, will have to take courses of instruction at home as well as in the class-room.

Sunrise is a beautiful sight those winter mornings, but the sports are more apt to observe it as a result of sitting up on summer nights.

Perhaps the "tired business man" would not get so weary, if he did a little more advertising so that trade would come to him more generously.

In spite of all the talk of the dangers of congested population, eight or ten of the young crowd still continue to pile into small automobiles.

Many school pupils do not like arithmetic much, but they are all willing to learn enough so they can tell their father's automobile number.

This country may have all the easy chairs it needs, but more factory stools and tractor seats occupied by active workers could be made use of.

It has perhaps not occurred to some people who were bothered by getting a lot of old bills January 1 that they can get rid of that annoyance by paying the same.

After seeing the girls sitting around without partners at the dance, it would be appropriate to insert a "Male Help Wanted" ad in the Boone County Recorder.

Time for bargain sales now, but if there are some merchants who desire to carry over their goods until another season, they don't have to worry about advertising them.

BETTER CROP YIELDS
NEEDED IN KENTUCKY

A plea for better utilization of the land, especially increased crop yields as a means of improving agricultural conditions in Kentucky, is made by Prof. Geo. Roberts, head of the agronomy department of the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station in a new bulletin entitled "Better Land Utilization in Kentucky."

Kentucky farms average less than 80 acres in size, only 52 acres of which are classified as improved. The harvested crops of the state amount to about 24 acres per farm, as an average. For the period 1916-22 corn in the state averaged 26 bushels to the acre, wheat 11 bushels, oats 21 bushels, hay 1.2 tons and tobacco 861 pounds. Small acreages at low yields result in an average annual Kentucky farm crop production worth less than $1,000.

The solution of the problem is to increase acre yields, says Professor Roberts. There must be a better utilization of the land. "There can be no prosperity for farmers in Kentucky as a whole until the soil is made more productive," he declares.

While it is true that farmers are suffering severely from low prices for their products, it is not possible for them to be prosperous on the present crop yields at any prices that they are likely ever to obtain in normal times.

"All programs for improvement of agriculture should be based upon the idea of soil improvement. All the efforts to improve farm homes, the schools and roads in agricultural regions will be repaid with meager results unless there is a productive soil to support the enterprises."

Prof. Roberts says that the initial remedy lies in more legumes. He declares that there is no hope that the soils of the state can be materially improved until the legume acreage is increased.

A LIVE ISSUE

The vice-president of a large public utility says that taxation is a live issue. It seems a live issue for the big corporations, but it is no less so for the smallest taxpayer.

One-seventh of the income of the American people now goes to taxes. The people are paying three times as much per capita in taxes as they did in 1912—an increase of 300 per cent.

These are facts that should be remembered when the legislature convenes. Most legislation increases taxes. Few laws are enacted which do not impose added expense upon the taxpayer. Few laws carrying tax levies are ever repealed. Thus the tax burden mounts.

There seems to be little prospect of lowering taxes any appreciable amount except through making tax able to $32,000,000,000 invested in securities, the income from which is exempt from federal taxes.

But this is the least of the evil. It has been determined that five sixths of the tax-free securities are issued by cities, counties and other local governments. Thus capital that should be invested in taxable property does not bear its share of the expense of government.

The one big problem of all government, whether federal, state, county or municipal, is to reduce expenditures and increase receipts. Economy in government, which means cutting down expenses, can be accomplished only by curtailing legislation and checking the increase of tax-exempt securities, which are responsible for the mounting of public debt.

The federal government can not tax the incomes derived from state, municipal and other local securities, without amending the constitution. It would require a long time to add such a provision to the constitution, but such action would make local securities less inviting, even if states did not make them taxable.

HORSE BREEDING

A colt survey in several Indiana counties has revealed that there are only about 16 per cent as many colts under two years old on farms as will ordinarily be required for replacements. If the percentage continues to run that low for some years it is easy to figure out a serious shortage in horse power. But it won't continue that low in Indiana or any other state. Breeding increased last spring, and there will be more colts this spring. And probably there will be more next spring than this spring. Yet similar figures from different parts of the country, based on counts made during the past few years, would indicate that we have a period in which there won't be enough horses to go around. The horse turnover is the slowest in livestock production. In other words, a horse shortage is slow in coming because it takes horses a long time to wear out; on the other hand, when it does come its stay is prolonged, because it takes a good while to produce workers.—Chicago Drivers Journal.

We just heard of a fellow who wouldn't pay his grocer because his employer hadn't paid him, because business was so bad, because taxes were so high, because the United States couldn't collect from France, because France couldn't collect from Germany, because Germany couldn't collect from anybody, because nobody owed Germany anything.

TURN ME OVER

Beware Of Coughs
That Hang On

Pneumonia and serious lung trouble usually start with a cough. So if you have a cold or cough—stop it at once with a few drops of the old medicine, Kemp's Balsam. This famous Balsam soothes the nerves of the throat, stops the tickling cough and nature does the rest. No form of cough syrup so good for children's coughs. 50 cents at all stores.

For that Cough/
KEMP'S BALSAMTells How to End
Night Coughing

To quickly stop hacking, irritating coughing at night, a very simple treatment may be had that often enables you to sleep to the night through undisturbed almost at once.

The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring, and hold it in your throat for 15 seconds, secure swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and allays irritation and soreness, but it quickly loosens and removes the mucus and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. So no matter whether your cough is dry and tight, or loose with much mucus, the coughing soon stops. You can usually sleep your accustomed time without a break, and the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription contains absolutely no narcotics or other harmful drugs. Instead of merely numbing the nerves, it actually helps the system to throw off the trouble in a perfectly natural way. Furthermore, it is very economical, the dose being only one drop. It is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, tickling, hoarseness and bronchitis, and is wonderful for children's coughs and spasmodic croup. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for Aided by a well-organized propaganda conducted by more than 100 French newspapers and as many more of other nationalities, France is making a desperate effort to avoid payment of the money loaned during the war, and from present indications the total will be materially reduced in any event. Meanwhile the American people are taxed to pay the interest on the bonds. France can pay just as easily as Germany or England can pay, and should be compelled to pay, instead of expending the money for greater war preparation.

USE OF COMMERCIAL FEEDS ON INCREASE

More commercial feeds were used in Kentucky in 1924 than in 1923, according to J. D. Turner, head of the department of feed control of the Experiment Station. With the exemption of horse feed, there was a gradual increase in the use of nearly all classes of commercial feeds. The consumption of horse feed fell from 35,450 tons in 1923 to 26,945 tons in 1924. The use of cottonseed meal increased from 7,223 tons in 1923 to 13,725 tons last year. This does not include cotton seed meal consumed in the form of mixed feeds.

A BOONE COUNTY FAMILY SUCCESSFUL AT LEXINGTON.

Formal opening of the new grocery and meat store of Leslie W. Rue at the corner of Fifth and Walnut streets was held at the handsome new building Thursday night.

Souvenirs, flowers and candy and distribution of a number of prizes will be features of the opening, to which the general public of Lexington is extended a cordial invitation.

The new store, advantageously located at the corner of Fifth and Walnut streets, facing Walnut, with approaches from four directions, is of handsome pressed brick and steel construction of two stories, with large display windows. Two apartments above and to the rear of the store are available for residential purposes.

The store, commodious, with high ceilings, excellent lighting and heating system, is finished with modern shelving, counters and a refrigerating system for the meat store, located at the rear.

The shelves are finished in oak, with the counters in white and oak. The refrigerating system in use, guarantees the finest kept meats, poultry and delicacies.

Rue enters the grocery business experienced in all details. And her brother, L. P. In another column you will find the announcement of Rev. J. A. Lee of Glencoe, Owen county as a candidate for Senator from the Twenty-sixth Senatorial District composed of the counties of Owen, Grant, Gallatin, Pendleton and Boone. Rev. Lee was the Senator from this district when it was composed of the counties of Owen, Boone, Galatin and Grant.

He served during the 1922 and 1924 sessions of the Kentucky Legislature and his record there is an open book and we have not heard it criticized.

Rev. Lee is too well known by the people of this district to need further introduction than his announcement. He is always found exerting every effort in the interest of his constituents and as he has been a member of the Senate for the last two terms he believes that he is now in better position to look after the State and county business.

The political pot is beginning to boil. Candidates for county and district offices are stirring the voters' knowledge of the intricacies of entering the different contests. Rev. Lee has announced as a candidate for Senator from this district. Newton Sullivan, Jr., Miss M. E. Rogers and Asa McMullen are the candidates for County Clerk. L. T. Utz has announced as a candidate for Sheriff and that Harold Conner will announce as a candidate for this office in a short time, is the rumor.

Candidates for the other county offices and magistrates will be announcing in a short time. The office of magistrate is one of great importance to the people of the county, as they are the financial agents for all of us, the expenditure of the county funds is under their direction.

The Fiscal court which is composed of the magistrates should be composed of good business men, men who are competent to properly handle the tax fund and transact the county business.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RE-
CORDER

The controversy which has engendered American statesmen since the early days of the Republic is aflame again. It is: Shall the state Department or the Senate handle our foreign relations. The latest outcropping of the problem, as we indicated last week, results from the signing in Paris of an "agreement" providing for the disposition among the allies of the reparations payments made by Germany. The representatives of the United States at the Paris conference were there in an unofficial capacity; but the agreement which they concluded is an official one binding the United States, according to some members of the Senate, to go along with the European powers in enforcing the post-war demands on Germany. Then, too, Secretary Hughes holds that this agreement is NOT a treaty and, therefore, does not have to be submitted to the Senate for approval.

Trouble Develops, however, from the demands of the old anti-league group in the Senate, some times known as irreconcilables, for the text of the agreement and the privilege to accept it or turn it down. Among these objectors to the methods of the State Department is no less a figure than the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Borah, of Idaho.

Scanting Possible misunderstandings between the White House and the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, President Coolidge has taken steps to bring the members around to the views of the Administration through personal contacts at formal breakfasts and similar functions. The first of these affairs was attended by Mr. Richard Washburn Child, former Ambassador to Italy, who explained the Lausanne Treaty with Turkey shortly to be considered by the Senate. Political recognition of Turkey by the United States is involved in this treaty, leaving only Russia outside the pale after the pact is ratified.

THE Great Red Brick House in Faragut Square where Senator Frank Brandegee of Connecticut lived for many years before he ended his life with gas is being completely overhauled by the executors of the estate preliminary to selling it. Brandegee's debts at the time of his death aggregated several hundred thousand dollars with only $18,000 worth of property with which to liquidate them. A considerable sum, was raised in an auction of his books, paintings and other works of art which he had collected during his lifetime. Among these was the Rembrandt Peale portrait of George Washington which went to the Daughters of the American Revolution for $1,350.

Higher Pay for the members of the President's cabinet is the object of a bill which Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York has introduced in the House. Fish pointed out that the recent retirement of Secretary Hughes was necessitated by the fact that he had to go back to the law to make up for his losses incurred in his private fortune while serving the government. Cabinet officers now get $12,000 a year. Fish suggested that this be raised to $17,500. The present intensive campaign for Governmental economy is expected to prevent any salary increases, however.

The Spectacle of a member of the Senate being tried in a criminal court in Washington while Congress is in session is anticipated as a result of tentative plans of the Department of Justice to seek an indictment here against Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who ran for Vice-President last year on the Independent ticket. Wheeler is already under indictment in Montana for accepting money to appear before Government department for one of his constituents. As the activities for which Wheeler is alleged to have been paid took place in the Capital, the Attorney General sees no reason why the trial cannot be held here.

Every merchant realizes the necessity of a Clearance Sale at this time of the year. The season practically ends with the old year, and it matters not how good, how stylish, or how desirable the merchandise on hand at this time may be, it should be closed out so that the new merchandise for the next Spring can be shown at its proper time. This is a matter of duty to customers, and it is policy to make the Clearance Sale as early as possible, so that the purchasers will have the benefit of using the merchandise during the season for which it was intended.

Even if Bryan isn't right about evolution there's nothing left but to make monkeys of ourselves.

GARDEN FERTILIZERS
(By J. S. Gardner)
College of Agriculture

The best way to fertilize a garden is to use manure, but manure is not always enough.

Many gardeners wonder why they cannot grow radishes and turnips of any size. Even the tops are large—too large, in fact. The reason is that there is not enough of the plant food the roots require in manure. Manure is made up of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, and so are garden crops. But all garden crops are not alike in the proportions in which they need these three kinds of plant food.

Generally speaking, leaf crops, such as greens, onions, cabbage and corn, which is not a leaf crop, need nitrogen more than anything else; for them manure by itself is ideal. The fruit and seed crops, such as beans, tomatoes and melons, need more nitrogen, but they need a great deal of phosphorus besides. Beans and tomatoes that bloom profusely, but whose blossoms drop off without setting fruit, indicate that the fertilizer is one-sided; acid phosphate have been added to the manure, or the manure was used too freely.

The root crops need potash to make the best crops, but generally the gardens of Kentucky have enough of this plant food. If potatoes and the root crops make too much top and no bottom, it is a sign that there is too much nitrogen there; the remedy is to use less manure.

Making fertilizer recommendations to fit all cases is somewhat risky, but these general rules will fit fairly well:

1. For leaf crops and corn, manure used fairly fresh will do. Except for corn, these crops are benefited by topdressings of nitrate of soda, 1 pound to 100 feet of row, or 100 square feet of garden broadcast.
2. For seed and fruit crops, use manure, somewhat rolled, one ton to every 50 feet square of garden, together with 50 pounds of acid phosphate, broadcast.
3. For the root crops, if large tops have been encountered, withhold manure, or use portions of the garden manured the year previous, and broadcast acid phosphate, as for the fruit and seed crops.

KENTUCKY BOASTS 17,500 LADY FARMERS

Kentucky boasts 17,500 lady farmers. Of this number over 11,500 operate farms, 10,000 their own, 21 as managers and 1,300 as tenants, the data disclosed.

Dairying, poultry and hog raising are some of the branches of agriculture in which the women farmers of the state specialize, the analysis revealed. The land under cultivation by the feminine agriculturalists is close to 871,000 acres, of which 525,000 acres are improved. The value of these farms is 47 million dollars. The figures further revealed that women cultivate 4.2 per cent of all farms in the state, and 4.0 per cent of the total acreage, the value being 3.6 per cent of the whole. The average value of the land and buildings on farms operated by women was found to be in excess of $4,100.

Commenting on the large percentage of women who go in for dairying and poultry raising, the Institute sees a peculiar adaptation of these occupations to the feminine nature. From early times, it says, the average farm woman has had to care for the milk and act as dairymaid too. And milking cows and selling butterfat with its requirements of close attention to details seems to be a type of work that woman naturally takes to. The same appears to hold true for poultry raising. For pin money for the thousand and one items needed in the home, the sale of eggs and poultry and eggs ever been known as a sure means. Many a woman in need of more money has almost instinctively turned to milking cows and keeping hens.

FARMERS ORGANIZE BULL ASSOCIATIONS

Lexington, Ky.—E. M. Prewitt, extension field agent in dairying to the College of Agriculture, reports that the recent organization of two associations in Muhlenberg and Spencer and Shelby counties makes a total of 18 co-operative bull associations in Kentucky. Members of these 18 associations own 58 purebred bulls, and 2,320 cows, 92 per cent of which were formerly bred to low-grade bulls.

The association recently formed in Muhlenberg county has 78 members, who own 140 cows, 98 per cent of which were formerly bred to scrub bulls.

HOW MAN DIFFERS FROM OTHER ANIMALS

There is something really pathetic in the way a mother butterfly builds a nest for her children. In the first place the little home where the eggs are deposited represents a great deal of sacrifice, for it is lined with several layers of down plucked from the mother's own soft body. The eggs having been laid carefully upon this luxurious, pretty coverlet made of the same material.

The building of this downy nest is the latest earthly labor of the mother butterfly, for by the time it is complete her own delicate body is denuded of its natural covering and there is nothing left for her to do but die, a sacrifice which she promptly and heroically makes in the interest of the coming butterfly generation.

Some of the animal tragedies noted in the insect world by Buckles and other nature students are most pathetic to animals possessed of souls, but not to other animals. Nor do the victims of these tragedies realize their suffering, not knowing, more or less any of the conditions that are under which they are acting.

Tragedies among men are merely the phenomena due to their animal qualities. Divest man of his godlike nature and he would be as good-things as and regardless of the rights and comforts of his fellows as are fish, hogs or brutes. The godliness in man is measured by his conduct toward his fellows. Those in whom the animal predominates have to be restrained by laws, the same as hogs and cattle have to be restrained by fences or cordons of cow-punchers.

Tragedy belongs to the animal kingdom exclusively, and in order to have a tragedy man must lower himself into the animal sphere.

NEWSPAPERS AND CRIME

Mr. Herbert Swope, of the New York World, addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors defined the scope of journalism as "Life Reflected in Ink," and said that people "must partake of the ugliness as well as the beauty." It is true, nevertheless, that many managing editors permit and even encourage the printing of sordid sensational details of crime, to be circulated in the homes of their friends and neighbors, that, if appearing in a book on the family reading table, or the shelves of a school library, would call for these same editors a protest that would burn the binding and brand the authors as not fit for respectable association. Of course, times have changed since the days of Ben Franklin and Horace Greeley—even the old Police Gazette has become tamed—but that and results speak for themselves.

The consensus of opinion among judges and people who come in touch with criminals is that the newspapers are largely responsible for the alarming increase of crime and general demoralization of youth, both boys and girls.

As a rule the press strives to serve their public with what it wants but a line should be drawn somewhere. Newspapers are unquestionably educational to a large degree, and it cannot be claimed that the spreading out of all these wretched stories of crime is the sort of education needed. It should not be up to the public to show newspapers what they want—it has been repeatedly demonstrated in more ways than one during the past few years that newspapers have the power to show the people what they want.

If the advertisers and Chambers of Commerce should take action on the subject it should not be long before a marked improvement would be noticed in this particular.

Nothin' new 'bout this eclipse of the sun they talk about, as the same thing is done very often by the clouds.

The women folks should leave enough coloring materials so we shall be able to paint the house and garage this spring.

Hebron High School Notes

A program was given in Chapel Monday afternoon by the 7th and 8th grades with Chester Goodridge as instructor. It was an unusually good program. Robert Beemon gave a "chalk talk" proving his exceptional talent as an artist.

The orchestra was given its third lesson Thursday. It is progressing nicely and all the members are very enthusiastic.

Mr. O. H. Sadgen, field manager of The Country Gentleman, visited our school last Friday. He divided the scholars into three divisions and each section is trying to get more subscriptions than the other. There are several prizes given for a certain number of subscriptions and half the proceeds are given to the school. The winning division is to be given a party by the losers.

Don't forget the next meeting of the Parent-Teacher's Association held in the auditorium of the school Friday, Feb. 13th, at seven o'clock. A special program has been prepared.

The Girl Reserve and Hi-Y's hold their regular meetings each week.

RUNYAN'S TWENTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY AT LATONIA

Rev. H. C. Runyan, pastor of the Latonia Christian church, celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of his connection with that church last Sunday, Feb. 1st. When Rev. Runyan preached his first sermon there twenty-three years ago, it was to an audience of 22, and last Sunday, (twenty-three years later) he spoke to approximately 1200.

Rev. Runyan, whose health caused him to abandon an extensive European tour last summer, is now forming a touring party, which will visit such interesting points as London, Paris, the battle fields, Rome, Venice, Naples, Athens, Egypt and Palestine, under the special direction of a competent guide. If anyone is interested in this trip Rev. Runyan will be glad to furnish them with particulars.

This excursion will take place during June, July and August of 1925.

VICTOR OEBERTING, DEAD

Victor Oeberting a well known citizen of Lawrenceburg, Ind., died at St. Baptist Hospital, Louisville, on Jan. 23th, 1925, aged 67 years. His many friends on this side of the Ohio will be grieved to hear of his death.

Mr. Oeberting, son of John and Theresa Oeberting of Alsace-Lorraine was born February 2, 1858 at Lawrenceburg. He was married to Anna Gehring, to which union four children were born; two sons, Emanuel and Marion of Lawrenceburg, and one daughter Mrs. Anna Geise, and one child who died in infancy.

Mr. Oeberting served as representative in the Legislature in the 64th General Assembly, 1905, where he made many acquaintances and retained them as friends. He succeeded the late John B. Garner in the Garner brewing business, later turning the business into the Garner Ice Plant, with plants both here and at Lawrenceburg.

HUGHES TO RETIRE

Years ago, when politics held less conscience for public men of the opposition, and Charles E. Hughes was Governor of New York, he was cartooned as "the little man in the big office." If the originator of the then clever epigrammatical statement still lives, even he might some what modify or render less stinging the pointed phrase. For Mr. Hughes, as Secretary of State, has shown marked ability as an international lawyer.

He is to retire to private life and work. The emoluments of high offices such as his, while comforting, are not fabulous. Not as a suggestion, but as a bold comparison (and assuming that his talents ran in that direction), Mr. Hughes could make more money in vaudeville or in motion pictures, than in the high office that he holds. But if the people felt that they directly paid the salaries of the vaudeville and motion picture artists as they do in paying Cabinet or other government employees through direct taxation or government revenue, no doubt the salaries of the stars would come down with a crash.

One of the problems of government always has been and always will be the keeping of salaries of public officers within the happy medium of being large enough to compensate for ability and efficiency and at the same time small enough to prevent attraction of the unscrupulous.

THE INCOME TAX MAN IS COMING.

Collector of Internal Revenue, Robert H. Lucas, announces that a deputy from his office will be in Burlington, Ky., on Feb. 9th, 1925, for the purpose of assisting individual taxpayers in preparing their returns. Mr. Lucas says that this service will be absolutely free, and urges taxpayers to avail themselves of the assistance and advice of the deputy. He is sent here to help the taxpayers—give him an opportunity to help you.

The above is the complete standing of all candidates up to Saturday night, Feb. 7, candidates under the rules of the campaign being held a part of the votes that have been cast to them on subscription payments.

Down the home stretch they go. The race for the Essex Coach will soon be over. The line-up for the grand finals is indeed a worthy one. All racers are now running true to form and it is one of the best guesses you ever made if you can now pick the winner. The big line-up of favorites is now bunched in the home stretch. Who will nose out is one of the all absorbing questions that is now before the people of Boone county. Every section of the county is represented in this race by a worthy and dependable worker. All eyes are focused on the outcome. Indeed it is interesting and exciting. The race comes to a close at 8 p. m., next Saturday night at the Peoples Deposit Bank in Burlington. The sealed box was placed in the bank last Monday morning where it will remain until it is opened by the Judges. Candidates will seal their collections along with their reports and deposit same in box at the bank. No one connected with the campaign department or the Recorder office will have access to the box. This sealed box holds the secret as to who will be the winners of the various prizes that the Recorder is giving away in this campaign.

A Keen Kutter hatchet, donated for the purpose by W. L. Kirkpatrick, is the key to the sealed box. As the clock strikes the hour of eight one of the judges will take the hatchet and smash the box and the count will then commence. Within less than one hour the judges will have the audit made and the winners declared. There will be no long waits.

The Recorder race has developed considerable rivalry between the towns of the county. As it stands today wisecracks say that certain towns have their backs bowed to pull down the Essex Coach for their favorite candidate. Of course if any of the towns including Petersburg, Hebron, Constance, Burlington, Florence, Union, Walton, or Verona should make an organized effort to land the big prize there is not a doubt in the world but they could easily put their candidate over the top. Erlanger, although not represented by a candidate has furnished more subscriptions to date than any other portion on the Recorder list. The people of Erlanger have shown a very friendly spirit toward the Recorder and if the people of Erlanger should take the notion they could easily cast the deciding vote in this campaign. We are proud of the showing that Erlanger has made in our campaign.

One of the human elements that plays a big part at the close of every campaign is that of family pride, and there is no question but what that element is entering largely into this campaign. In the veins of our workers runs the best blood of good old Boone county. Just think there's the Browns and the Seagins; the Aylors; the Gaines and the Berkshires; the Browns and the Rileys; the Cottons and the Roberts; the Goodridges and the Finches; the

DOWN THE HOME STRETCH (By the Club Manager)

The best blood of Kentucky is now surging down the home stretch in one of the most interesting races that was ever staged in Boone county.

Hey there Bill, come to Burlington next Saturday and see the finish of one of the best races you ever attended in your whole life.

Yes, everybody is coming to Burlington next Saturday. There will be something doing all day long. The human race is certainly interesting.

We have enjoyed our stay in

Annual Cross-Word Puzzle

Boone county. We know we have met some of the best people on earth right here, and we are going to tell the whole world about you wherever we go.

Remember this: The unknown strength of candidates is what puts them over the top. If your voting strength is ever known, you will never win. There can be no mistake about that.

Finice Albert is now considered a dark horse. His colors you know, are black.

Cecile B. is a strong favorite among the wise bookmakers. Here is a racer well worthy of the confidence of her backers.

Francis Virginia will have to show some class to overcome some of the other favorites. Maybe she can do it.

Fannie Lois, the Dixie Queen, is showing class in starting down the home stretch. She is well groomed for the finals.

Elizabeth Dell, otherwise known as the Kentucky Belle, is still headed down the home stretch with charges of scoring on the other favorites. She's classy sure nuf.

Alma V. is still recognized as a favorite in some quarters. Sickness has prevented her, some in her last race. Maybe she will show her old class in the final.

Lucy is all-set for the finish. The bookmakers of Union will show that she is a decided favorite if you happen to get a squint at their cards.

Eugenie hopes to take a strong lead in the finals. Her colors are red and her complexion is getting redder, and her backers are getting redder, and that helps some.

Eva K. will have to speed up a little, now that she has entered the home stretch. Get back your old form and you will be a record breaker, Eva K.

Virgie, the fleetfooted racer from the banks of the Ohio is strong on the bookmakers ticket. You can get a good call if you think they are wrong.

Deacon Lee's stock has gone up one hundred per cent as he entered the finals. No use talking this "old horse" is showing class.

A. K. S. has never wavered to the right or left in her five weeks' race. The longer she runs the better she gets. Four, eleven, forty-four.

Elmo J. and Annie Laura are now training for the next race.

Dora May is still in the race; she hopes to win a prize and we are hoping that she will too.

The Club Manager is heavy hearted this week. The race will soon be over and he will have to go elsewhere and line up a new set of ponies. He wishes he could take this string with him, for he never hopes to whip into line a better all round bunch than his racers are right here in Boone county, Kentucky.

Our racers are a classy bunch. We wish we were related to John

D. Rockefeller, for if we were we would certainly have six or more Essex Coaches here next Saturday night to be awarded to that many deserving, conscientious and hard working candidates. It would do our heart good to enjoy such an experience. The world would then look brighter to us.

To the readers of our column: We hope we have interested you some with our mutterings on this campaign for this is a new departure in our campaign work, introduced here on the Recorder, and if we have amused any of you we are glad for we have enjoyed it no little ourselves. Come to the finish of the race next Saturday so that we may tell all of you whom we have met—good-bye. We hope to come back some time—M. B.

The following candidates have won the distinction of having been in the largest and best reports for the day previous:

BURLEY CUT-OUT

FOR YEAR 1925 IS CALLED OFF—RESOLUTION IS BRIEF—C. C. SLEET ATTENDS

Last Tuesday afternoon, after an all day meeting of county chairmen and the board of directors of the cut-out organization, the proposed plan of eliminating the growing of any tobacco in 1925 was called off.

It was not until about six hours had been occupied in deliberation that a decision was reached. The first vote was 12 to 11 in favor of forsaking the plan, but the brief resolution to nullify all of the past four or five months work of the organization was finally passed unanimously. The resolution was worded as follows:

"Be it resolved, That the pledges made by the delegates on November 15th, 1924, are hereby released and the cut-out called off."

Twenty-three counties voted in the meeting, Boone being represented by C. C. Sleet, of Beaver Lick, who contended for the carrying out of the cut-out plans until the very last.

It was contended by those who favored the above resolution that it was useless to attempt the furtherance of cut-out plans in face of the growing sentiment against it, since the recent large sales of burley leaf.

Claimed folks should keep their feet dry in winter, but some are more in need of keeping their throats dry.

$975.00 Essex Coach.

Nine Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars—a few dollars less than a thousand, is a whole lot of money. Just think that it is 19 fifty dollar bills; 97 ten dollar bills; 195 five dollar bills and a bushel basket of one dollar bills. That amount of money is going to SLIP right thru the fingers of some one next Saturday night. Work this week will WIN it. WHO WILL DO THE WORK?

PERILOUS RIDE

TAKEN BY FOUR-YEAR OLD CHILD BEHIND RUNAWAY HORSE IN BURLINGTON LAST SUNDAY

The first runaway horse that has been seen in Burlington in many a day, broke loose with a vengeance last Sunday afternoon. The animal belonged to Geo. Denmler from out on the East Bend pike and had been hitched in front of Mrs. Alice Snyder's residence, when Mrs. Denmler and little daughter came out and started home. Mrs. Denmler placed the child in the buggy and was about to climb in herself, when the horse suddenly became frightened and leaped into the air with Mrs. Denmler holding the lines and between the wheels.

In a desperate effort to save her child from what seemed certain death, she held to the lines allowing the horse, which was a powerful one, to drag her almost a hundred feet before she was forced to relinquish the reins.

The horse then increased his speed and successfully ran a gauntlet of a half mile through the entire town, despite a number of attempts to stop him enroute.

At the lower end of town however, just as he was about to go over the creamery hill into the creek, he was halted by Jesse Eddins and William Satchwell, of Florence, who had been visiting Mr. Eddins. These men in all probability saved the child from being dragged to a horrible death, as the buggy would certainly have overturned in crossing the creek, which was but a few yards distant.

During the entire journey the child chilled the blood in bystanders' veins with its incessant screaming, however its intuition prompted it to maintain a secure hold on the bow of the buggy top, which saved it from being jolted out.

Mrs. Denmler was not apparently very seriously injured though considerably bruised. She was certainly not lacking in nerve, for despite the advice of friends, she calmly climbed into the buggy and drove the fractious horse safely home. Furthermore she said she was going to drive him whenever she desired hereafter.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE CO.

BY PROF. A. M. YEALEY

From 1754 to 1763 the colonies hesitated to follow up their explorations in the Ohio Valley on account of the French and Indian war, but at its close we find Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia still encouraging the settlement of this vast territory.

Col. Geo. Croghan an Indian agent in 1765 visited Big Bone Lick and encamped there. Eight years later Virginia sent the following company of men: Thomas Bullitt, Hancock Taylor, Robert McAfee, Simon Kenton and James Douglas. We are indebted to Mr. Douglas for the records he kept of what he saw at Big Bone Lick. "He says the Lick constituted about 10 acres, bare of trees, no herbage of any kind, three flowing springs whose waters would produce one bushel of salt to every 550 gallons of water, also a large number of bones strewn over the ground, these bones being so large and long that he used the ribs for tent poles."

There have been four collections of these bones. The first collection was made in 1803 by Dr. Goforth who sent it to England where it was divided into two parts. One part to the Royal College of Surgeons in London. One part to Dublin, Ireland, and the other to Edinburgh, Scotland.

The second collection was made by order of President Jefferson in 1805, this collection was divided between the American Philosophical Society and the French Naturalist, Mr. Cuvier. The third collection in 1819, by the Western Museum Society. The fourth in 1831 by Mr. Finnell, who sold the same for $2,000 to a Mr. Graves, who resold to a firm in N. Y., for $5,000. It has been estimated that at least the bones of 100 Mastodons, 25 elephants and other animals were collected in the above four collections. Undoubtedly these animals were in search of salt and as Mr. Douglas says, the land being marshy they became mired in the mud and died of exhaustion, thus leaving many of their bones in an upright position.

CUT-OUT DECLARED OFF.

I realize this is no New Year's news that this day has either seen it in the dailies or heard it on the phone. But as your representative want to make my report. We as divers of the cut-out board had realized for several weeks that the sentiment had been changing, that was why they called so many meetings to try to stem the tide. But with each sale of the pool tobacco gave the loose leaf fellows more pep and encouraged every dumper to wait, pause until we felt better to call it off, had it not been for the acreage we could have reduced the acreage but knowing that they recognize no moral law, that when the pool men would cut their acreage they would double their lip. But poolers keep a stiff upper lip and hold on there is being a plan worked out to make the pooler on an equal with the dumper. But we thought best not to adopt that resolution at this time as you noticed by the report in the dailies. It is not best to let the enemy know where you are entrenched and when you are going to shoot. So we just adopted a short resolution declaring the cut-out off. "The old saying" We must fight the devil with fire. So fellow poolers go on with your farming as usual if you quit raising tobacco it will make a better market for the dumper. But we will meet him on the open market with the advantage if tobacco falls below the cost of production we have our warehouses and re-drying houses and we will force the dumper to come in the pool or sell his tobacco at a loss over the open market. They have been riding on our backs to market for the last three years. Now we want to ride and we will be in a position to do it. But don't put all of your eggs in one basket, raise tomatoes, potatoes, onions and can up fruit, vegetables and everything to live on, raise corn, hay and let us economize in every way until we win the battle. We are fighting for the poor man and his family for tobacco is the poor man's crop. There has only been two classes of farmers who have made any money in the last three years that is the bootlegger who has made his crop into moonshine and the tobacco dumper, and they are about on a par, the bootlegger operates in open violation to the law and the tobacco dumper under the protection of the law violates every moral law of God and Man and profits off of the labor and sacrifices of his neighbor who is trying to get a living wage for the poor man's labor. My Bible teaches me to love the Lord thy God with all thy heart soul mind and strength and thy neighbor as thyself and also our Savior says pray for those who despitefully use you and say all manner of evil against you falsely for we are to love them as we love ourselves. So we are to pray for the bootlegger and the tobacco dumper, and if we can we have reached a high point in Christian living. But right and not might will win. For what will it profit a man if he gains the whole world and lose his own soul? Respectfully C. C. SLEET

As Mr. Perry Allen was preparing for his (much needed) regular Saturday night tubbing, a bubble of voices pierced his listening ears just outside his door. His heart began thumping a regular tattoo against his trembling shirtless form, he donned outer garments hastily, rushed to the door—breathless, only to be pounced upon by a mob of good friends yelling "Surprise," and beating upon him at the same time. It was a little hard on our good uncle Perry as his wife was using a large paddle that she holds in reserve for such occasions, but Uncle Perry took it all in great fun and soon everybody was having a jolly good time. A table of good eats seems to follow the crowd as if by magic, but on this occasion the good folks surpassed themselves in every detail. We hope Uncle Perry will allow us to help him celebrate all his remaining birthdays just as we did this one.

NOW OR NEVER!

Saturday Is Election Day and You Have a Friend On The Ticket.

Campaign closes when the clock strikes eight Saturday night. Be on time not one minutes grace allowed.
BETTER BE SAFE THAN SORRY.

By the Publishers.

The RECORDER takes this last opportunity to compliment the club members in the Salesmanship Club just closing for the excellent work they have done to date.

In selecting the prizes to be awarded, only the best were considered and whoever wins the big $975 Essex Coach is assured of a brand new car of sterling worth. The other prizes are in keeping with the liberal lines along which the entire campaign has been drawn.

But few hours remain of the campaign. To those who win, the heartiest congratulations. To those who fail, truthfully say that they are deserving of earnest commendation.

Mr. Russell, assisted by Mrs. Russell, who have managed the campaign for us, have proven themselves fair in all matters and the RECORDER takes this opportunity to publicly acknowledge that the trust placed in them has been lived up to the letter.

Immediately after the close of the campaign, records will be an open book. If you think your competitors did not work and turn in the business, come to the Recorder office any time and see for yourself.

In conclusion, the RECORDER again wishes to compliment the members and thank them for their work in assisting in the building of the wonderful circulation we now enjoy and appreciate.

The race will be over in a few more hours, and we make this expression of good will in advance, knowing that every member realizes that he or she has had and will have to the finish, an absolutely square deal.

RIDDELL & BERKSHIRE,

Campaign in Judges' Hands

As one of the judges who will count the votes Saturday evening in the Recorder Salesmanship Club Campaign, I wish to make this final explanation to the candidates.

A sealed ballot box has been secured and placed in the lobby of the Peoples Deposit Bank, where it will remain until campaign ends and will not be opened until 8 o'clock Saturday evening, February 14th, at which time the votes will be counted.

The judges will begin audit of the reports of the various contestants at 8 o'clock and will award the prizes according to the published rules of the Recorder Campaign.

In making the final count, the additions will be made on a standard adding machine and all votes will be preserved for future audit if the members should be dissatisfied and every possible precaution will be taken to see that no error is made in any particular.

From now until the final hour votes will be polled in the sealed ballot box at the Peoples Deposit Bank and not at the Recorder office, and the standing of members will not be made known to anyone until the final count on Saturday evening.

No money will be accepted or votes issued unless accompanied by subscription orders. Only currency or certified checks will be accepted in the ballot box.

Further information in keeping with the rules and regulations can be secured from the manager at Campaign Department of Recorder.

NELL H. MARTIN,
Asst. Cashier Peoples Deposit Bank

By The Manager.

The Boone County RECORDER Circulation Campaign is now in its final stages. No collections are being accepted at the Campaign Headquarters this week. All reports are made in special envelopes and are being deposited in the sealed Ballot Box at the Peoples Deposit Bank, Burlington.

The campaign is now in the hands of the judges who will count the votes and make the awards Saturday night at eight p. m., February 14th.

Hundreds of new subscriptions have been added to the subscription list of the Recorder until there is no doubt of its superiority as an advertising medium to the business men and Kenton counties.

Teeming with live local news from every section of Boone county, The RECORDER is without doubt, the leading weekly newspaper of Northern Kentucky. You can make it a better paper still with your co-operation and good will.

It has been a pleasure to have worked with the energetic and ambitious members of our Salesmanship Campaign. All the workers have shown a commendable spirit of fairness, kindness and good will. Their work has been an accomplishment to be proud of and we feel sure that the Salesmanship experience it has taught will be of untold value in years to come.

During the several weeks that Mrs. Russell and I have been in Burlington we have learned to like the town, its people and the vast country surrounding it. It has been a pleasure to have lived in the "best small town in the U. S. A." That pleasure will linger long in our memory.

The race will soon be over. To the winners—congratulations, to those who go down in defeat, we can truthfully say that they fought a good fight, and especially commendation is due those who are game to the finish.

M. B. RUSSELL, Club Manager

A General Invitation is hereby extended to the citizens of Boone County in general to attend the final count. Announcement of winners will be made within one hour after the Ballot Box is opened.

THE FIRST ADVERTISEMENT.

The first known English newspaper advertisement appeared in the "Moderator" in 1649, and ever since the wise have been profiting from the use of advertisements.

It did not portray the advantages of the newest breeches and silk stockings, or describe in lavish terms the beauties of the popular hoop skirt, but entreated the reader to "inquire after a blackish and kind of pebbled ang, very poor, his face, feet and hands white, and a little white tip in his tail. He was stolen from grass from John Rotherham, of Barnet, in Hertfordshire. Whosoever will inquire, find him out and bring or send tidings of him, shall have what contentment they will for their pains."

The modern predecessor of the first advertisement is a "lost ad" which is still performing a valuable service after almost 300 years of existence.

It matters not whether a "plebeian nag" or some valuable possession is lost, a "lost ad" seldom fails to get results.

T. B. Cason, who carries the daily mail from Burlington to Grant submitted to a mastoid operation last week. This is the second operation of this nature that Mr. Cason has had. During his absence from duty the mail is being carried by Shelton Stephens, of Bellevue.

The average share of the national to be about $2800, but it is not possible to obtain that share merely by asking for it.

Now if making your income tax

SHEEP AND DOG OWNERS SHOULD URGE SLIGHT AMENDMENT OF LAW FOR THEIR PROTECTION.

Last week's issue of the REC-ORDER carried an article urging the necessity of an organization having for its purpose the mutual protection of two branches of our property, namely, sheep and dogs.

Our citizens as a whole pay taxes on sheep, why not on dogs? The sheep has its place in life, so has the dog. Where would the suffering victims of diphtheria in Nome Alaska, have been today had it not been for the heroic efforts of a dauntless dog team? Correspondingly the dog has its place in our life in this country.

The sheep owners deserve protection—they pay for it, and likewise do the dog-owners deserve it—if they pay for it. It is one of our foremost public problems in Boone co., and is deserving of a solution.

We have our good roads associations for the solution of road problems, the Red Cross for the solution of humanitarian problems, why not an association for an efficient solution of this problem?

You may ask—what would be the plan of operation of this association? Ask the members of the past few grand juries or an answer to this.
We merely suggest one plan, but there are several. Here it is briefly:

If a sheep owner fails to pay taxes on his sheep, they will be sold in sufficient numbers to pay said taxes. But some dog owners of our county fail to contribute to the public fund and there is apparently no simplified method by which we may arrive at the correct number of dogs not licensed, or the identity of the owners.

The County Clerk has been called before each grand jury to lend his assistance in this matter, but under the law he is helpless. He lists the dog owners who pay their dog tax on one book provided by the State for that purpose. When the grand jury wishes to investigate whether or not a certain man has or has not paid his dog license, it is compelled to run this entire list of probably 1,- 000 names in order to ascertain this fact.

Now the Assessor lists the dogs and makes up his books and it would be just as easy for him to list them systematically, not provided he is provided by the State with the proper books on which to list them.
He does all he is required to do under the present system.

A book should be provided for each precinct, and each dog owner listed alphabetically, then these books turned over to the County Clerk. Then when a man comes into the Clerk's office to pay his dog tax the clerk could turn to his book and check his name. This would enable the grand jury to readily ascertain the number of dogs not licensed, those names not checked would be the offenders.

Let the sheep and dog owners form an organization which will think the passage of this slight amendment to our dog law—we think this the primary need.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Born on the 12th day of February 1809, in Hardin county, Ky., of poor struggling parents, Abraham Lincoln has taken his place among the world's immortals and few are the corners of the earth where his birthday is not known and celebrated.

The life history of Lincoln has filled thousands of volumes and its general features are familiar, or should be, with every American citizen, and every boy and girl.

Lincoln was a man of the common people. He derived most of his good and greatness from his mother to whose memory he was devoted.
He rose out of the wilderness of the continent like a giant compounded of its elemental rock and soil and time. He put his shoulder under the most stupendous burden this country has ever called upon one of its sons to bear, and the masterful ability and patience and wisdom with which he carried that burden to the summit of a victory which became the altar of his sacrifice, is a story that ages will tell.

He was elected president of the United States on November 6, 1860, and on January 1, 1863, issued his famous proclamation of emancipa-tion, and the 13th Amendment to the Constitution, abolishing slavery in the United States was adopted two years later.

Mr. Lincoln was reelected November 8, 1864. His second inaugural address is the briefest of all our presidential addresses, but it has no equal in lofty eloquence and austere morality.

The infinite tragedy of his life was that, after rising the people to the border of the promised land of a restored union he was not permitted to enter in. On the evening of April 14, 1865, he was assassinated while attending a theatre and peacefully passed away the next day.
He was buried amid the mourning of the whole nation near Springfield, Ill., where an appropriate monument marks his last resting place.

We live under his shadow today.
The touch of his immortal hand is upon us, and we thank God that he gave us this man of faith and prayer and wisdom at a time when the nation was in deepest distress.

Pine-Tar and Honey
Still Best for Chest
Colds and Coughs

Our mothers and grandmothers would never be without pine tar syrup in the house for coughs, chest colds, etc. This was many years ago, but modern medicine has never been able to improve on this time-tested remedy. Doctors say the pine tar is hard to beat for quick loosening and removing the phlegm and congestion that are the actual cause of the cough. At the same time pine tar and honey soon soothe and heal all irritation and soreness.

The kind that has been used with never failing success in thousands of families for years is that known as Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey.
This is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other quick acting, healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief.
It cures absolutely no opiates, narcotics or harmful drugs, so can be given to young children—fine for spasmodic croup. It tastes good, too. If you want the best, a medicine that often stops the severest cough overnight, be sure you get Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It costs only 50c at any good drug store.

"TRUTH FOR TRUTH'S SAKE"

It was President Coolidge who recently urged the seeking of truth for truth's sake, making it clear that this age-old maxim has not obtained in any marked degree.

In politics, it is perhaps true, that the doing of right for the right's sake has not been looked upon as practicable by very many legislators, in the presence of opposing financial interests which profit by the present situation.

In municipal affairs and management, truth is too often misconstrued as a means to an end.

In business transactions truth is too often looked upon as a non-essential.

In the field of religion loyalty to the faith of the farmers has stood in the way of real progress, resulting in more than two hundred creeds and beliefs that keep the mighty Christian army divided into more or less hostile camps frequently fighting each other instead of following the redemptive truths advocated by the Master.

The President's appeal commends itself to Christian believers of every name as never before for it is coming to be recognized that failure to be true is the greatest mistake any man, any church, any nation can make.

"Do the right for right's sake," properly inculcated in the minds of our youth would result in wonderful changes in every sphere of life after one generation.

OBEY OUR LAWS OR GET OUT.

Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, commenting on Sir Broderick Hartwell's boast that he sends $5,000,000 worth of whiskey annually into this country in spite of our laws, declared that:

"Our form of government above all forms of government must rest upon the sound principle of 'obedience to law because it is the law.'
The Eighteenth Amendment declared a great national policy. It gave notice to all the world that the U.
S. would undertake the stupendous task of putting an end to liquor traffic. We were entitled and are entitled to have this policy respected by all other governments and entitled to have them compel their nationals to respect it."

In all probability some of the "nationals" engaged in the smuggling business, who have a hard road to travel, for it is "a poor rule that will not work two ways." Even Turkey demanded that foreigners must obey the laws of the Ottoman Empire—or get out.

ACQUIRING REFINEMENT

A friend who recently travelled on an excursion train carrying some hundreds of college girls, was impressed with the refined manners of these girls. Though they had much going on, there was a restraint that showed good breeding.

Only a small proportion of American girls can graduate from colleges. But any young person in Boone county who desires to make the most of herself, can attain this finish with out expense.

By associating with educated people, reading good books, cultivating a pleasant voice, and keeping one's eyes open for every chance to do courteous things, the way is open for the daughter of the humblest home to become a refined and cultivated lady.

Claimed that the Bible is against men being ruled by women, and the small boy will say this is perfectly right.

Mrs. Lizzie Hawkins Winston.

Mrs. Lizzie Hawkins Winston was born near Ghent, Carroll county, Ky., Oct. 12th, 1840. Leaving her mother when quite young, her indulgent father bestowed upon her the loving care of both and gave her the priceless gift of a splendid education. She was married to John B. Winston of Boone county, Ky., in 1871 who preceded her to the grave seventeen years ago. To this union five children were born. Mrs. C. E. Stephens, Mrs. E. A. Threlkald, Albert S. Winston and two little boys who died in infancy. Since his death she has made her home with her two daughters, who did everything in their power to make life enjoyable, which was unusually free from care. At the age of fourteen she united with the Baptist church. She was devoted to her church and the cause of the Master. Having known her intimately, the greater part of my life, I can not remember once ever having been in her company when she did not dwell upon the spiritual life, admonishing all to give their service to Jesus. She was a constant reader of the Bible. Having read it many times over. Four times straight through. The influence of this beautiful christian life will continue throughout the ages, for "No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife. And all life is not power and strength hereby."

For two years she has been in failing health. During the time, three devoted daughters and their families and her son were untiring in their efforts to minister to her every want and give relief, so far as it was possible. On Feb. 4th, 1925, her spirit passed from earth to be with Him, whom she loved to serve. Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon Feb. 6th, at Petersburg Baptist church by her pastor Rev. J. W. Campbell in the presence of many relatives and friends, after which she was laid to rest beside her husband in Petersburg cemetery.

Besides the two daughters, son, son-in-law and three grandchildren, Roberts, Beulah and Eugene there are many others by whom she will be sadly missed.

In her passing we can but recall the words of Bryant, admonishing that we—

"So live that when thy summons comes to join The innumerable caravan that moves to that mysterious realm where each shall take His chamber in the silent halls of death. Thou go, not like the quarry slave at night

Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave, Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

SHEEP AND DOG OWNERS ASSOCIATION

A meeting was held in Falmouth on Saturday, Jan. 24th, for the purpose of organizing a Sheep and Dog Owners Protective Association. A number of farmers were present and succeeded in effecting an organization which was set to work at once. The first move of importance was the appointment of canvassers from each precinct, with instructions to list all dogs in their districts and report them to the association.

This movement may or may not prove a success, but whether it does or not, we think it a step in the right direction. Each Boone county grand jury for the past two years has spent a part of its time in trying to work out some practical plan of caring for the sheep and dog situation, but have as yet been unable to solve it.

It would be well for Boone county grand jury for the past two years to follow the example of Pendleton county, and try another course.

ADVERTISING BROUGHT RESULTS

An exchange prints the following experience of a man who took advantage of all devices advertised to save the operating expense of his Ford. "He installed a carburetor that was guaranteed to save 20 per cent. The first time he put in a special park plug that was guaranteed to save 20 per cent. Then he added an intake super-heater that was guaranteed to save 20 per cent. He next added a special rear axle that was also guaranteed to save 20 per cent. He put on high pressure 'cords' that promised a 20 per cent saving. He then put on a radiator cap that cut another 20 per cent. And now with a fuel economy of 120 per cent, he has to stop every hundred miles and bale fuel out of the gas tank to keep it from running over!"

OUR EX-GOVERNORS.

With only one living ex-President of the United States, Judge William H. Taft, the office has come to be looked on as most taxing and the holder of the office of the vitality of the state. This recalls that Kentucky has six ex-governors, they being in the order of service: W. H. Taylor, J. C. W. Beckham, Augustus E. Wilson, A. O. Stanley, James D. Black and Edwin P. Morrow.

Mr. Beckham became governor in 1900, and Mr. Morrow served a term that expired in 1923. Only one Kentucky governor, serving in the last quarter of a century has died. He was James B. McCreary, who for more than forty years enjoyed the distinction of being an ex-governor. This was due to the fact that he served a previous term as governor in the latter part of the 70s.—Cynthiana Democrat.

The following from the Kelat correspondent to the Falmouth Outlook is worth republishing:

"We enjoy being helped, but if we can not get the help then we believe in going it alone. This will apply to road building as well as to other things. These thoughts come to us every time we travel a mud road. For instance, if no one would come to our assistance, were we living on a mud road, even if the country turned its head, we would get busy and build out of that mud. But up jumps the other fellow with 'some one else would be using that road, being so benefited without having contributed a penny.' Perhaps, but why should we care? It's not the other fellow we would be digging for. Hanging up in the mud because some one else did—we would by no means do it. Work your road, getting help if you can, but work the road and enjoy winter as well as summer. Life is too short to be squandered in a mud hole."

Home and Farm

County Agent M. H. Sasser has enrolled 800 boys and girls in club work in Russell county. More than 400 of the juniors will raise poultry, more than 100 purchased pigs, while 260 will grow corn. One club has a membership of 125, another 87, and a third 81.

A boys' and girls' calf club show at Louisville attracted more than 400 people according to County Agent C. E. Miller. The grand champion ship at the recent Fat Stock Show in Louisville was won by James Robinson, one of Mr. Miller's club boys.

County Agent R. J. Matson has arranged with eight Boone county farmers to apply lime to the soil this year, in order that remanstration may be made of the value of lime.

Farmers in the vicinity of Harnden, Brockbridge county, have signed up to grow more than 300 acres of pickles this year, according to County Agent Jos. Negeotte. A pickle company promised to establish a pickle station provided 200 acres were devoted to this crop. This acreage may be doubled before planting time.

County Agent Robert F. Spence is conducting a lime, marl and alfalfa campaign in Madison county. Posters have been placed along the main roads, and personal work done among farmers. There are several marl beds in the county.

EDITOR GETS IN BAD

An Oklahoma editor, just about ready to send his forms to press, "pled" a couple of articles, one concerning a public sale and the other a write-up of a wedding. He asked the office devil to get the two together—and he did.

Here is how he put the two together, and the mixture was not to the editor until an angry preacher and the mother of the bride appeared on the scene:

"William Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at a public auction at my barn one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses on her breast and two white calves before the happy crowd of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of seventy guests including two milk cows six mules and bob sled. Rev. Jackson tied the municipal knot with two hundred feet of hay rope; the bridal couple left on one John Deere gang plow for an extensive trip terms to suit the purchaser. They will be at home to their friends with one good wheelbarrow and a few kitchen utensils, after ten months from date of sale to responsible parties and some fifty chickens"—Exchange.

Examination For Candidates For TAX Commissioner.

The law of Kentucky provides that before the name of any candidate can be placed on the ballot at the primary election for County Tax Commissioner, he shall hold a certificate from the State Tax Commissioners, that he has been examined by them and that he is qualified to hold the office. The State Tax Commission prepares a list of questions on the tax laws of Kentucky and on the applicants experience as an assessor, his knowledge of the revenue laws and geography of the county, his knowledge of the industry and his elementary training and business experience to fill the office. The questions are mailed to the County Attorney who will hold the examination on the second Monday in March, which is the 9th day of next month. Any one desiring to take this examination must appear at the court house at nine o'clock March 9th and the answers to all questions shall be made in the applicants own hand writing.

EVERYONE MAKES MISTAKES.

We made a mistake in last week's issue of the Sentinel. A good subscriber told us about it. The same day there was a letter in our post-office box that didn't belong to us. We called for No. 98 over the telephone and got 198. We asked for a spool of No. 50 thread and when we got home found it was No. 60. The train was reported thirty minutes late. We arrived at the station 20 minutes after train and the train was gone. We got our milk bill, and there was a mistake of 10 cents in our favor. We felt sick, and the doctor said we were eating too much meat. We hadn't tasted meat for two months. The garage man said the jitney was missing because it needed a new timer. We cleaned a spark plug, and it's run fine ever since. Yes, we made a mistake in last week's issue of this paper.—Glen Elder Sentinel.

INCREASES SUBSCRIPTION RATE

The publisher of the Vienna (Ill) Times has announced that the subscription price of the paper hereafter will be $2 a year, the lack of advertising making it impossible to continue publication at the rate of $1.50. It appears that many weekly papers are facing the same difficulty. More advertising than can be obtained is necessary, these papers claim, for the continuation of profitable publication at a rate of $1.50, and in the majority of cases, they state, a $2.00 subscription rate is necessary in order to insure the publication of a good paper. This is the right theory. The reader and advertiser should both pay a just proportionate share of the expenses of a newspaper.

COUNTRY CHILDREN'S SUCCESS.

It is commonly remarked by teachers, that the children from the families of farmer make unusually good progress in the schools. It will be found also that the children from the homes of the country towns do unusually well when they go on to the higher institutions of learning.

The reason is, that there is a strong tendency in cities for people to look for fortune to luck and unexpected strokes of success. In the country, people learn that such results are achieved only by hard work. That spirit leads the children to study, and they get ahead faster and know the school subjects better as

Most radicals should be given a powerful root.

ELIJAH HODGES.

Elijah Hodges, son of Wm. and Ann Savill Hodges, was born Jan. 28, 1839, and died on the anniversary of his birth 1925, aged eighty-six years.

In the year 1861 he was united in marriage to Fess Lyon L. Riggs, who preceded him to the great beyond thirty years ago. To this union seven children were born, three of whom resided on in the early years of life.

A friend to all, a good man, a kind and generous neighbor, a most devoted, loving father has passed from among us.

His aim in life was to support his family honestly, live for the right and do no man any harm.

He showed his love of country and patriotism by serving as a Union soldier in the Civil War. He spent his entire life in and about the immediate vicinity in which he died.

He leaves to mourn his taking away these sons John E. Mosby and Angerson Hodges and one daughter, Mrs. Melvina Scott. Besides these there are sixteen grandchildren, many nieces, nephews and friends who mourn that his earthly journey has ended.

Funeral services were conducted at the East Bend M. E. church and the body was laid to rest in the East Bend cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

To the neighbors and friends and all who kindly assisted in any way during the sickness and death of our father, Elijah Hodges, we express our thanks and appreciation.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

Political Drama on a grand scale is about the best description of this conflict between Senator Byron K. Wheeler of Montana and the Republican party. In the beginning this fight was merely Wheeler's leadership of the Senatorial investigation which turned things upside down in the Department of Justice and drove Harry Daugherty out of the Cabinet. Wheeler was taking the offensive then. Then Daugherty put Wheeler on the defensive by indicting him in Montana under a statute forbidding officers of the Government to receive outside remuneration for serving their constituents. It is alleged that Wheeler was paid to make certain appearances before federal departments in the matter of leases on public lands. With this case pending against him, Wheeler joined the LaFollette forces in the last campaign and ran for Vice-President, returning, after his defeat to the Democratic fold, where he has welcomed regardless of temporary desertion.

All that is history now, but it has an important bearing upon the present attack of Senator J. Walsh, Wheeler's colleague, against the elevation of Attorney General Haden Stone to the United States Supreme Court. Walsh is opposing confirmation of the Stone nomination by the Senate on the ground that the Attorney General is "persecuting" Senator Wheeler. This Stone denies of course, although he has announced that he intends to bring another indictment against Wheeler. In a case involving a conspiracy to defraud the Government. From Mr. Stone's point of view, there is nothing he can do but go through with this case even if it costs him a seat on the Supreme Court. It is what it will cost him if he does indict Wheeler, because a bitter fight will be made by Walsh to have the Senate adjudge Stone unfit for the high judicial honor accorded him by the President.

Two charming additions have been made to the ladies of the diplomatic corps with the arrival of Emile Daeschner, the new French Ambassador. Daeschner has two daughters both of whom have completed their formal education in France and England and who are of marriageable age. They will be introduced to society at the new White House reception. Daeschner is proving to be a worthy successor to Ambassador Jusserand who has retired after a quarter of a century service as the diplomatic representative of his government in Washington.

Herbert Hoover has decided to stay on the job in the Department of Commerce for another four years. President Coolidge tried to shift him over to the Agriculture Department, but Hoover wouldn't go. He realized that bureaucrats had such a stronghold there that it would be a killing job to root them out. The kind of a job that he does not want just now, when a fight would be certain to create for him and interfere with his presidential aspirations. Hoover has won the confidence of the business men of the country and he will not doubt be one of the leading Republican candidates for the presidential nomination in the event that Mr. Coolidge decides he has had enough.

Bascomb Slempp quit as the President's secretary sooner than he had intended to, chiefly because one of the New York papers got hold of the story of his resignation. March 4th had been set as the date for Slempp's retirement following his row with Butler at the Republican National Convention last spring. As soon as the story of his forthcoming resignation got into print, Slempp made preparations to get away. His successor is Everett Saunders, former Congressman from Indiana and one of those prominently mentioned as President's Coolidge's running mate last year.

JUNIOR CLASS TO FIT 500 CALVES.

Twenty-five carloads or approximately 500 calves will be fattened for show and market by members of boys' and girls' clubs in Kentucky this year, according to a preliminary survey made by M. S. Carside, who is in charge of calf club work for the College of Agriculture Extension Division. This will be the largest number ever handled in junior agricultural club work, and will make the largest at stock show ever held at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville.

New officials have been taking "the reins of government" in many cases, but they will have to push on the breeching to get used out of the old nag in many places.

FAVORABLE OUTLOOK FOR LIVESTOCK

A considerable increase in hog production next fall, and a corn acreage about the same as in 1924 are recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture in the second section of its annual outlook report released today.

Beef cattle prices this year should average higher than last year, and those for sheep and wool should be at least on a par with those of 1924, the report says.

Dairymen are urged to make no further expansion in their industry. Higher egg prices may be expected during the season of flush production than last year, but poultry prices may be lower.

"Hog producers," the report says, "enter 1925 with 18 per cent fewer hogs than a year ago and there is every indication that prices during the next 18 months will be higher than at any time since 1920. Six to eight million fewer pigs will be born this spring than last spring. Fewer sows will farrow next fall than farrowed last all if producers respond to the unfavorable relation of corn and hog prices as they have done in the past."

"While the 1924 corn crop will probably be well cleaned up an increased acreage in 1925 does not appear advisable in view of the indicated reduction in the feeding demand. Stocks of old corn on farms are likely to be smaller than usual in the beginning of the new crop year 1925, but it appears that not more than an average crop will be required to supply the needs of the country for both feed and commercial purposes."

Higher Beef Cattle Prices Expected.

"Prices for beef cattle for 1925 should average somewhat higher than for 1924. The industry is gradually working into a more favorable position due to the relation of beef to competing commodities, especially pork; improved industrial conditions, and in a small measure to the cattleman's own sacrifices. Market receipts will probably be somewhat smaller than in 1924. All conditions indicate that the long-time outlook for the industry is even more favorable."

Advises Against Expansion in Dairying

"Further expansion in dairying in 1925 seems inadvisable. A recovery in prices of dairy products could be expected should the number of milk cows be further increased. Domestic production supports adequate, and the foreign dairy situation is such as to keep world market prices low and thus limit the height to which our butter prices can rise without bringing in foreign butter."

Favorable Outlook for Sheep and Wool

"Prospects for the sheep industry in 1925 appear favorable. The world wool outlook and the prospective meat situation in this country promise prices for 1925 at least on a par with those of 1924. There does not appear to be any immediate danger of overproduction, as the increase in the number of sheep has as yet been only slight."

Outlook for Poultry

"The outlook of the poultry industry during 1925 from the standpoint of market egg prices is favorable while from the standpoint of market poultry prices it is not so encouraging. It seems probable that higher egg prices will prevail during the season of flush production this year than last. With an abnormally large carry-over of dressed poultry in storage it seems probable that lower prices on market poultry may prevail for at least the first half of the year."

Colt Production Declines

"There are as many horses and mules of working age on farms as will be needed or the coming season, and average prices of work stock are lower than they were a year ago. A decided decrease in colt production during the past few years, however, points to a future shortage of good work stock. This shortage is likely to be acute during the time that colts foaled this year and next, or even young horses purchased now are still in active service."

PRODUCTION AND WAGES

A conciliator for the U. S. Department of Labor recently served as chairman of an arbitration board in a dispute in which a certain concern had claimed that its costs of production were too high. The business agent of the labor union claimed in the case that it would be possible to reduce production costs without reducing wages.

Thereupon the arbitration board gave him power to make changes in the methods of the plant, to see if he could get the production costs down.

Too many workers everywhere are concerned only with their wages and are not interested whether they are turning out a good production. If they could be shown that their wages in the long run depend upon efficient labor, they would put their wits to work to get their production costs down, so that their employment could afford to pay them liberally.

"Go Getters" are wanted in the business world, but there are some who think they can get there by being Nitin Waiters.

KENTUCKY HENS DO WELL IN CONTESTS

Lexington, Ky.—Kentucky hens entered in egg laying contests in other states are giving a good account of themselves, according to the poultry department of the College of Agriculture, which, in several instances, assisted breeders in selecting layers to send to contests. W. E. Pyles, of Maysville, recently ranked second in the Alabama egg laying contest, with his pen of White Leghorns. Nearly 100 pens are entered in this contest. Mr. Pyles' pen jumped to second place the first week of the contest, which began Nov. 1, and has been mentioned in the honor list almost every week since. Two of his pullets became sick, which reduced his production but these birds are in laying form again, and the pen back in its old position.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor, of Burlington, entered a pen of White Leghorns in a contest at Murphysboro, Ill. Competing with 54 other pens, her flock won first place for November. She also held five of the first six places for individual layers. Unless something unforeseen happens, she stands an excellent chance of leading the year in this contest.

E. C. Stephenson, of Florence, entered 10 White Leghorns in the Michigan egg laying contest, where a total of 100 flocks are competing coming from all over the U. S. This Kentucky flock recently stood 4th in this famous contest, which is attracting wide attention.

"The record of these three pens in competition with poultrymen from some of the best poultry states indicates what can be done with chickens in Kentucky," according to J. R. Smyth, extension poultry specialist for the college, who is assisting breeders in selecting breeding stock and layers, and otherwise promoting chicken raising in this state. Kentucky has advantages of good climate and close markets he said.

YES, WE MEAN BUSINESS

European nations should know by this time that the United States means business when it reiterates that it will not countenance debt cancellation.

Yet, aspiring politicians of many countries, are still agitating the issue, hoping to gain favor in the eyes of the people and advance their own interests.

They are very similar to a type that we have in this country, who would be willing to sacrifice the best interests of the people of the United States for their own advancement.

The people of European nations will awaken some day, as the people of the United States have already done, and realize that the demagogues who profess to be their friends are in reality their worst enemies.

Night Coughing Stopped Quickly By Simple Treatment

Thousands who are troubled with persistent coughing at night, which by robbing them of valuable sleep weakens the system and lays them open to dangerous infections, can quickly act to prevent this danger through a very simple treatment. People who have hardly been able to rest at all on account of coughing spells have found they can sleep the whole night through untroubled after the first time they try it.

The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring, and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the sleep soundly the very first night, and the entire cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, hoarseness, and bronchitis, and is wonderful for children's coughs and spasmodic croup—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

JUDGES' STATEMENT

We, the undersigned judges, named as the Committee to take possession of the sealed ballot box in the Boone County Recorder Salesmanship Campaign, and make the count, were present and took possession of the ballot box at 8 o'clock, Saturday night, February 14th, 1925, the hour and date named for the final count. The above named candidates win the prize set forth opposite their names, together with the total number of votes polled by each, to the best of our knowledge and belief.

N. H. MARTIN
CHAS. W. RILEY.
J. L. FRAZIER.
JNO. L. VEST.
O. S. WATTS

On the stroke of eight last Saturday night Campaign Judges Jno. L. Vest, Nell H. Martin, O. S. Watts, Chas. W. Riley and J. L. Frazier commenced the final count of the ballots in the Boone County Recorder Salesmanship Club Campaign. The audit was made at the Peoples Deposit Bank in Burlington where the sealed box remained throughout the last period of the campaign. Mr. Frazier proved himself adept in the use of the hatchet of George Washington fame which had been provided as the key to the sealed box and the count was under way in just a few minutes after he had cracked the box.

The result of the count revealed the standing of the various candidates as follows: 1st Mrs. Eugenine Hensley, wife of Thomas Hensley; second, Lee R. McNeely, popular local clerk; third, Mrs. Alberta Kelly Stephens, wife of Albert Stephens; fourth, Mrs. Virgie Kottmyer, wife of Geo. Kottmyer, the well known grocer of Constance; fifth, Mrs. Lucy Garrison, wife of Russell Garrison, prominent Union farmer; sixth Mrs. Delle Goodridge Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Goodridge, prominent family of Florence; seventh, Miss Cecile Brown, the popular telephone operator of Walton; eighth Miss Frances Virginia Berkshire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Berkshire well known Petersburg residents; ninth Mrs. Eva Kilgour, wife of Emmett Kilgour, well known Hebron farmer; tenth, Miss Fannie Lois Cotton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cotton, prominent residents of the south end of Boone county. Six other contestants received commissions on their work.

All who participated in the big race put forth strenuous efforts and the thank of the Recorder goes forth to all who participated.

After holding the unwavering attention of this entire section of the State for the past eight weeks establishing a new record in newspaper annals of this territory, the last chapter of the Recorder's Salesmanship Club Campaign was written when the delivery of the prizes to the winners was consummated.

The final week of the campaign when the balloting was blind, saw the Club Members bending every effort to gain the main object, the Essex Coach, offered as the leading prize.

It required an unusual length of time to count the votes, due to the fact that Lee McNeely and Mrs. Alberta Stephens were so nearly tied for the second and third honors after the first count was completed. The judges were not satisfied to leave without a complete re-check of the volume of reports of these two candidates, which required considerable time. A thorough re-count, however failed to alter their respective positions in the race, and they were so announced.

The patience and thoroughness of the judges was demonstrated in this magnanimous effort to render an absolutely correct report. Their selection proved admirable, and this office extends to them its most sincere thanks.

Nothing contributed more to the expediency and accuracy of the final count than the systematic adding machines.

That unusual interest was taken in the outcome of the campaign, equalling that taken in the last presidential election, was evident from the large number of telephone inquiries. From early afternoon until the final count was completed, persons in all parts of the territory covered by the Recorder phoned to the office for information as to the progress of their favorite club members and other data on the marathon.

Not within the history of this newspaper has a circulation campaign attracted the enthusiasm and widespread interest that was shown in the race which ended at 8 o'clock last Saturday night. The last week of the campaign was especially notable. Rivalry was intense but friendly, and the Recorder feels assured that the successful ones merited the prizes for which they so earnestly strove. The number of votes turned in by club members and their friends was fairly staggering, and when the committee of judges met to undertake the task of counting them it would have been discouragingly laborious but for the keen interest even they felt in the campaign and the knowledge they had of the popularity of the movement in every section of the territory.

Salesmanship Training
The aggregate votes of the prize winners reached enormous figures as published above. The winners of all the prizes are well entitled to success; they demonstrated conclusively that energy and persistence are the potent factors in the game of life. In distributing the many hundreds of dollars in awards among the successful candidates the Recorder gives full value received for their efforts in its behalf yet the intrinsic value of the awards is not the only consideration to candidates. In the pursuance of their individual campaign for votes, they have learned much in the art of salesmanship that will be of inestimable value to them in future years. They have made many new and pleasant acquaintances. Many of them formed new ideas along business lines and most of them have developed a keen sense of observation that will pay them many a future dividend.

Valentines

The competition in this race was a splendid training and a valuable experience for all who participated. It taught them that courage is necessary to overcome the many obstacles that beset the never-ending conflict called "life."

ALBERTA STEPHENS (Winner of Third Prize)

All Couldn't Win
Of course, it is inevitable that in any campaign all cannot win the big prizes. Club members understood that when they entered. Right or wrong, civilization seems to have accepted and applied nature's rule of "the survival of the fittest." To accomplish a given purpose, some effort is necessary, and fortune seems to have lavished her richest gifts upon those who are equipped with energy sufficient to carry out the mandate of ambition.

Yet to the club members who worked so energetically during the campaign but failed to win the Essex Coach, the Recorder extends its sincere regrets. Were it possible, it would gladly remember all club members with a car. If the thanks of this paper can in a measure lessen the regrets of the capital prize losers, it is theirs. The Recorder appreciates the kindly feeling and the good will of every club member who entered, whether they have 10,000 votes or a hundred times 10,000. This paper hopes that every club member who takes possession of the prize won by them by right of conquest, will in turn be proud of their award. We have dealt with ladies and gentlemen. Our relations have been pleasant throughout. They in turn, have dealt with an institution which, to the best of its ability, made the campaign one long to be remembered for its wholesome and straight character.

It was a great race, and it leaves in bold relief the possibility of the great virtue—AMBITION.

The drawing for the $100.00 in gold took place at three o'clock in the afternoon. Miss Ethylene Ryle, the 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Ryle, was selected to draw from the box the tickets. After the tickets had been collected and the box given a good long shake the top was removed and Miss Ryle drew the first ticket upon which was the name of Roscoe Akin. After each ticket was drawn the box was again shaken and tickets drawn. The winners follow:

- 1st Roscoe Akin.
2nd Edward Berkshire.
3rd J. C. Boelen.
4th A. L. Stephens.
5th Francis Presser.

15th Ethylene Ryle.
16th William Nixon.
17th John Walton.
18th R. W. Allen.
19th Lena Pettit.
20th Virgie Sanders. (Co.)

The winners each presented Miss Ethylene with a tip which together with the gold she drew rewarded her nicely for her part in the drawing. In addition to the gold an additional ticket was drawn on which appeared the name of Rex Berkshire and this special prize was a fine Barred Rock Rooster of the vintage of 1923.

1925 tickets were in the box when the drawing began and every one was anxiously waiting for his or her name to be drawn from the box. An additional ticket was drawn bearing the name of Maurice Earl Willis, and the prize was a necktie.

The merchants of Burlington offered special inducements for the day and all report that a very large day's business was the result. The prizes were given to the contestants immediately after the report of the judges, except the set of furniture and cedar chest which will be delivered to the winners from the Dine Furniture Co., Covington, Ky. It was past the hour of midnight before all of the visitors had left town for their homes.

As soon as the judges began the count the contestants and their guests went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Weaver who prepared for the Recorder an elegant supper which was enjoyed by the contestants who had worked hard during the day, and were ready to satisfy the demands of their appetites.

Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Walton of Ft. Thomas, and Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Walton, of Covington, visited Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blythe, Sunday. Mrs. C. C. Roberts and son Clinton, of Covington, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Martin of Florence, spent last Sunday with Misses Hallie and Elizabeth Rogers.

MRS. AGNESS CLORE

Aged 77 Years, Passes Away After a Brief Illness—Another Good Woman Gone.

Mrs. Agnes Clore, aged 77 years, widow of William Clore, who preceded her to the grave about nine years ago, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Weaver, with whom she had made her home since last fall, at 11 o'clock, Wednesday night, Feb. 11th, 1925, after a week's illness, from infirmities incident to old age.

Agness Clore was a daughter of J. Madison and Susan Acra, was born near Bellevue, October 15th, 1848. She was united in marriage to William Clore, October 18, 1868. They moved to Burlington about 19 years ago. She spent her entire life in Boone county.

She is survived by two brothers, J. D., of Burlington, A. M., of Hebron, and one sister, Miss Betty Acra, of Burlington, who have the sympathy of all in the loss of a kind and loving sister.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist church at 1:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, conducted by the Pastor, Rev. P. G. Gillespie, after which the remains were taken to the Odd-Fellows cemetery and laid to rest by the side of her husband.

Philip Taliaferro, undertaker of Erlanger, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

L. C. LITRELL ANNOUNCES FOR STATE SENATOR

Promises to Use His Influence For Reduction of Real Estate Taxes.

Hon. L. C. Littrell announces in this issue as a candidate for Senator from this District in a letter as follows:

DEAR VOTER:—

In the race in 1920 I was induced to run for re-election to the Kentucky State Senate, to this honor I felt like I was entitled as I served my people faithfully in that body for four years and craved an indorsement.

The war having closed and the mercantile and arm business being hit it took me a long time in which to make up my mind, and this delay handicapped me thru my entire race, in as much as I had made but little preparation and had too short a time to make the canvass.

Age and experience and a knowledge of the affairs of the state and again induces me to make the race for the Senate at this time.

I am for better schools, law enforcement, and a reduction of the state tax rate upon real estate.

For these measures I have always stood, as my record will show in every session I stood for the common schools, in the session of 1917, I voted for a reduction of state tax rate from 55 to 40 cents. Having raised a large family, taught school, served in the legislature, carried on farming, I feel that I stand close to the interest of all the people.

I pose as no saint nor solomon, but I stand for right, justice and fair dealing and believe that the public is entitled to 100 cents worth of service rendered for every dollar of revenue collected by the State. Consider my claims and my record, and if you find me worthy and well qualified I will appreciate your support.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE CO.

BY PROF. A. M. YEALOE

FIRST BATTLE IN BOONE CO.

Gen. Rogers Clark in 1781 ordered Col. Lochrey of Pennsylvania to raise a company of men and assist him in an expedition against Detroit. Col. Lochrey raised a force of 120 men and was to meet Gen. Clark at Fort Henry (Wheeling, W. Va.). When Lochrey reached this fort he found that Gen. Clark had already passed down the Ohio. Lochrey dispatched Captain Shannon with four men to overtake Clark and obtain supplies. These four men were captured (two letters from Lochrey to Clark) near Bellevue. They were so placed on the Indiana shore at the head of Lochrey's Island that any one passing up or down the river could see them. While the Indians, about 400 in number, 200 on the Boone county side of the river and the rest on the Indiana side awaited the arrival of Col. Lochrey and his troops, then the Indians on the Indiana side rushed out on a sand bar, and deadly conflict ensued, rifle balls were coming from both sides of the river, further resistance was useless, and they were compelled to surrender. Col. Lochrey was massacred and 42 of his men fell in battle, the rest were taken prisoners, most of whom were ransomed by British officers, in 1783 and exchanged for British soldiers captured during the Revolutionary war.

If the reader should chance to be at Aurora, Indiana, it will be of interest to you to visit the cemetery about three-fourths of a mile west of the town, where you will see the monument which was erected by the "Daughters of the American Revolution." It is August—1924 in memory of Col. Lochrey and his company that were slain in the above battle. This monument was erected by "The Col. Archibald Lochrey Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution."

AN APPEAL TO SCHOOL TEACHERS:

The H. E. A. is planning for an aggressive campaign at its next meeting in Louisville, in April. This campaign is to reach local and state interest. It is planned for this meeting to shape its program, select delegates, committees, and representatives for action in these two fields of work.

There cannot be done without co-operation of all the school forces in the state, with this co-operation we can secure whatever the schools need to make them more efficient—anything that is within reason.

The first requisite is a 100 per cent enrollment of our school forces in the H. E. A. The membership fee is one dollar, this includes the literature sent out by this organization, who begrudge this pittance of one dollar, if it is used for the betterment of the source from which he or she obtains a livelihood?

We need more sympathy and a closer touch between our schools and its real citizenship, so we may speak of these assemblies as OUR school instead of the school.

We need more consolidated schools, which is larger units, this means fewer teachers, and special teachers, which means more pay for those engaged, this would be at the same cost or less cost to the taxpayers. Still more efficient.

We need more "boost" less "kick" more "pull" less "back" more up, less hindrance. We can have these benefits, as in now demonstrated in several communities in our county, by co-operation.

The teachers or others interested may secure enrollment blanks by applying to the county Superintendent or R. E. Williams, Sec'y, Louisville, Ky.

It may be that you can not attend the meeting in Louisville, that is no excuse for not enrolling. A copy of the program and the proceedings of the meeting will be mailed to you if you enroll. It is Boone county last year had no teachers enrolled out of every one and most of these were teaching in independent graded schools, which are affected, less than the rural teacher.

Who is to be the guardian of your interests if you have no part or parcel in the matter? Who will enroll now, in the Boone county 100 per cent in this year? This is an appeal to you, not the other teacher. DO IT NOW.

DAUS AND LADS

Father and Son Week, February 22 to 28—Every Man Was a Boy One Day.

Father and Son Week, February 22 to 28, was instituted by the Y. M. C. A. at Providence, R. I. in 1907 for the purpose of bringing fathers and sons together for mutual understanding and for the development of right character in the sons. But the father and son movement has extended beyond the bounds of the Y. M. C. A. and in many cities and towns it is sponsored by civic organizations. Boy Scouts, councils, churches and Sunday Schools.

Whatever may be said about the fading influence of mother in the life of a boy—and surely too much cannot be said—it is an indisputable fact that if the father is not on the job, or rather hasn't been on the job in the case of the growing lad, there is danger ahead. The signal shows red.

The boy will speak as the father walks and notice all that dad is doing or has done. Yet while the lad will glory in the father's physical or mental attainments, and will save little about father's spiritual life, that is the part that influences and counts.

It is impossible for any father to have the confidence and trust of his boy unless there is something to justify it. No boy will have faith and trust in his parents unless they have faith in him. Let the boy know that his father really loves him and the boy will love the father in return. Irvin Cobb tells a story of a tired business man who sent his boy to bed without supper. Stealing into the boy's room to see if he was asleep, the father found him wide awake. "Jackie," he said, "you shouldn't be up at me because your father is a tired man. I'm not to blame. 'Yes you are too,' snapped Jackie. 'You are—the big stiff and now I've got to stand for him.'"

Every man was a boy—though some of us need to be reminded of the fact. The boy has a hard path to travel but it may be made easier by the love, sympathy and comradeship of a good dad—who in after years will deserve his son's tribute as the best man he ever knew.

The Recorder felicitates the lads and dads upon their happy choice of banquet partners and wishes them a merry and helpful week.

A Russian immigrant newsboy in New York, 30 years ago, has just secured the contract for constructing a $4,000,000 subway thru Washington Heights. He may yet become a cabinet official. There's room at the top for the chap who knows how to spell sand.

The peach crop may be killed as reported, but there are still plenty left from the crop of twenty years or so ago.

It's easy to get an education after you learn that the things you learned in school do not constitute an education.

STATE OFFICIALS ENDORSE ORATORS

HOLLOWAY AND GODMAN OFFER CO-OPERATION IN NATIONAL CONTEST

Noah J. Parsons, County School Superintendent, in full accord with the Contest, Will Endeavor To Have Four High Schools in Franklin Enter.

Frankfort, Ky.—J. R. Holloway and Mark Godman, High School Superintendents of the Kentucky Department of Education, united in endorsing the National Oratorical Contest on the American Constitution, sponsored by the Kentucky and Southern Indiana, and offered their co-operation in having Kentucky High Schools enter the competition. They pointed out that the contest with the Constitution as a subject can be handled with interest with three high school departments, public speaking, history and English, and can be made a part of the regular curriculum. They also emphasized the opportunity for training in citizenship a study of the Constitution gives, being especially impressed with the fact that more than 13,000 high schools and more than 1,000,000 students participated in the 1921 contest.

Are Pleased By Books.
Mr. Godman and Mr. Holloway were pleased to receive a list of books on the Constitution suggested for use by students entering the contest and distributed to teachers by the management. They are preparing a list of books for a high school library bulletin and will recommend for purchase several of the books on the Constitution. They suggested that teachers would be justified in purchasing some of the books suggested not merely for use in the contest, but for permanent additions to libraries.

Franklin County will support the contest heartily. Frankfort High School, Gladstone Koffman, principal, and the Good Shepherd High School, Father Edward G. Klosterman, principal, entered the contest last year and are making plans to have representatives again this year. J. W. Ireland, Superintendent of Frankfort City Schools and former president of the Kentucky Educational Association, has given hearty endorsement to the contest, as evidenced at one of the State competitions in Louisville last year.

Parsons Approves Plan.
Noah J. Parsons, County School Superintendent, expressed himself as being in full accord with the purposes of the contest and will endeavor to have the four county high schools in Franklin, Bridgeport, Bald Knob, Peaks Mill and Forks of Elk-horn, enter. Mr. Parsons is a firm adherent of the contest idea of developing school spirit, saying that victories of the debating team of the Bald Knob High School several years ago in the University of Kentucky Interscholastic tournament resulted in a great increase of interest among patrons of the school.

Franklin County High School boys and girls always have ranked high in the university debating, oratorical and dramatic contests and this year expect to present several keen orators on the Constitution.

PARK PROJECTS DISCUSSED

Vance Prather, Ft. Thomas, Is Made Secretary of Commission.

Frankfort, Ky.—Vance Prather, of Fort Thomas, Ky., was elected secretary of the State Park Commission in meeting here.

Discussion turned to major projects of the proposed state parks when Vance Prather announced that he had received, Cumberland Gap, Cumberland Falls, Natural Bridge and Red-ford Lake.

Minor projects were taken up also, the Kentucky Pioneer Memorial Park at Harrodsburg, a site on the Dix River and in the Kentucky River gorge.

The Old Fort Hill project at Harrodsburg is nearing consummation. Mr. Prather reported. The Chamber of Commerce will turn over deer to that tract shortly, he said.

Cumberland Gap will be another project to be formally taken over soon, he predicted.

Attempts To Burn Jail Foiled
Newport, Ky.—Women inmates of the Newport jail were in a near panic as a result of a fire which broke out in the jail. James Wingo, a prisoner, arrested on the charge of drunkenness, first set fire to a mattress in his cell and then ignited the wood stripping on the jail window. The smoke curled up to the section occupied by women and caused them to scream of help.

"Qual Treat" For Clubs
Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Game and Fish Commission, at its meeting, decided to purchase a limited number of Bob White quail for spring delivery. These quail will be distributed by the various clubs throughout the state, including the Kentucky Game and Fish Protective Association, recently organized at Frankfort. There will not be a sufficient amount of quail purchased to supply individual applicants, but those counties in which clubs are organized will receive a liberal supply.

The government estimate of the acreage and production of tobacco by types for last year is now available and indicates that about 311 million pounds of burley were produced on 365,000 acres in 1924. According to these estimates last year's crop is only 15 million pounds below the record crop of the previous year. These figures on acreage and production are higher than most estimates made by individuals earlier in the season.

COOPERATIVES SALES AID LIVESTOCK IMPROVEMENT

The manner in which cooperative livestock sales are helping to improve the quality of farm animals in Kentucky is described by a stockman of that State in a recent letter to the United States Department of Agriculture. The method is considered to be of general interest.

"The cooperative sales we are having in every town of any size in Kentucky," he writes, "help more to improve the quality of livestock than any other one thing. Before these were organized the traders came to our pastures and bought our stock or we shipped it to the big markets. If we had good-quality stock we never saw it with that of other people where we could compare the difference. And if they did not get as much money for your stock as some one else did you generally thought you had shipped to the wrong man or your stock was not so fat as the other person's. You seldom stopped to think that quality made the difference."

"But every man who brings his stock to these cooperative market sees it run out in the ring and sold there. He also sees every one else's stock sold and has a chance to see the difference and to compare the difference in prices between good and bad quality. I have heard many of persons say that they were going to buy better ewes and a better buck. This applies not only to sheep but to all kinds of livestock."

The foregoing comment is one of numerous suggestions made by farmers who answered a questionnaire sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture in the interests of livestock improvement. Department specialists are now analyzing the replies of more than 650 livestock owners who have reported their experiences in raising scrub grade, and purebred animals.

APPRECIATION

TO MESSRS. RIDDLELL & BERKSHIRE:

I am sending my thanks to you both for the kindness you have shown me in the past few weeks. As the time late I did not see you personally, but want you to know I was satisfied with my prize as much as Mrs. Hensley was, and you know how much that was. You have certainly had a clean, square race and I hope all candidates feel toward you as I do. Thanking you again from the bottom of my heart.

I remain as ever,
ALMA GLACKEN
TO MY FRIENDS:

I want to thank each and every one of my friends for the support and kindness you have given me in the Recorder Campaign. I certainly am proud of my commission as it is much better than some of the smaller prizes. Thanking you all again.

ALMA V. GLACKEN.
NOTE—Mrs. Glacken was the leading candidate of those who received commissions.—Editors.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE RECORDER, MY FRIENDS AND SUPPORTERS:

To those who helped me, I can but say—THANK YOU! And I mean every word of it. Someone called me a "good loser."—I certainly tried to be. The Editors offered me an opportunity and a "square deal," and I am sure that I received both in the spirit in which they were given. I further wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Russell for the courteous treatment I received at their hands on every occasion.

Respectfully,
MRS. ALBERTA K. STEPHENS.
THE RUNNER-UP EXPRESSES HIMSELF

In this manner I wish to publicly congratulate the winner and at the same time to thank my friends for their support in the campaign just closed. I especially want to thank the good people on Route No. 2 out of Burlington, as well as those of Bellevue and Carlton precincts, which was formerly my home, for without their support I certainly could not have remained in the race.

LEE R. McNEELY
I desire in this humble way to thank those who helped me so generously in the Recorder contest which closed last Saturday night with the announcement that I had won the Coach. I also wish to congratulate those splendid workers who finished beneath me in the race, for the clean-cut campaign which they conducted.

MRS. THOMAS HENSLEY.

CARD OF THANKS

I desire to thank all my friends for the help they gave me in the Recorder Campaign, and I wish to congratulate Mrs. Thos. Hensley for her success in winning the Essex Coach.

MRS. EVA KILGOUR

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my loyal friends and relatives in Boone county and elsewhere for the help they have given me in the Recorder Campaign.

DELLE GOODRIDGE COLLINS

Coming as a distinct surprise was the rather sudden departure of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Russell, who so efficiently managed our campaign just closed. Mr. Russell has had a campaign awaiting him for two weeks, so in response to several urgent telegrams he was compelled to leave very abruptly at four o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell's next stop is Enterprise, Alabama, where he will conduct a campaign on the Enterprise Ledger. This is a much larger town than Burlington but Mr. Russell said when leaving that he would certainly be more than pleased with a campaign as successful as the one just closed here.

The Campaign Headquarters have certainly taken on a decidedly deserted appearance, indeed a contrast to the volume of business and excitement so abruptly closed.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell have left quite an empty spot in Burlington and Boone county, and will surely be missed. They take with them our best wishes.

WHATEVER THY HAND FIND-ETH TO DO, DO WITH THY MIGHT

While the above title that I have selected as a subject for a writing this time, is a scriptural quotation from the Bible, it is one that I think is very positive, and a warning to the generations of the past, present and future. Especially adapted to the young generations of the future, in their flight of the progressive hurry and "get rich quick" methods in their vocational careers in the fields of commerce, which often terminates in blasted life of twisted, broken limbs, loss of the confidence of an employer, or those most interested in their welfare, or even death itself, looking forward to the large salary they receive, getting it in the shortest possible time but what would the glory and honor of a $18,000 or $20,000 per annum be, if through hurry to get a large amount of work done in our machine shops, if we turn an imperfect axle for a "Sedan auto" out of faulty material and cover it with nickel or chromium, thereby causing perhaps a dire accident, which culminates in twisted, crippled limbs, or worse,—death itself, and sustain the loss of, not only the confidence of our friends and present employers, but those in the vocational fields, the employment of which would be more congenial? Better would I have been all concerned, to have a humble employment with small salary, doing honestly and carefully all our hands find to do, whether it is in the field, in the hot sun of summer or in labor of the cold of winter, with a clear conscience and good health. There is a mistaken theory among our young "Upper Tens or Four Hundred" bloods that, this vocation, or that he or the other one is beneath their family station of life. To keep up the old family ancestral records, they may be bankers, lawyers, and—if they can have a nice, easy city practice, or not do anything. But boys and girls get these few facts imbedded into those bright, intelligent minds, and keep them there—that there is no material difference of the clay that you, I or the other, friends were formed from—we are all of this old good health. WOODMEN DANCE

The Florence Camp No. 15073, Modern Woodmen of America, gave an old-time, old-fashioned Hoedown at the Florence Theatre last Saturday night, which was appreciated by all who attended. The group desires to thank all who have helped to make this occasion a success, also the good music which was rendered by the McGlasson band of Lebanon. It was a real treat to have the old-time music back in our midst which is quite a change from the present day jazz.

DANGEROUS CROSSING!

CHILD HEALTH TALKS

By Juanita McF. Jennings

Assistant Director Bureau of Child Health, State Board of Health, Louisville, Ky.

A knowledge of the value of cereals may be found in the earliest records of mankind; their worth was appreciated by the Romans who named them after Ceres, the Goddess of Agriculture. Among the cereals most commonly used in feeding children may be mentioned, whole wheat, oatmeal, corn meal, rice and grits.

The cereal grain consists of the husk of outer covering which contains mineral matters; cellulose, which is valuable as roughage, to promote bowel action, and the germ which contains the growth promoting portion of the grain known as vitamins. Formerly it was thought that vitamin were found in the husk only but the recent studies of Dr. McCollum have proven that vitamins are found in the kernel or germ. The germ is usually removed with the bran and classed as "Shorts" and used as cattle foods. Thus the animals receive the growth promoting parts and children receive the lifeless starchy parts.

Prepared cereals have little vitamin value but children will eat oatmeal or cream of wheat with bran cooked in it and the use of bran is much to be preferred to cathartics. Whole wheat, rraham and brown breads should be given children in preference to the white breads. Toast made of whole wheat bread is especially desirable for the young child and may be used in place of crackers or Zwieback.

The cooking of cereals is of great importance. Cooked cereals are much more palatable than uncooked cereals. A higher value. Oatmeal should be cooked three hours in a double boiler. Have the water boiling, salt it slightly and stir the oatmeal in slowly, then place boiler on the back of the stove so that it cooks slowly. Cream of wheat, farina and corn meal should be cooked for about 40 minutes. It is better to use cream and butter on cereals. Too much sugar is harmful and the child who starts his breakfast with a sweetened dish of cereal spoils his appetite for other foods.

FRIENDLY TOWNS

Small cities and towns that do not have a "Welcome" sign on every main road leading into the place are regarded as "Slow" and out of date.

And as a rule, the signs emphasize friendliness regardless of whether the community has it. Once upon a time, it is related, there was a man who believed in signs, and taking the one at the edge of a strange town literally, he drove in and prepared to be real friendly. He sat on the curb for an hour and not one person ever looked friendly, much less asked him any questions about what luck he was having among strangers.

This is a mistake common to us all. We boast of our friendliness and advertise the fact to the world, but we never exercise our shaking arm on strangers, and never discomf ourselves in order to give them pleasant remembrance of our town. The touring season is at hand. Many motorists are going to be passing through. Some of them will be stopping here if they get the right kind of a reception; more of them will be our guests if we show ourselves hospitable.

If we are going to be friendly, let's loosen up and not human when a stranger comes within.

THE SUN SHINES ALL THE TIME

One of the greatest businesses of all times has been that of scaring human beings.

Frightening of some into religious compliance by the teaching of hatred and "hell-fire" as an age-old game.

Frightening workmen and farmers by intimations of industrial disaster has been played in politics.

Frightening people by threats of wars has loaded the world and future generations with burdens of debt and hatred.

Thousands upon thousands have predicted the end of the world in past ages.

The people of England, it is said, stopped work during the year 993 and waited for the world to come to an end in the 1000, and a lot of the foolish people starved to death.

Even in this enlightened age, we have people who believe the world is to be destroyed this week, or next, and the holier-than-thous shall be wafted to heaven on golden clouds.

Barnum was a great exponent of "bunk" as a business proposition—and, notwithstanding our newspapers, churches, and educational systems, indications are that we have not progressed very far from his estimate of public imbecility.

There is trouble enough in the world without manufacturing it, and worrying about destructive and foolish things is energy worse than wasted.

How much better the world would be, your town would be, your home would be, if you spent as much time in doing something to make life more comfortable for the sick and suffering and the needy—or in civic effort, as you do in fretting and worrying over imaginary troubles.

Thinking destructive things is harmful to society as well as the individual. Christ taught peace and love, and kindness. If we but honestly try to follow his instructions the end of the world need not worry us, and our community will be what it should be—a community of friends.

The sun shines all the time—some where.

TONIGHT.

If I should die tonight there still would be one favor left — one pleasure left to me. And that to come from out my narrow cell in spirit form and see and wish you well.

To stand beside and hear you jest and snipe, And feel again your wholesome fellowship — To see your smiles and know your hearts rejoice, And hear your songs and raise my silent voice.

If you should die tonight what would there be of fellowship and happiness for me? Except, perhaps to sit alone and stare Across the board and see your vacant chair.

And, in the smoke, to see your kindly face, Or hear your cheer resounding through the space Of Memory, and while my fancies stir, To dream alone of happy times that were.

If some must go and some must stay behind — If Fate must cleave the friendly ties that bind — How better far that Death should beckon on, Than Life should last with love and friendship gone!

John D. Wells.

WHEN THE YOUNG CROWD THINKS

High school and college students of today are being taught many ideas about country life that are different from conditions that actually exist. They have as yet little chance to put these ideas into effect. In some families, these propositions are already accepted, and one can see the results in their modern ways of working and living. But in many others, the folks are living in about the same old way.

Just wait until this young crowd get to running things, and see if it does not make a big difference. The feast of new ideas is stirring all through the country districts. When these homes and rural industries run on this new basis, as they will be to a large extent in a few years, you will hardly know the American country town.

A NEW WINNER

Boone county Jerseys are still holding their own on Official Test. However a new cow from Jefferson county cupped first place for the month of January. Harry Hartke's cow, Jolly Dewdrop once owned in Boone county, stood in 2nd place with 5.23 pounds of fat in two days to her record. Volunteer's Vida, owned by Hubert Ryle and Son stood third with 3.02 lbs. of fat in two days and O. C. Hafer's Pops Leonie Gold stands fourth with 4.48 lbs. Esile's Viola owned by Hubert Ryle & Son still retains her place as 11th with 3.26 lbs. and a two year old heifer in the same herd made 3.125 lbs. of fat, and stands eighth.

Of the eighteen Jerseys in the State making over 3 lbs. of fat in two days four were from Boone-co. Not so bad, Jersey breeders, keep the good work going.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Frankfort—National Quartermen were fired on while traveling on a train from Elk Valley, Ky., to Berler, Ky., a report from Berler informed Adj. Gen. James A. Kehoe recently.

Hazard—Attorney General Frank Daugherty declined to participate further in the inquiry instituted by County Judge J. A. Smith, at the request of the governor, to investigate alleged lack of law enforcement in Perry County.

Winchester—About seventy-five of the local Shriners met at the Brown Rectory Hotel and formed a Shrine Club in this city. The plans call for a club formed of Shriners and the meeting will be held once each month with a luncheon following the business session.

Ashland—Jesse B. Bishop, 25 years old, all-shocked and gassed at St. Mibel and wounded at Verdun, was sentenced to twenty-one years in the penitentiary by a jury in the Boyd Circuit Court at Ashland for the murder of Oliver Chadwick in a filling station holdup at Ashland on the evening of December 17, 1924.

Augusta—County Judge E. U. Dodson of Brooksville, has announced as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative from this district, composed of Brycken and Pendleton Counties. He is the Bracken's present County Judge and is a minister of the Christian Church. He is a son of Rev. R. H. Dodson.

Mt. Sterling—Ollie Sharp was killed and Stanley Glavin dangerously wounded in a pistol duel in a vacant store room at Sharpburg, Bath County. The scene of the tragedy is twelve miles north of this city. From best information obtainable the men, who are farmers, met in the store to settle a business transaction over a farm trade.

Glasgow—Reed Kitzore, rural carrier on Route No. 3, this city, has been granted a vacation, possibly the first vacation, aside from holidays, since the route was established nineteen years ago. In the nineteen years he has served the patrons of the route he has earned the reputation possibly not enjoyed by any rural carrier anywhere.

Frankfort—All owners of insurance agencies must be licensed for all the companies represented by them, Shelton M. Sauley, State Insurance Commissioner, said, after an investigation which brought to light the fact that agents and their solicitors, licensed for only one company, were soliciting business for all the companies represented in its office.

Mt. Sterling—Stanley Glavin, of Sharpburg, Bath County, died at a Lexington hospital following gunshot wounds suffered in a pistol battle with Ollie Sharp, who was killed in Sharpburg. Glavin's body was brought to this city and will be taken to his home for burial. He was about 50 years old, a son of D. S. Glavin, and is survived by his widow and three small children.

Horse Cave—Charles H. Schott, found dead in a hut in Marshall County, was known here as Charles H. Schott, a painter. Schott came here four years ago from East Tennessee. He left for December and had not been heard of until authorities here received notice of his death. Letters were found on the body bearing a Horse Cave address. Nothing is known of his relatives as he never disclosed any information concerning himself.

Mayfield—One man seriously shot and another killed by other men, the end of a neighborhood dance held at the home of Bruce Laird in the Dukedom section of Graves County, about twenty miles south of here. Toukey Wylie and Chester Lynum, who had been in attendance, got into an altercation as they were leaving and Ryburn shot Wylie in the left shoulder and side, one of the bullets piercing his left lung. The wounded man was given prompt attention.

Hopkinsville—A trainload of flour and mill products from the Acme Mills left here with Birmingham and Montgomery, Ala., as its destination. At these points the cargo will be distributed to jobbers and dealers throughout Georgia, Alabama and Florida. The train contained sixty-four freight cars, fully loaded and it required two engine to pull it. The invoice value of the shipment was $83,400. This is the third and largest trainload of mill products which this mill has shipped within a year, giving it an enviable record for the sale of its output.

Hopkinsville—John B. Chilton, warden of the Cityville penitentiary, and Mrs. Chilton were here en route south for Mr. Chilton's health, which has not been good for some time. They will be away until the middle of March.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR SHEEP RAISERS

Lambing time this year finds Kentucky sheep raisers facing bright prospects, according to H. C. Miller, field agent in animal husbandry for the College of Agriculture, who is encouraging lamb standardization.

"Prospects were probably never brighter for good prices for good lambs," Mr. Miller declared. "Packers predict that good lambs next spring and summer will command 16 or 17 cents a pound. Some persons think that prices will even be better than that. There is apparently no question that Kentucky farmers who have good lambs will get a good price for them."

"Quality, however, is going to count for more than ever this year, according to packers. There will be a big demand for the best quality of lambs," Mr. Miller declared. "Packers' sharp discrimination. Hence, care of ewes and lambs should be emphasized this spring. Docking and castrating are going to be worth more this year than ever before."

Fifty-two lamb improvement conferences have been scheduled in 49 counties of the state. Meetings have already been held at Madisonville, Owensboro, Henderson and Brooksville. Four to six meetings a week will be held from now on until spring work is under way. Sheepmen, representatives of packers and the College of Agriculture, buyers and others will speak at these meetings, emphasizing the need of producing improved lambs, through better breeding, better feeding and care, and docking and castrating.

Along with better bred and fed sheep, the growing of more feed will be discussed by George Roberts and Ralph Kenney of the College and others. Kentucky farmers, in order to reap the highest profits, and at the same time build up their soil, should use more home-grown feeds, it is said. Sheepmen who produce most of their own feeds stand the best chance of making good profits.

SOWS SHOULD HAVE BALANCED RATIONS

The importance of balanced rations for bred sows is emphasized by Grady Sellards, field agent in animal husbandry for the Kentucky College of Agriculture. "The feeding of the sow during the gestation period is very important," he says, "because it largely determines whether the pigs are to be born healthy or weak, and this in turn directly affects the number raised. A ration of corn and tankage, 9 parts of corn and 1 part of tankage by weight, or corn, middlings and tankage supplemented by a first class pasture, such as alfalfa, rape or rye—in fact any pasture that is young and tender—will give good results. Some farmers follow the practice of feeding bred sows a corn ration. In case this is done, it should not be continued for more than 2 months after the sows are bred, which time tankage or skim milk should be added to the ration, because 9-10 of the embryonic development of the pigs place during this period. Tankage and skim milk supply the elements in which corn is low. In event no pasture is available, as is some times the case during winter months, it is a good practice to feed before the sows a rack of legume hay, such as alfalfa, or red clover or soybean hay. Hogsmen find that alfalfa of the second or third cutting which is cured up bright and green is preferable. Alfalfa furnishes elements which are not found in rations of corn and tankage or corn and skim milk."

OPTIMISM PREVAILS
AT FARMERS' MEETING

A spirit of optimism prevailed among farmers attending the recent Farm and Home Convention at the College of Agriculture. Stockmen and farmers on the program spoke encouragingly of future prospects. They expressed satisfaction with grain and hay prices, and said they expected increasingly good prices for livestock and dairy products.

Beef cattle producers were especially optimistic, declaring that indications point to a general revival in the industry. Sheepmen are prospering as dairymen are not discouraged. J. H. McClain, South Carolina dairy farmer declared that Kentucky farmers can successfully compete with any other section in the dairy business provided they grow most of their feeds, keep better cows and produce good quality products.

Senator Henry Claywood, North Middletown, Ky., and P. C. Giltner, Eminence, Ky., well known stockmen, declared that they are convinced that the beef cattle business is on the upturn, and prospects of increasingly good prices. Speakers said that they can see no slump ahead for the sheep business, but on the other hand, only a growing market for Kentucky lambs.

The people who get tired of the alleged tiresome dullness of country life, might also get tired of being reduced by their credit, as if they lived in a big city and had to pay city prices. And the folks who long for the white lights of the cities, would probably soon be longing for the twilight of the country if they went to those cities to live.

Nothing is more comforting than to tell mothers to mind their own business.

DEVELOPING A RURAL SECTION

It has been the fault of many so-called "booster" campaigns, that they considered only the development of their own municipality. They often fail to recognize that their own prosperity depends on development of the rural section in which they are located.

Thirteen counties in western Virginia comprising the Shenandoah valley, have recently united in a plan for developing the resources of this region. They recognize that agriculture is their basic industry, and they are working to develop the form of farm industry best suited to each particular locality. They held an exhibition of imported sheep in one county to promote better breeding, and in the fruit raising regions better methods of handling such products were demonstrated.

One good feature of this movement is that Chambers of Commerce in various cities are revising their lists of officers, so as to place representatives of farm organizations upon these boards. This is a splendid contrast to the plan existing in many communities, where such boards consist only of business and professional men representing the city center.

This region evidently does not care for artificial growth. It would like new industries, but it does not want those that create social problems, and it would like to have homes for its workers as fast as new industries come.

Plans like these would be a good model for Kentucky. The cities and rural districts near the business centers of the commercial leaders in the city centers. We need a closer union between the city and the country towns, in a joint effort to develop the section. Less pulling and hauling between cities and the country, and more joint effort to promote the welfare of both.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS.

Daviess county farmers purchased a carload of the explosive sodalite from the United States Department of Agriculture in December. They used it principally to blow out stumps, although one man used 1,000 pounds to clear out 250 yards of an old ditch. Daviess county farmers cleared stumps from 100 acres. Sodalite costs only about a third as much as dynamite, according to County Agent J. E. McClure.

County Agent C. E. Houk believes that Garrard county farmers are "sold" on the value of soybeans. More than 1,000 acres were grown in corn in the county last year, and a large acreage was grown for seed and hay. Farmers in the county plan to organize an association, and expect to produce their own seed. Three hundred bushels of seed were grown last year. A bean harvester was successfully used to gather the seed.

Jackson county farmers are turning more and more to fruit growing. Fourteen farmers set out new orchards last year, and many more are planning to set trees next spring. A total of 1,000 trees were planted last year. Several pruning, spraying and grafting demonstrations were conducted by County Agent W. R. Reynolds last year.

The use of certified seed doubled the yield of Irish potatoes on 125 farms in McCreary county last year. It was the first year improved seed had been used in the county. County Agent P. R. Watlington predicts that a carload of certified seed will be required in the county this year.

As a result of demonstrations on the Lone Oak Experiment Field, the use of lime on McCracken county farms increased 300 per cent last year, County Agent W. C. Johnson reports. Applications were made on 85 farms. The average price paid by farmer was $1.50 a ton, including freight.

A CANDLEMAS DAY SCHOOL
CUSTOM

One of the old customs of Candlemas Day, February 2, in Scotland, was that on this occasion the pupils in schools were supposed to make small presents of money to their teachers. Sixpence and a shilling were the most common sums given, but some would offer a half crown or a crown (about 62 cents or $1.25).

These gifts would seem small in this country, but they were valued—in frugal old Scotland.

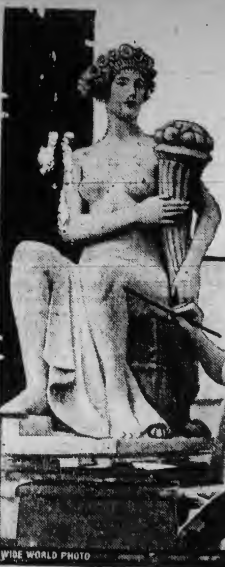

Probably teachers were so poorly paid in that country, that such a gift was very welcome. Some might say that in many American communities where teachers are poorly paid, it would be a good idea to take up a collection for them at some fixed time each year. Very likely that many of them in some cases. It may be the only way to secure a decent wage for teachers in some places.

But teachers would usually prefer to have their compensation come direct from municipal treasuries, so that no family could claim special attention for its children merely because they contributed liberally.

Some men are known by their deeds; others by their mortgages.

NOT MERELY FOR TALK

Some farmers have had the idea in the old days, that a Farmer's club was an organization that got together mostly for talk, but it did not secure many practical results. They would think differently if they could watch some of the hundreds of active farmer's clubs that exist in this section.

Not merely do these clubs carry on social activities that make them a pleasant center for winter evenings, but they have practical plans in many cases for improving the farm industry of the region. They will encourage their membership to take up new lines of production, or improve their methods, secure competent leadership for such attempts, and thus in many cases they have increased the profits of farmer.

Every rural locality needs its farmer's club, so that every farm shall be in touch with some such association.

During the next 10 months the Western Union Telegraph Co. will install 800 new tape printers in that many cities and the system will be extended as rapidly as possible. This machine prints messages on gummed tape which is attached to sheets and will replace the automatic sheet printers. Tests show that it saves $10 per cent for each machine in repair parts alone.

Some folks claim water is unsuitable for use for drinking purposes, but perhaps what they need is to give it a more extensive trial.

"Don't throw your dollars away" say the economists, but that is better than drinking them down in the form of hoosh.

The state legislatures are all passing new laws, but many of us have not been able to learn all the old ones yet.

New Way to Quickly
Stop Worst Cough

A remarkable new and simple method for treating a cough gives relief with the first dose and usually breaks a severe cough in 24 hours.

The treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and loosens the phlegm, but it loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. People have been astonished how quickly the coughing stopped with this new treatment, and the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription is for coughs, chest sore, hoarseness, bronchitis, for children as well as grownups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful, at all good druggists. Ask for

SUSAN ELIZABETH ACRA

Dies in less than one week after her sister, Mrs. Agnes Clore

Another sad death occurred in Burlington early last Friday morning, when Susan Elizabeth Acra, better known as "Miss Bettie" departed this life after an illness of very short duration.

Her demise was caused by pneumonia, brought on by water being spilled on the front of her garment when she arose for a drink on the night after her sister's funeral.

The death was doubly sad to the relatives on account of the fact that another sister, Mrs. Agnes Clore, was just laid to her last rest less than a week previous to her death.

Susan Elizabeth Acra was a daughter of James Madison Acra and Susan Acra. She was born near Bellevue on April 1st, 1853, being nearly 72 years old at her death. She is survived by two brothers, A. M. Acra, of near Hebron, and J. D. Acra, of Burlington.

Services were conducted at the M. E. church Sunday afternoon at 1:30 by Rev. Gillespie, who delivered a splendid discourse.

The arrangements were conducted by Undertaker Philip Taliferro, of Erlanger in his customarily efficient manner.

TO WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN:

If any readers of the RECORDER have anything that would be of interest in the Early History of Boone County, it would be appreciated by Mr. A. M. Yealey, of Florence, Ky., and everything sent or loaned will be returned.

RUFUS S. LIGHT

The death of Rufus Strickland Light, of near Hebron, of his death, which occurred at 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning Feb. 14th, is the residence of his sister, Mrs. E. L. Williams, 1835 Hubbard st. He was a native of Covington, Ky., and was the son of the late Doctor George and Mrs. Light. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. M. Ogle and Mrs. E. L. Williams, and his nephew Light Williams, all of this city. He was a mining expert all his life until a few months ago when his health failed and he came to Florida thinking a change would be beneficial to his health. The funeral was taken place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from Burns and Clymore funeral home.—The Sunday Times Union, Jacksonville, Florida, Sunday Feb. 15th, 1925.

He was a grandson of the late N. E. and Emma Hawes, of Burlington.

"The PATH ACROSS THE HILL"

Members of the 1925 class of the Petersburg High School presented a splendid play very cleverly last Friday night in the school auditorium. An excellent cast, under the competent direction of Prof. R. H. Carter, who was also a member of the cast, deserves special commendation for this excellent little production.

The young orchestra, which visited Burlington last week, rendered the music and they were at their best. A special feature was a story teller in the person of Cecil Brady, six years old, who furnish quite a bit of merriment.

It was the kind of a play that keeps you interested from start to finish, without a lagging moment, as everyone present will testify.

They expect to present this play in Burlington in the near future.

MUSIC IN EVERY COMMUNITY.

It has long been said there is nothing quite so inspiring as music. Such being the case congratulations are in order for practically every High School in Boone County.

When I started community meetings this winter, Grant was the only High School to volunteer with some excellent talent. Union had a fine class of musicians being developed. When Petersburg found that I was very fond of music they brought out an orchestra that made me think they had everything in the county bested. Hebron recently organized an orchestra which has grown to 33 members. Florence has been developing good, I hear, but they have not made their debut as yet. Walton organized last week and Verona this week. Burlington also is developing an orchestra.

With all these good orchestras started it would seem to me, that we will soon have to put on a good, old time, daddies contest.

WAS TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

John Birkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Birkle, was taken to a Cincinnati hospital Monday and was operated upon for appendicitis. Mr. Birkle has been suffering for some time from the above troubles.

$6,000,000 TO BE PAID GROWERS

ALL MEMBERS OF ASSOCIATION WILL RECEIVE ON EACH GRADE OF THEIR TO-BACCO ANNOUNCED
BY PRESIDENT
STONE

CHECKS EARLY IN MARCH

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 20.—More than six million dollars will be distributed to those members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association who are owners of the higher grades of the 1922 tobacco crop which was purchased by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company some time ago in connection with a considerable purchase of the 1922 crop, Secretary and Treasurer H. L. Earley said today. Mr. Earley said that the checks would be in the hands of the growers early in March and that he was not able at this time, to fix a more definite date.

President and General Manager James C. Stone, who also is sales manager for the Association, today made public the amounts that will be paid on each grade of the 1922 crop taken in the Reynolds purchase. By comparison of these figures with his participation certificate the grower can learn exactly what will be coming to him in this fourth distribution on the 1922 crop. The net amounts to be paid by grades follow:

A.....$9.00	$10.80
B.....$7.50	$9.00
C.....$6.50	$8.00
D.....$5.00	$7.00
E.....$4.00	$6.00
F.....$3.00	$5.00
G.....$2.00	$4.00
H.....$1.00	$3.00

Only three grades of the A and E tobacco were included in the tobacco sale, as all the other grades previously had been marketed, and only the first four grades of the B, C, and D types were included in the sale and are included in this distribution.

As in previous distributions in final settlement, each grower will receive a complete report on the sale of the 1922 crop from President Stone.

SHIPPED TO CANADA

J. W. Huey, of Union, perhaps the most widely known Barrister, Attorney and was Commonwealth Attorney of this district two terms.

He was a brilliant speaker before a jury as well as on the stump, and his services were much sought after by his party in political campaigns. Mr. Huey is survived by his widow, Mrs. Theresa Gray, and one daughter, Mrs. H. K. English, of Lexington.

Funeral services were held Friday at 2:30 p. m., at the residence. —Grant County News.

HEBRON SCHOOL NOTES

Mr. Matson visited our school last Thursday and found a large number of enthusiastic pupils who wish to become members of the Junior Agricultural Club this year.

The Parent-Teachers Association will hold its next meeting Friday evening, Feb. 22, at 7 o'clock in the school auditorium. "Choosing Children's Books" is the subject for discussion. Everyone is invited to attend these meetings.

The school orchestra took its 6th lesson Thursday. A number of the parents were present to hear the rehearsal.

The Girl Reserves are practicing a play "Patsy from Dakota" and will soon present it.

PUBLIC SYMPATHY

The whole country has thrilled with sympathetic interest over the sufferings of Floyd Collins, caught in an earth slide in a Kentucky cave and nothing in the newspapers or recent date has been read with more interest.

The concern thus felt shows that people are becoming more sensitive to human suffering and want to see it relieved. Yet it might be remarked that all the time people are having the most distressing experiences that never arouse much attention outside their own immediate neighborhoods. Many of these misfortunes are due to causes which could be remedied by public attention. The sorrow and suffering caused by needless automobile accidents is just one illustration that could be named.

Public sympathy with the distress of any sufferer is most commendable yet it would accomplish more practical results, if in addition to concentrating on some isolated cases that seem particularly striking, it could express itself by some determined effort to remove preventable causes of human suffering.

February has furnished some nice weather so far.

At the Shrine of Liberty

M. D. GRAY, DEAD

M. D. Gray died at his home on North Main street Wednesday afternoon.

He had returned from a Cincinnati hospital, where he underwent an operation for gall stones, about 10 days ago and it was hoped that his condition would improve. Instead of improvement he gradually grew worse and succumbed Wednesday.

Mr. Gray was born in Grant county on the 20th day of November, 1853, and except a few years of his boyhood days which were spent in Owen county, had lived here all his life. He had maintained a country school in Grant county since 1880.

For many years he was an active law practitioner and was regarded as one of the most brilliant members of the local bar. He served the county eight years as County Attorney and was Commonwealth Attorney of this district two terms.

He was a brilliant speaker before a jury as well as on the stump, and his services were much sought after by his party in political campaigns. Mr. Gray is survived by his widow, Mrs. Theresa Gray, and one daughter, Mrs. H. K. English, of Lexington.

Funeral services were held Friday at 2:30 p. m., at the residence. —Grant County News.

Stanley to Practice Law

"Kentucky will welcome Mr. Stanley back home, for home he will come frequently. The fact of his entrance into general practice of the law will mean a far more lucrative income for him than politics has ever brought to him. Stanley leaves the county poor, as this world's goods go, but he is a rich man in loyal friends and it is not to the disparagement of other able Kentucky lawyers to say that he will have few peers at the bar, either at Washington or Louisville."

Mr. Stanley, who has been known since a young man, time we have always been his friend and adviser, even when we differed with him seriously about political questions. We have had his courage, even in matters in which we thought him wrong. We have never doubted his sterling honesty and integrity of purpose. Had he followed another course than this one he chose to pursue, in his public career, his return to the senate undoubtedly would have been easy. He must have known that to be true.

"Senator Stanley's defeat for reelection may prove to have been a blessing in disguise. While he is no old man by any means, he has reached the age at which the average sensible man begins to think about accumulating some of this world's goods. That he will do this as a lawyer is hardly to be doubted by any one who knows his great intellect and legal ability. Anyhow, the Interior Journal joins with his other loyal Kentucky friends in extending to him the best possible good wishes for a successful career as an attorney and has not the slightest doubt he will achieve the success his most optimistic friends hope for."—Stanford Interior Journal.

So far in the history of the world the reading sky signs is much like the blowing of bubbles. No man has been able to tell how or when the earth started on its orbit or how or when it will cease. Prof. Moulton, of the University of Chicago, thinks the earth will last a thousand million years yet, or perhaps much longer.

Some day, of course, the world will end, as all good things must end. Some day our sun—which is—much of a sun at all, according to Dr. Moulton, being a mere still-born fire, alongside any regular star—will swing too close to one of the million other local suns hereabouts. There will be a flash and puff and a million years thereafter the eagle-eyed astronomers of some nearby solar system, squinting through their telescopes, will see the flash and know that something unpleasant happened in our vicinity, once upon a time.

Meanwhile we may go right along inventing taxes, reforming people, one-half telling the other half how they should live, and enjoy life as much as possible—for doomsday is so far distant that life is but a wink in the dark.

JAMES LANE ALLEN

Noted Kentucky Author Dies in New York—Had been in declining health for several months

A rather very famous Kentuckian has passed on to his reward in the person of James Lane Allen, who brought fame to his native state by his splendid literary works.

He died in the Roosevelt hospital in New York City last Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 18th, at the age of 76, after having been in declining health for several months. He was buried in an Lexington cemetery last Saturday morning in his native Blue Grass region, which he had loved so well since childhood and which love was portrayed in his various beautiful stories of that country.

Some of his best work were the "Kentucky" series, the "Blue Grass of Kentucky" and many others. Every true Kentuckian should cherish the works and memory of James Lane Allen, who lent his immortal talents to her name, honor and glory.

He was a graduate of Transylvania University.

At that time the names of project leaders will be announced and the program as outlined for the year will be explained. Free motion pictures will also be given.

communities who had previously organized will have the following: Grant, Tuesday March 3rd; Hebron Wednesday March 4th; Petersburg Thursday March 5th; Verona Friday March 6th; Florence Tuesday March 10th; Union Wednesday March 11th. All the above communities except Florence will meet at their high schools at 7:30 in the evening. Programs will be opened by a short talk on "The Purpose of These Meetings" and "The Most Ideal Community I Know Of." Five reels of movies will also be shown, and the orchestras in each community will furnish music. The meeting will be held at 1:30 in the afternoon. Everybody is cordially invited to any of these meetings.

MEETING CALLED OFF

The meeting of Lady Club Leaders for Junior sewing clubs which was to be held this Saturday afternoon has been called off until a later date. Date for the meeting will be announced next week.

TUBERCULINE TESTED

Dr. W. W. Renter who has been testing cattle in this county for tuberculosis has completed a preliminary test on all the cattle in the county as far as he or I can trace. Dr. Renter is now retesting herds that showed signs of tuberculosis or had some reactors in the herd. He tested over 12,000 cattle in Boone county and found only 150 infected animals.

If there is any one having cattle that have not been tested please call me at Burlington 118 (phone) so that we can have them tested before Dr. Renter is called to another county. As far as we now know, Boone county is one of the few that can boast of having all their cattle free of tuberculosis.

POULTRY MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Boone County Poultry Association on Friday to be held at the Court House Room, Burlington. The meeting will be called to order at 1:30. All members should plan to attend as business of importance will be taken up at that time.

EGG SHIPMENT

The Poultry Association made their first shipment of 1200 hatching eggs last Saturday. Other orders of considerable number are pending.

SOY BEANS

Farmers in and around Burlington have agreed to grow about 75 acres of soy beans for seed this year.

FLORENCE CLUB

The Boys and Girls of Florence organized a Jr. Club last week. 22 members enrolled. They chose "Florence Remblers" as their name. The Ramblers are especially noted for their active sewing club, who are doing an outstanding piece of work.

AN EXPLANATION

Just a few words to the Readers and Subscribers of the Recorder:

During the past three months, no doubt, the publishers have been severely criticized by some, because of the fact that the paper has not been up to the standard in the way of news, and, no doubt, they have had cause for criticism, but when the cause is thoroughly understood and when the publishers and working force get back to normalcy, all prejudices and criticism will be forgotten, and the paper, as usual, will be delivered weekly to its many subscribers with the same good will to ward all as it has in the nearly half century just passed.

To publish a newspaper is a big job under the best of conditions and one that requires skill and lots of hard work, and under the conditions which the publishers have been placed, it has indeed been a tremendous task, and with a contest like the one just "pulled off," together with illness, a matter over which they had no control, we believe the readers like the writer, will think they need praise instead of criticism.

The RECORDER Circulation Campaign is over and we are glad. But this does not mean that we have any regrets in the matter. We are glad because the campaign has brought the publishers every good result they hoped for and more. We are glad because it was conducted on a high plane throughout and every contestant for the splendid string of prizes, is agreed on this point. All did not win what they sought, but all did win something worth while and have expressed the full belief that the enterprise was honestly conducted and honorably closed. Taken all in all, it was a great success, and everybody quit in the best of spirits.

Another circumstance over which the publishers have no control, has had any control, arose just as the campaign came to a close—one that has been very annoying to the editors. The writer, who has had charge of the editorial and news of the RECORDER since its birth, nearly 50 years ago, has been on the sick list, and with no one to fill the place, the publishers under these conditions have done remarkably well to print the paper at all.

Therefore, the readers of this paper are reminded that in all walks of life there is a "little bitter with the sweet."—F. A. H.

POOL LAW

To be opposed by Rory Huntsman, of Allen County, if he is returned to the next Legislature.

Representative Rory O. Huntsman of Allen County, leader of the Republicans at the 1924 session of the Legislature is promising his constituents that he will make a fight on the Burley Marketing Act, if he is returned to the House in 1926.

Mr. Huntsman says: "The first bill I shall introduce will be one to repeal the pool tobacco bill, known as the Finkham Law. I am the only member of the Legislature of 1922 who did not vote for this law when it passed the House. I am for repealing it now, because it has caused untold trouble, misery and want. I say to you frankly and honestly it is going to be a man's job to repeal this law."

B. H. S. NOTES.

The last period Friday afternoon was given over to the first literary program that has been given this year. They are to be continued every Friday afternoon until school ends.

One of the teachers Miss Elder, was absent from school Friday on account of sickness. Her room was taught by Mrs. Wilford Rouse.

Miss Estelle Huey was absent from school Monday on account of illness of her father.

Mr. Weil visited our school Wednesday afternoon and gave the orchestra a lesson. We are always glad to see him for he gives them nothing but encouragement, so they feel that they are accomplishing something really worth while.

Nearly eighty years ago Abraham Lincoln wrote that to secure to the laborer the whole amount of his labor, or as nearly as possible, was a worthy object of any good government. He also declared that labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only a fruit of labor, could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves a much higher consideration. If Lincoln or any other man advanced that theory today, he would be branded as a radical. The Lincoln ideal was beyond the ken of the average political party.

PETTINESS

Nothing retards a community like pettiness among its business men or people.

Yet how many towns and small cities are free from its influence.

It is related that not so long ago, in a certain city of about 5,000 inhabitants, the merchants on one side of the court house square banded together to hold a special sale.

They secretly organized their advertising campaign and expected to take their competitors by surprise and net a big profit for themselves.

As they should have had judgment enough to know, the sale was a big failure in not coming up to their expectations and was harmful to the community.

Nothing is ever accomplished when the vision of a community's business men and its people is so narrow that everything done is only for personal gain.

Helpful co-operation is the only key to community success, and until this lesson is learned, no community is going to progress very far.

WILL GIVE DANCE

G. P. S. H. will give a ball at the Petersburg Hall Feb. 27th, 1925. All are invited. Music by Dyes String Band.

NOT A PREVENTATIVE

Prevention of automobile accidents is pressing for solution, but compulsory accident insurance is not the answer.

Those who are proposing that careful drivers shall be punished for the misdeeds of the reckless do not take into account that compulsory insurance will not be a preventive but rather will tend to increase accidents.

It would induce the incentive to careful operation, which results from the present personal liability and which is now an important factor in holding insurance rates to a reasonable level.

It is the other fellow who needs protection; not the irresponsible or intoxicated driver whom compulsory insurance advocates propose to protect against loss.

Some heroic measures will have to be attempted to reduce the all too heavy loss of life that may be attributed to motor traffic.

Stiffer penalties in court, as in the instance of the Indiana man who was found guilty of manslaughter when he drove his car into another and killed two persons, and all regulatory legislation framed with the idea of preventing accidents—these are the palliatives that are needed.

Prevention should never be subordinated to indemnity, for then the real purpose to be accomplished is swallowed up in the means used.

The world did not come to an end as predicted, but the fast crowd are doing the best they can to smash it up by the over-speeding.

Not all these women folks who are looking for "chic" clothes are chickens.

Old Ground Hog couldn't tell a lie, but succeeding generations are trying to make up for his failures in that respect.

Walter Arnold and wife gave the young folks a party at their home near Burlington, last Thursday eve.

Everett Hickman, Jr., left Friday morning of last week for Cynthia, Ky., where he has a position as clerk in one of Kroger's groceries.

FLAPPERS AS FLIPPERS

People who are gravely concerned about the flapper's future may be surprised to learn that she is more assiduously devoting herself to learning how to be a pancake flipper than she is giving to the study of flapping.

A recent report of the U. S. Bureau of Education says that the increase of student enrollment in home economic courses exceeds that of any other subject in the curriculum.

This ambition on the part of the American girls to learn more about the scientific management of their homes is reflected in the great number of home service departments with their lectures, cooking classes and radio talks which have been in studied during the past year by the gas companies of the United States.

Nearly 8,000 high schools in this country now give courses in domestic science, with a total enrollment of about 100,000 girls and 3,000 boys. This compares with only 1,250 schools ten years ago. The enrollment of girls taking these figures in grade 5, 6, 7 and 8 of the elementary schools approximate 3,700, 000. This means that there are well over 1,100,000 children of school age learning how to cook and keep house according to the most modern principles.

County Agent M. H. Sauer reports that Marvin Madgeles, a well known county farmer, received $140 from an acre of tobacco, and Lucian Jones $318 from an acre. He also had a club hog, harvested 16 bushels of soybeans from one acre, which he sold for $3.50 a bushel. As a result of this club hog's demonstration 32 farmers are planning to grow soy beans this year.

FARMERS' QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY KENTUCKY EXPERIMENT STATION

Question—1 have ordered a bill of trees and need advice in caring for them upon their arrival. If they should come when the ground is too heavy to dig, how shall I handle them? Should I plant them in the wet soggy ground or shall I wait until the ground dries so I can break the land and give it good preparation?

Answer—An experienced nurseryman shipping trees at this season of the year usually surrounds the tree roots with moist material, sufficient to prevent them from drying for a week or two or even longer if they are kept in a cool place.

If your trees arrive in a time of storms or while the ground is wet or frozen, it will be safe to place the box or bundle in a cool cellar where they can remain for several days unopened without injury, provided the temperature does not go considerably below the freezing point. If your trees reach you in mild weather and the frost is out of the ground they can be "heeled in" in the garden or on one side of a field where they are to be planted. To "heel in" trees or shrubs, make a trench wide enough and deep enough to hold the roots of your plants with the crowns, and then throw all the earth to one side of the edge of the trench. The length of the trench will of course be governed by the number of trees to be heeled for. Then the bundle of trees and place them side by side with the roots close together in the trench and the tops leaning over the earth piled on one side. With a spade or shovel begin to dig away the opposite side of the trench piling the earth over the exposed roots in the trench until they are covered several inches deep. Press the earth firmly over and between the roots with the foot, so that the trees are in effect given a temporary planting, where they can safely remain until your ground is properly broken up and harrowed for planting.

It is desirable to plant the trees permanently before the buds start into growth, and as early as the ground can well be prepared. Early planting, provided the ground is well prepared, is usually desirable, as such early planting permits the tree roots to become well established before hot and dry weather comes on. The tree and shrub planting, the plant is usually set slightly deeper in the ground than if stood in the nursery rows; the top soil should be sprinkled over the roots with a fine tree is taken in an up and down motion, so that the roots may be surrounded on all sides with fine earth, and finally, after covering the roots the soil should be firmly packed with the feet or some tamping implement leaving the ground level and loose at the top layer.

In orchard planting in an exposed location it is best to lean the tree slightly toward the southwest, or the direction of prevailing winds, so that when finally established it may stand—T. W. Matthews, Kentucky Experiment Station.

THE WISE MEN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THIS is a day of wisdom and we all have to do with wise men of all sorts. Self-interest is perhaps the most common sort of wisdom. We hear from all sides the necessity of looking out for Number One, the obligation one is under to take care of himself, and the utter foolishness of spending good money on anything without getting an adequate return. "All for one" is the motto of such a wise man, and the one he has in mind is himself.

Many and I were having a little conversation about certain rather questionable proceedings of which he had been a part. Jimmy belonged to an organization, and he and it were in trouble.

"I don't care about the other fellows," he asserted. "What they do doesn't concern me. I'm interested only in clearing myself. I learned long ago that the main thing is to take care of yourself." His point of view is not an uncommon one among men of wisdom, but it will not go far toward bringing peace on earth and good will toward men. The wisdom of self-interest and selfishness is a poor wisdom that rules us of the sweetest pleasures of life.

The wise men who brought their gifts to the Christ Child had come a long way over barren desert roads. They were following an ideal, and in order to realize it they were willing to make sacrifices, to endure hardships, and to face dangers. The gifts they brought represented the best they had, the most precious things they could buy, and they laid them willingly at the feet of the Child.

There is no star shining in the west for us today, perhaps, and we may have neither gold nor frankincense nor myrrh, but there is about us every where opportunity for sacrifice, for remembering kindnesses, for thinking and doing for others, for showing the Christian spirit. For they are the true Wise Men who spend themselves, who overcome and giving unselfishly their riches.

Plain Coats Harmonize With Varied Frocks

The popularity of figured fabrics, in lively colors, for frocks and blouses, promotes the sale of plain coats this spring. The plain coat, in unassuming colors, harmonizes with any sort of dress. These utility coats are entirely untrimmings and are made of suede-finished cloths, kasbas, twills, tweeds and other fabrics. They are cut on smart and easy lines, sometimes with the modern type of sleeve and usually with double-breasted fronts. Colors best liked for them are light brown, russet, tan and wood shades, beige, sand and a few blues and greens. A typical plain coat and skirt hat for spring are shown in the picture above.

WHAT ABOUT THE ROADS?

This is the open season for motor show. The big ones—New York and Chicago—have come and gone. Within the next two months there will be more. And during each one of these we will no doubt hear the same refrain of the glowing prospects for the automotive industry in 1925.

It's good to be cheerful. And the automotive industry is not alone in feeling that 1925 holds forth promise of industrial and commercial activity.

But here and there the grumbling of motorists seems to be growing more frequent as they are stalled or delayed by congested traffic. True, there are almost 3,000,000 miles of so-called highways in the United States. Of these, some 430,000 miles have been improved in some fashion, and the by-ways are not crowded. Perhaps human nature is responsible for the fact that more than 17,000,000 motorists have ridden on the best road they can find, for human nature is not built on charity. "You're first, my dear Gaston" is plain.

Even in Illinois, where I've been making rapid strides in paving a state system of highways, we are suffering from congestion. Fortunately the people of Illinois had vision long enough ago to inaugurate a comprehensive statewide plan for road improvement and some day perhaps we will catch up with the new order in transportation.

However, the perplexities of construction were no sooner well under way than new problems arose. The pavement already laid has so increased the use of automobiles that they are getting in each other's way. Those whose interest lies primarily in the roads themselves have done valiant work to enlighten the public as to the need for more and wider roads. But the automotive industry has been too fast for them. Its pace has stripped the road building forces of the country.

There is still a great deal of buying power among those who do not wish to be crowded out of the highway. They have predicted that the day when more than 30,000,000 motor vehicles will be registered in this country is only from three to five years distant. Certainly in some places availability of paved roads seems to be the limiting of automobile sales. What the automotive industry will contribute toward removing this barrier is yet to be seen. But industrial history records practices that may be taken as a precedent.

Manufacturers of phonographs realized that they had to make the firmament of operatic stars twinkle if the sale of records was to show an upward curve.

A nationally known manufacturer of knitting goods realized that if a swimming hole were to be built in each city park, there would be a larger market for bathing suits. A more classic example is that of the railroads, when in the early days of the tracks running through a new wilderness. They advertised the possibilities of the wilderness to the people and with what success, the loaded platforms of freight and passenger depots from the Alleghenies to the Pacific soon attested. California and Florida are simply two of many examples which even now are being promoted by the railroads, and no doubt with excellent returns to the railroads, as well as to others.

Just how the automotive industry will remove the barrier of too few motor roads for its ever-increasing output may appear in some future statistical record. It may be that the more farseeing ones will advertise to the people that we must have more paved roads.

for Little Girls

The new wash fabrics for spring are in the shops and so are pretty and sturdy frocks made of them, for little girls. Neither the materials nor the dresses reveal anything startlingly new in design, but there are details of finish and adornment that put the signature of this spring on the new arrivals, and they wear the colors of the season.

Plain linen in high colors, chambray checked ginghams, voile and other dependable cotton crepes, with crepe de chine and other exotics in silk, afford a sufficient choice for any sort of wear. Outline embroidery in cotton dress is the outstanding decoration on pretty frocks while patterns like that shown in the picture appear on dresses of modesty.

CHILD HEALTH TALKS

(By Dr. McK Jennings)

In a radio talk the New York State Commissioner of Health said:
"The recent dash of the dog teams across the frozen snow of Alaska to save the diphtheria-stricken children of Nome with the life-giving diphtheria antitoxin was as thrilling as many a scene from the Blizzards picture drama. Braving the blizzards and fighting the frost the dog-team drivers faced overwhelming odds to bring relief to the little sufferers.
Eagerly we waited and wondered if the muzzling wolf-dogs would ever get through. The world loves a thrill and all of us are a touch of the romantic in all of us, the story had a universal appeal."

"But when the dash was over, the remedy received, and in the terms of the movies, the final "fade-out" was made, most of us had a greater sense of appreciation of the advantage of living in a State where anti-toxins and preventive treatment for diphtheria are easily available. But have we those of us who are partially made up of these advantages and protected our children against diphtheria?"

"Diphtheria antitoxin was first made in 1894. It was recognized as a sure cure for the disease if given in time and as a preventive when given to those who had been exposed. Only one case in ten now dies as compared with one out of two or three before the days of antitoxin. We have deaths because some cases of diphtheria are not recognized as such and because some do not receive antitoxin early enough in the disease; thus the diphtheria poison has had time to affect the heart."

"Because antitoxin was not available, many people are reported to have died from diphtheria in Nome; because parents often delay in calling a doctor when a child has a sore throat or croup with membrane present, antitoxin is given too late to save the child's life."

"There is one way that the children of Nome or of your town can be protected against having diphtheria and that is by having toxinantitoxin as a preventive treatment.
Ask your doctor about it."

No problem is keener than that of sneak a job at the same time.

People who put their morals in those who moralize.

The fellow who makes a noise

Secretary Miller's "alumnum book" is again in trouble. Attorney General Stone, on the eve of his transfer to the Supreme Court, has declared that it has been violating the law. Stone will leave the Department of Justice, however, before taking action against his Cabinet colleagues leaving the problem for his successor to handle. The alumnum book, an annual which is involved manufactures most of the alumnum cooking utensils and other household articles used in this country.

Withdrawal of the American delegates from the anti-narcotic conference at Geneva, Switzerland, has not increased the friendliness of European powers. Editorial writers of several papers in Europe have declared that it is NO longer possible to trust the United States in an international conference because if the Americans do NOT get exactly what they want, they will walk out.
The explanation of Government officials here, however, is that it is no use to sit in a conference that is unable to accomplish anything. The influence of America is so great, they believe, that it is the duty of its representatives to stick up for what they believe right, regardless of the immediate consequences.

The Capitol is a blaze of lights these nights and will remain so until the 68th Congress reaches the end of its journey at mid-night on March 3rd. Night sessions were ordered by Administration leaders so that the legislative jam may be somewhat relieved during the few days remaining of the present session. Arrangements for the inauguration are proceeding rapidly, although all plans for elaborate ceremonies have been abandoned at the request of the President. A large stand has been erected on the east side of the Capitol from which the President's inaugural address will be delivered.

Senator Borah should be a popular man in Germany. Not only has he succeeded in getting the Senate to ratify the German-American commercial treaty, but has taken steps to get the United States to return to its former enemies all the millions of dollars worth of property seized during the war. Borah's proposal has aroused some opposition in Administration circles, although it is expected that it will be the final solution of the alien property problem. Borah, in addition to giving all the property back to its German, Austrian and Hungarian owners, would have the U. S. pay rent on the steamships and other utilities which have been used by Americans since 1917.

Of great historical interest is one recent acquisition of the Library of Congress. It is a tiny fragment of the bones of Christopher Columbus, known to every school boy as the discoverer of America. When the Columbus remains were taken up several years ago in the West Indies parts of the bones were given treatment to preserve them and were sent to various personages connected with Columbus, such as the Mayor of Genoa, Columbus' birthplace, the Pope at Rome, the King of Spain, etc. The piece received by the Congressional Library forms the center of a gold locket of beautiful workmanship. The sliver of bone itself is surrounded by a transparent material which keeps the air from destroying it.

Probably no one incident in President Coolidge's administration has caused so much comment and produced so many cartoons as the story of the President's "hobby horse."
The horse is a mechanical one, installed in the President's bed-room and operated by electricity. Instead of riding a real horse, the President mounts the imitation steel three times a day and gets all the exercise that he would otherwise get on the bridal paths of the capital.
The story leaked out when the electrical horse developed some ailment and was sent down to the Navy Yard for repairs.

Old-Time Remedy Best for Heavy Coughs

Stubborn, racking, deep-seated coughs that refuse to yield to other remedies are often checked overnight with the old-time cough medicine that our parents and grandparents "swore by." In spite of modern discoveries nothing has been found to replace good old Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey for giving quick, sure relief for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spectrum and other throat irritations. Doctors say that the pine tar quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing, while the honey not only gives a pleasant taste, but helps soothe irritation.

But be sure you get the original Dr.
Bell's and no other. There have been dozens of imitations, but the original is still the best. It often stops the worst cough in 24 hours. Contains no injurious drugs, so can be given even to very children. Insist on Dr.
Bell's. Only sold at any good druggist's.

A PATRIOTIC MONTH

February hears many patriotic addresses, for Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays. It is a subject that cannot be overdone, if discussed in an inspiring way.

Patriotism tells the people to quit selfish wrangling over class and sectional interests, and pull together for the good of the whole nation.
More will be gained by promoting the progress of the whole country, thus increasing the share that each class and section shall get, than by scrabbling for a larger share of existing benefits.

Patriotism tells people not to think all the time of trifling personal interests, but to grow broadminded and attend to the duties of citizenship.

Patriotism tells people to open their hearts and minds and hear the story of the sacrifice and achievement of the pioneers and statesmen as to who would win.

LESSONS ON THE AIR

A change of college by a change in the wave length is one of the po-sibilities of the very near future, we are told.

Radio courses are being installed by some colleges and the only requirement for a college education will be the purchase of a radio set.
If the student wishes to "cut"
a class, he can do so with impunity, but he may have trouble making the broadcasting professor believe that his antenna was not working or his sta-tional detector was not hitting on all fours.

There will be plenty of air abills in these radio courses, but the students will have to pass examinations, and there is where the rub will come.

They may fall back on the excuse that their lesson got lost in an air pocket and was picked up by a dishonest person who failed to return it to the sender, but even that will not prevent the professor from giving them zero.

Lessons on the air will be very convenient, but there is no escaping responsibility, if anything is accomplished—radio courses not excepted.

Mr. N. E. Northcutt, of Walton, paid our office a call last Monday. He is one of our new subscribers.

A TOWN OR A COMMUNITY

A group of people may constitute a town without becoming a community. Formerly there were many towns that had no characteristics of a true community. The word "community" comes from a word meaning "common." It expresses the idea that these various people and families feel that they have common interests, and are taking hold in common efforts to promote them.

When a town has some success in organizing movements for the commune benefit, then it becomes a true community. Its people must stop trying to get ahead simply by playing a lone hand, and must learn that they have got to work unitedly and in accordance with modern ideas, to get the things they want.

A SCHOOL PROBLEM

An investigation of the mental ability of 5,362 children in the public schools of two Indiana cities was made and disclosed that approximately three per cent was definitely feeble minded in varying degrees and another three per cent was subnormal in intelligence.

The school children of most communities will not vary much from this percentage of mental inferiority.

With six percent disqualified from receiving the benefits of a public school education, educators have a real problem to cope with in endeavoring to correct this defect in present education methods.

There is a small percentage who are mentally superior. They offer no problem at all because they can be advanced without waiting for their class to move on, but there is nothing to do with the mentally deficient except to hold them in the same room, term after term, and they benefit little, if at all, from going over the same course of study repeatedly.

They require special attention, which can not be given by the public school teacher because of the size of the classes. If they do not measure up to the room average, they drop behind.

A teacher has little opportunity for devoting any time to individuals when she has a class of thirty-five to forty pupils.

In some schools "Opportunity classes" have been started to meet the need for special training of pupils who are below the standard in mentality.

Thus the public school is able to cope with a situation that is a menace to the normal child and it is also fulfilling its obligation to the subnormal child.

If a fellow could only put into the gas tank some of the gas that is wasted daily by the human gas bags, the question of how to run an automobile and still pay the grocery bill wouldn't be so difficult.

Honesty is put to a hard test in hard times.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

The recurrence of the birthday of the Father of our country succeeds each year in attracting a great amount of attention. The profound impression made by the very remarkable character it still very vivid.

There is a certain grandeur in the personality of this great patriot that rises above levels. It is claimed that Washington was not as politically skillful as other leaders of his time, men like Jefferson and Hamilton for instance. But he had characteristics that are almost unique.

One might speak long of his marvellous military skill and his staunch courage and resolution. Another great characteristic was his extremely high and conscientious sense of duty.

It was significant of his serious turn of mind that at the age of 13, when most youngsters of to-day think of kicking up their heels and having an high old time, George was writing out a schedule of 110 maxims of civility and good behavior. All through his life he was ever following this star of real conduct.

This high sense of obligation led him to take a quite unique political position when he became president. Where the other great leaders divided into parties and were much influenced by the appeals of prejudice and passion, Washington never aligned himself with any political organization. That might not be considered a good method for our times, but he followed this course because he feared the results of the bitter conflict that was springing up among American statesmen. His broad and generous mind could see good in all parties. He strove to bring the conflicting factions together, and make each see the merit in the other point of view. We need more Washington's conscience and breadth of view in our business and political conduct of to-day.

THE ANIMALS IN WINTER

Much used to be said about sufferings of horses in winter, from failure of owners to cover them when exposed to cold winds. Many such owners drive automobiles now, but there are still horse owners who fail to feed their horses well and keep them warm.

Many dogs and other domestic animals have a hard time in winter. You see these skinny creatures prowling about the town, looking in garbage cans and waste heaps, for the food that owners fail to give them at home.

A certain family tell how they once decided to buy a dog that was offered them for a low price. They were warned against taking the creature by friends who knew that it was cross and snappish. But they had faith in that dog, and believed that with better care, it's disposition would improve. They took him, fed and cared for him kindly, and that once saw the beast developed into a most good natured household pet. Kindness will change the disposition of any animal including some human beings.

The home-talent play "Borrowed Money" should be well worth time and money. Come and see it—that's the way to find out. See ad. in this issue of the Recorder.

HEBRON.

Geo. Hafer sold his farm just north of here to H. K. Williams. Lester Aylor sold his house, and lot in Hebron to L. C. Beemon. L. C. Beemon sold his small farm to a Mrs. McKinney, of Erlanger. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Utz have as their guest his mother from Southern Ky.

Mrs. Wm. England is spending several weeks with her sister Mrs. Alfred Jones, of Burlington.

Mrs. Frank Aylor was called to the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Harry Kilgour, of Evansville, Thursday night last week, who was stricken with paralysis.

Spring Neckwear Makes Its Entry

It appears that stylists haven't the faintest notion of opposing the fondness developed for simplicity in day frocks, either in the tailored or tub varieties. Now that these frocks are coming in for spring, the tailored dresses revolve the revival of navy blue, and the survival of the straight silhouette—but there is great variety in neck lines and neckwear grows important. All sorts of collar and cuff sets, vestees, jabots, ties and scarfs stand ready to contribute smart style touches to the inconspicuous new frocks. A collar and cuff set is shown here. It makes a cheerful addition to a sedate day frock or suit.

MUD SEASON COMING

Soon the country will be in for the annual mud season, which is due in various places anywhere from the middle of February to May 1. In many country districts conditions are almost intolerable through this period, when the roads are a slough of despond.

People residing in such locations are sometimes almost out of social doing during the mud period. The family automobile may be able to plough its way through, but even that powerful critter may be stuck. If the family depends on a horse, he may have to plod his weary way through the soggy roads at about the pace a short legged man could walk.

Many muddy roads have been repaired during recent years, but complaint is still bitter in many cases. Sometimes this trouble is due to unwise expenditure of road money in many years, in old fashioned habits of repairing the highways. The country districts need expert management to give them the decent spring roads that they ought to have.

EVERYONE HAS TO WORK

In country towns there must be a general disposition to take hold and help if such places are to make progress. Such towns can not afford to spend large sums in hiring people to give their time to community movements, and they must depend largely on volunteer work.

The men must work out a better economic condition by business-men's and farmer's organizations. The women must provide civic and social advantages by their own clubs. The young folks must expect to have the older people advise them but they must organize their own activities to a large extent. If this spirit of everyone at work for a better town is general, we can have all the real benefits here that are enjoyed anywhere.

The President has recently set apart three large tracts aggregating nearly 200,000 acres for reforestation. One of these was the 79,000-acre mill site reservation at Fort Benning Ga., another of about 100,000 acres at Fort McCall, Ala., and the third Camp Jackson, S. C. The Forest Service is adding to the timber-growing area of the national forests by planting from 7,000 to 10,000 acres each year but at this rate it will require 200 years to plant the land in its original forest.

 WILLIAM R. ROGERS
 Another 'Bull' Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Fellow and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

LOOKING at this Bull's picture here just reminds me of the Cattle Business, of which I am still in, in a small way.

Stock on the Exchange in Wall Street was never higher, Stock on a Ranch was never lower.

If a cattleman sold a Steer and they would let him weigh all the mortgages that was on the Steer with him, he would weigh 50 pounds heavier.

One Tenderloin Steak at a Hotel brings more than a Steer.

A quart of milk brings more than the Cow.

A Texas Long Horn brings $20 and one pair of Horn-rimmed glasses $25.

A Calf sells for $10 and its brains sell for $20.

The hide of a Cow brings $1 and one pair of shoes $18.

Two sacks of 'Bull' Durham is worth more than the Bull.

The only way to be in the Cattle business is with a picture of one.

P. S. I'm going to write some more pieces that will appear in this paper. Keep looking for them.

TO GO TO CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Collins, of Florence, were in Burlington for a short time Monday evening. They are preparing to go to California very soon, where they will live. Mrs. Collins was one of our candidates who did such splendid work in our recent circulation campaign.

O. N. Scott, of Petersburg, was in Burlington Tuesday on business relative to transfer of real estate in Petersburg.

A Woman's World Fair is to be held in Chicago the week of April 18-25 at which exhibits will be prepared to symbolize and emphasize the progress which they and their sisters in other lands have made in the arts, in literature, and in establishing for themselves a higher social and political status during the last two centuries.

SOW ALFALFA JUST

LIKE RED CLOVER

The habit of sowing alfalfa in the spring is the same as that of sowing clover and grass seed, advises Ralph Kenney, extension field agent for the College of Agriculture. Many farmers now use the cyclone, horn or other forms of hand sowers, while level field drills give satisfaction. The main consideration is to get a uniform distribution of seed. On later sowings, a light covering is necessary. Early sown alfalfa will be covered sufficiently by the weather. Good stands are secured in rye, wheat, barley and spring sown oats. On clean ground, where weeds are not bad by seeding alone. It is frequently advisable to sow a part of the seed about 10 days or two weeks later than the first, thereby securing better chances for a stand. In the first sowing is killed by unusual late frosts, the grower should be prepared to reseed at once. Resowing may also be caused by heavy washing rains or by a crusty soil.

Kentucky is ready for "Legion Endowment Fund" week March 2 to 7th.

TURN ME OVER

PAY AS YOU ENTER

The road to success is operated on the pay-as-you-enter basis. Those who want to ride have to provide their fare before they ride. Those who want to heat their way along life's thoroughfare have to look for another conveyance. It's positive waste of time to try passing counterfeit coin. The conductor will call your bluff and you will be put off the train. It's even impossible to steal a ride under false colors. Every passenger has to deliver the goods at the door or stay off. The cars are never crowded. There is always room for everyone who will meet the pay-as-you-enter requirement. Why waste time and energy envying those who ride on the road to success? There is only one way—pay the price and ride yourself.

The number of deaths from poison looses shows a small but steady increase. Verily, the thirst of some people is greater than the love of life.

Fortunes have been made recently on the grain exchange instead of the farm where they ought to have been made.

BURLEY POOL WINS INJUNCTION DENIED BY JUDGE HARDIN

Court of Appeals of Kentucky Reverses Jurist in Jones Case, Involving Joint Ownership of Land by Husband and Wife

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky has decided that Judge Chas. A. Hardin, of the Boyle circuit court, erred when he refused the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association an injunction to prevent Mrs. Linnell E. Jones, of that county, from selling what she claimed to be her part of a crop of tobacco grown on the farm owned jointly by herself and her husband, Guy M. Jones, who is a member of the Association.

The crops grown on the farm were delivered to the Association in the years of 1921, 1922 and 1923, without question. When time came to deliver the 1924 crop, Mr. Jones delivered a part of the tobacco grown on the place to the Association, but Mrs. Jones claimed that she had contracted with a non-member tenant to grow tobacco for her and that she was under no obligation to deliver it to the Association as she was not a member. A suit was brought to restrain her from selling the half of the crop she claimed over auctioneers and Judge Hardin declined to grant the injunction. Judges Sampson, Settle, Clay and McCandless, who heard the Association's appeal ordered the injunction granted and, following that action of the highest court in the State, Mrs. Jones delivered the tobacco in question to the Association, paid the costs of the suit and damages of five cents a pound on a portion of the tobacco already sold when the injunction was sued for.

THE LIVESTOCK SITUATION

By O. B. Jessen, Kentucky Experiment Station

Hogs and beef cattle are good examples of the way in which production in agriculture tends to respond to price. For several years the market situation has not included optimistic features for the farmer interested in beef cattle. The same has been true of hogs. Recently, however, a change has been in evidence, especially in the hog market in which prices already have strengthened materially. The large increase in 1923 led to profitably low prices for hogs. The discouraged production and the lessened production is causing prices to rise. Eventually the high prices will stimulate production and a period of lower prices will likely follow. The hog market therefore tends to move in cycles, the upward movement running along for about two to three years followed by a downward movement for about the same length of time. The poor corn crop last year has been a factor in encouraging rapid marketing, which will serve further to reduce pork supplies.

According to estimates of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, there were 18 per cent fewer hogs on the farms Jan. 1, 1925, than a year ago. These figures suggest that some increase in fall farrowing this year will be advisable.

The prices of cattle like those of hogs tend to move somewhat in cycles except the periods naturally are much longer, namely around eight or nine years. The indications are that the low point has now been passed and that conditions will tend to improve in the cattle market during the next few years. There are fewer cattle on farms than a year ago. The movement of stockers and feeders from the markets was considerably smaller last year than in 1923. One factor which will help the cattle market during the next year or two is the improvement that is taking place in the hog market.

As far as lambs and wool are concerned, the market outlook continues favorable. Especially as long as business conditions and employment continue as they are at present, the demand for spring lambs, for which Kentucky has a favorable reputation is likely to continue to remain on its present basis. Estimates do not indicate any large increase in the number of sheep on farms in this country. The wool outlook at present is good and lower prices for this season are not in prospect.

Oakley Easton had the extreme misfortune to break his right arm last Friday morning. The same old story—"Kickin' Henry." Mr. Easton had recently opened a garage here with his brother Stanley, which makes the accident doubly unfortunate, as it renders him incapable of any service in that line. It is said, however, that he holds an accident policy which covers this class of accidents.

"Work for the night is coming" was one of the favorite songs, but now it is "Doll up for the night is coming."

OPERATION OF PETERSBURG GARAGE NOW IN NEW HANDS

What is known as the Petersburg garage, and which has been operated by O. N. Scott for the past few years, was taken over last Monday morning by the firm of Dolph and Weiskie.

Mr. Scott retains the ownership of the building, while the mechanical end will be under the management of Justin Dolph, son of Chas. Dolph, of Bellevue. Mr. Dolph is an experienced mechanic and should render splendid service to his patrons.

Mr. Herman Weiskie, the other member of the firm, is connected with H. D. Green, Ford Agency, of Rising Sun. He will conduct a branch of this agency at the Petersburg establishment.

HELD SPOTLIGHT

E. G. Stephenson's pen of White Leghorns were in the high ten pens at the International Egg Laying Contest for production during the month of Feb. The highest pen laid 58 eggs and none of the pens of the high ten laid below 50 eggs for the month.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor's pen in the Murphysboro place are still holding second place in very stiff competition.

In the local egg laying contest Mr. Kenneth Stephens is still in the lead with his White Leghorn pullets. They laid 906 eggs in February or 52½ per cent production.

COMMUNITY MEETINGS

Community meetings have been held so far this month. During the first week meetings were held at Grant, Hebron, Petersburg and Verona. Hebron and Petersburg had outstanding meetings. Their orchestras gave some excellent entertainment. The orchestra at Hebron deserves much praise for the excellent work they are doing, as many of the members have only had seven lessons on their instruments. The high school auditoriums were filled to capacity to enjoy the music and the seven reels of movies, "Yellow Stone National Park," "Lumbering in the North Woods," "The Ten Millionth Ford," "Fording the Lincoln Highway from New York to San Francisco" and a comedy "The Champen" were shown. The ladies at Petersburg and Hebron have asked to have Miss Myrtle Weldon, Director of Home Demonstration Work in this State, to speak at some future meeting.

HOUSE BURNS IN CONSTANCE

Deputy Sheriff Utz was called to Constance, last Friday night where four boys had set fire to a house owned by Mrs. Cora Baker. The dwelling and contents were completely destroyed.

Geo. Zimmer, Raymond Lawrence, Anthony Fischesser and Max Klin, all 16 years of age and living in Cincinnati left their home and came to the house owned by Mrs. Baker, who is the grandmother of Zimmer and cooked a supper, and while they were eating one of the boys discovered that the house was on fire and they say that it caught from the flame running out of the top of a lamp. When they left the house they took an old pistol. Deputy L. T. Utz brought them to Burlington for further investigation as some thought that the boys may have purposely set the house on fire, but that charge could not be sustained and the boys were turned over to their parents.

R. Lee Huey of Big Bone, announces as a candidate for Sheriff in this issue. Three candidates have cast their votes into this conflict. Mr. Huey was born and has resided near his present residence all of his life and has been prominently connected with the development of that section of this county. He is a well known Democrat and citizen of the county and needs no further introduction to our citizens. If elected he expects to conduct the duties of the office that it will not only be a credit to him but to his people.

Miss M. E. Rogers announces as a candidate for re-election to the office of County Clerk in this issue. Miss Rogers is thoroughly acquainted with the management of her office, having served as deputy for several years before her present term began. Miss Lize, as she is known by the people of this county, has been an accommodating clerk, and she is resting upon her past record to secure for her the nomination in August.

TIMELY AGRICULTURAL NEWS

By R. J. Matson County Agent

COOPERATIVE COMMISSION ASSOCIATION

Farmers of the district around Cincinnati are looking with interest to the success of the new Producers Cooperative Commission Association, at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards. The new firm was opened on Tuesday Feb. 19th, and they are now ready to take care of shipments from the farmers of Boone county.

This is the co-op that many of our farmers have long been wishing for and fighting for. It marks the opening of the 14th Live Stock Producers Association. All of these associations have been doing good, and during the last year saved the farmer about one-third of their commissions. The Association at Cincinnati will.

The same standards and principles as the producers have on all the other markets. P. O. Wilson, Manager, invites all the farmers to visit the offices and get acquainted with the organization. The sales force are all men of long experience and have the producer's spirit. They are: Tim Rife, Cattle Salesman, formerly with John Clay St. Paul, Ed. Schneider, calf salesman, formerly with J. M. Rich, E. Co., Cincinnati Ohio; Fred Green, Asst. Hog Salesman, formerly with Swift and Co., of St. Joseph, Mo. Mr. H. W. Beckman of Pisano Sun, Ind., has charge of the books.

When they left the house they took an old pistol. Deputy L. T. Utz brought them to Burlington for further investigation as some thought that the boys may have purposely set the house on fire, but that charge could not be sustained and the boys were turned over to their parents.

R. Lee Huey of Big Bone, announces as a candidate for Sheriff in this issue. Three candidates have cast their votes into this conflict. Mr. Huey was born and has resided near his present residence all of his life and has been prominently connected with the development of that section of this county. He is a well known Democrat and citizen of the county and needs no further introduction to our citizens. If elected he expects to conduct the duties of the office that it will not only be a credit to him but to his people.

Miss M. E. Rogers announces as a candidate for re-election to the office of County Clerk in this issue. Miss Rogers is thoroughly acquainted with the management of her office, having served as deputy for several years before her present term began. Miss Lize, as she is known by the people of this county, has been an accommodating clerk, and she is resting upon her past record to secure for her the nomination in August.

Seventy-nine American cities have more than 100,000 population.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE COUNTY

(By Prof. A. M. Yesley, Florence)

The county being organized representatives from Virginia began to invade the county for the purpose of seeking suitable places for settlement. We find in 1804 that William Carpenter, a preacher from Madison, Va., made a journey to our county for such a purpose, and on his return home he advised his friends that Boone county was an ideal place, and on October 8th, 1805 Geo. Rouse, Elizabeth Rouse, Jno. House, Milly House, Frederick Zimmerman, Rosa Zimmerman, Ephraim Tanner, Susanna Tanner, John Rouse, Nancy Rouse, and Elizabeth Hoffman, packed their belongings in covered wagons, trudging down the Shenandoah Valley until they came to the Holston river, then up that river until they came to the road that Daniel Boone had made, which they followed to Lexington, from there they followed the ridge route or what we call the Dixie Highway, finally locating where the hopeful church now stands. It is difficult for us to conceive the hardships that were endured by these families in a wilderness of forest forest. Florence had no existence, where Covington is now situated there was one log cabin. Cincinnati had two brick buildings, two frame buildings and a few log cabins. Burlington had a log court house, a log jail and a few cabins. These hardy settlers with two utensils, the axe and grub-bone fork, erected their cabins and prepared the soil for cultivation and so well pleased with the results of their labor and location, that they had the following men and their families come and locate in 1806: John Beemon, Daniel Beemon, Jacob Rouse, Michael Rouse and Simon Tanner. The above families were also a religious people and felt the need of a place to worship God.

Therefore Geo. Rouse gave an acre of ground on which to build a church and in 1807 they built a church of unwhewn logs. The roof and door were made of clapboards, the floor with hickory bark and the seats were made of sapling, there was an opening left at each end for a window but these were always open for the want of glass. There was no stove, no fireplace, and yet they always met for worship during the winter.

Mr. Ephraim Tanner seems to have been their leader in the religious worship in absence of a regular minister and without a doubt he must have been a man of strong character and far-reaching influence - to have held his flock together until 1813, when Rev. William Carpenter (the man who advised the settlement) moved here and became their first regular pastor.

Boys and girls of today do you realize that the above pioneers are your ancestors, and that several of them fought in the Revolutionary War and witnessed the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown? I fear that we are too prone to forget the inconveniences and privations our ancestors endured for our welfare.

HIGH AIMS OF KENTUCKY PRESS

The executive committee of the Kentucky Press Association is perfecting a plan designed to elevate the standard of journalism in this state, and perhaps serve as an example for other state associations. It proposes support of all laws, strict honesty and impartiality in circulation statements and advertising rates, refusal of space to questionable advertisements, adoption of lofty aims of policy with constructive and educational information for readers.

One of the fundamentals set forth in a tentative code of ethics is the pledge "to strive for no success that is not founded upon the Golden Rule and the highest conception of justice and morality."

Another pledge of the proposed code is "to use every laudable effort to elevate the standards of journalism in America and win that confidence and respect that comes as a reward for right doing and, right thinking."

Bids will be received by the undersigned until 9 a. m. Tuesday 7th day of April, 1925, for the construction of the following roads:

Road leading from Bullock Pen Creek, Grant county line, to a point near G. C. Ransom where it intersects the pike leading to Verona & Crittenden Turnpike.

The length of said road is 1242 feet.

Also leading from the Grant-co. line to the Verona & Crittenden Turnpike a distance of 3800 feet.

The road to be constructed according to plans and specifications on file in my office.

The right to reject any and all bids reserved by order of the Boone Fiscal Court.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE

BORROWED MONEY DRAWS CAPACITY CROWD AGAIN SAT-URDAY NIGHT

A full house again greeted the play of Borrowed Money when the curtain was drawn last Saturday at 8:00 p. m.

Although the house was full, all those who desired seats obtained them, which could not be said of the week previous when a number were turned away.

Quite a few saw it the second time and all expressed their opinion that the rendition was the equal, if not better, than the previous showing. There were a number of out of town guests present, and we are glad to say that they were not a bit "stingy" with their praise.

Committee Appointed by President

Stone To Aid Development of Closest Possible Contact With Members to Keep Them Informed of Affairs

President and General Manager James C. Stone of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative, has appointed W. O. Protsman, of Indiana; Perry B. Gaines, of Carrollton, and Joseph E. The trouble with committee work is that nobody does the work.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 12.—

Events moved rapidly as The American Legion threw more and more forces into the nation-wide effort for the $5,000,000 Endowment Fund for the disabled and the orphans of the World War during the past week.

Kentucky, second of the states to start, went into action after a radio barrage, Indiana, initial state to launch the movement, spurred on by the results of her week's efforts, pressed forward toward her $200,000 goal. Senator William B. McKinley, Illinois, gave his personal check for $5,000, the first large individual gift to the fund. Organization was being rushed to completion in ten other states preparatory to the opening of their campaigns.

In Kentucky the week of March 2 was set aside as "Kentucky Endowment Fund Week." Active work in an intensive public appeal was pushed in all parts of the state. Radio addresses were made by National Vice-Commander Peyton H. Hoge, Jr., of Louisville; Department Commander Frank D. Rash, of Earlington, and Alex G. Barrett, Louisville city chairman, to launch the work.

Reports coming in from all parts of Indiana indicated that the general public was responding generously and gladly to the endowment appeal as it was presented to them. With several towns already over the top, others were putting forth extra efforts to complete their quotas. Evansville, home of Marcus S. Sontag, chairman of the Indiana state committee for the fund, had nearly completed her quota. In the opening days of the effort there a total of $15,000 had been subscribed.

Franklin Indiana, subscribed a total of $1,750 on a $3,500 quota. Fowler, home of Department Commander Thomas McCannell, exceeded its $400 quota. Among the towns which completed their quotas on early reports to departmental headquarters were Corydon, $150; Bremen $550; Petersburg, $500. At Corydon Commander C. A. Keller and his post service officer raised the town's quota in two afternoons by their own efforts.

Commander McCannell, commenting on the movement in Indiana said: "The general public is responding splendidly to our appeal. The mine disaster at Sullivan, in which 37 men lost their lives, just on the eve of the opening of our campaign, has driven home to the people as nothing else could the need for such work as the Legion is doing for the disabled veterans and the orphans of veterans. The people of Indiana are going over the top."

To the Combat Medals Men's Association of Chicago, first organization in Illinois to contribute to the fund, goes also the honor of securing the first large single contribution.

The people of the South are taking on new life and facing the future with a determination to make "a place in the sun" is evidenced by a review of a trip recently made by Mr. C. Forbes, the well known financial writer and Editor of Business Magazine. He asserts that the South today is spending almost twice as much on its public schools as the whole of the United States spent in 1900; that almost every second city has a college or university; that it has some of the finest hotels in the nation; that its public buildings, country clubs, public hospitals, modern highways are blossoming in all directions and the old Southern culture is coming back. Mr. Forbes expresses the opinion that religion enters more largely into the life of the Southern people than in any other part of the country for it has more churches per capita than any other part of the nation.

Incidentally not an evolution but a revolution, is taking place in the housing facilities now being furnished Southern workers, particularly in industrial centers. The South's phenomenal progress in industry in electrical power, transportation, in agriculture, and in other business directions is beginning to rival that of the Middle West and by the end of the first half of this century the South promises to attain a position of cultural leadership such as it enjoyed in the first half of the last century when it supplied a large proportion of the ablest and strongest of founders and upbuilders of the nation.

City folks claim to have more polished manners, and frequently their tongues are too smooth for their own good.

The dollars spent in improving the roads to a town, usually find their way before the season is over into the cash drawers of the merchants of that community.

PERRY SHERIFF OUSTED BY FIELDS

ATTORNEYS FOR HOLLIDAY WILL TAKE CASE TO THE COURT OF APPEALS

Order of Governor Gives Detailed Review of Charges Against Official—Gambling Held Proved.

Frankfort—Under an order and judgment entered Governor W. J. Fields removed Tolbert Holliday from the office of sheriff of Perry County and declared the office vacant.

The order and judgment will not be effective pending an appeal from the decision of the governor to the Court of Appeals.

At the close of the ouster trial, when Governor Fields announced that he would remove Holliday from office for neglect of duty, attorneys for the defense signified their intention of appealing from the ruling of the governor to the Court of Appeals.

Under the ouster law Holliday has ten days in which to file his appeal with the Appellate Court.

In his order and judgment the governor set out eleven grounds, proved by the evidence, for finding Holliday guilty of neglect of official duty. They follow:

That Holliday engaged in games of chance with his deputies, the district judge of the district, and others, and that as sheriff he failed to perform the duties of his office in arresting persons so engaged in such games.

That at such games of chance liquor was furnished and sold in violation of law and that Holliday, as sheriff, failed to arrest the persons engaged in the illicit traffic and sale.

That Holliday furnished deputy sheriffs to coal corporations for which he received a fee of $25 per ton.

That Holliday permitted his deputy sheriffs to operate gambling games and to engage in the sale of liquor in violation of the prohibition laws.

That Holliday retained in his employ a deputy sheriff, McKelley Combs, who committed the crime of rape upon a 15-year-old girl, and that the crime was compounded and compromised by the payment of $500.

That Holliday retained in his employ a deputy sheriff, Bob Wooten, who "sold his influence" to Jim Sandifer, whose son was under indictment in Perry County for murder.

That Holliday continued Bob Wooten in office as a deputy sheriff, although he was aware of the fact that the deputy engaged in gambling games.

That gambling, assignation houses and places for the illicit sale of whiskey were operated at numerous places within the town of Hazard with the knowledge of Holliday and his deputies.

That Holliday, while in a drunken condition, assaulted a young boy, 20 years of age, who is a helpless paralytic.

That Holliday was boisterous upon the streets of Hazard and used profane and vulgar language in the presence of various citizens of the town.

TEXAS LEAGUE MAKES HAUL.

Jay Kirk, Old Warhorse Elated At Call To Play For Texas Champs.

Louisville—Jayson Kirk, a noble old warhorse of baseball, and one of the game's greatest natural hitters, left Louisville to join the Fort Worth Panthers of the Texas League. The step down to Class A baseball after thirteen years of pastime in faster company would depress momentarily most ball players, but in the case of Jay, instead of being bruised even the kindest bit, he is downright elated. His delight is two-fold. First, because his contract with Fort Worth enriches him more than any he ever received in the eleven years that he has spent in Class AA baseball. Second, because Jakey Atz, long a buddy, and for four winter seasons a teammate of Jay's is the boss of the Fort Worth Club.

White Way Plan in Warren Heard.

Bowling Green—A movement was started for a white way from the Public Square, Main and College Streets, to the foot bridge, First and College, and from College and Fourth to the new Louisville & Nashville Railroad passenger station, Kentucky and Fourth Streets, at a meeting of the Bowling Green Kiwanis Club here.

Fish & Game Association Organized.

Mt. Sterling—Fifty sportsmen and citizens organized the Montgomery-co. Game and Fish Protective Association, electing George H. Snyder, president and Joe Evans, secretary. The association will stock the streams and lands with quail and fish.

Letcher County Coal Deal Made.

Whitesburg—A. F. Parsons and associates of Huntington, W. Va., have purchased the mining plants of the Magnolia-Kirkborn Coal Company at Whitesburg and Parsons, above here in the Kirkborn coal fields of Letcher County. While the consideration is reported to have been large, it has not been made public. It is said some improvements will be made in both plants. Mr. Parsons installed the latest plant eight years ago, selling it to the Magnolia-Kirkborn company.

Italy, according to reliable reports will soon seek a hearing regarding the funding of her debt to the U. S. Her statesmen apparently have observed the good accruing to England in acknowledging her debt and making arrangements to pay. The action of great Britain and Poland in funding their debts to the United States, put them on the road back to prosperity.

This should be evidence enough to French statesmen that if France desires to prosper, she must do the honorable thing and take a definite step towards repaying the money she owes this country.

FITTING GARDEN LAND
 By John S. Gardener, College of Agriculture

Part of this discussion of necessity deal with what should have been done several months ago, for the best time to break garden land is in the fall.

The complete program is fall-breaking and sowing to a winter-hardy cover crop, especially in that portion of the garden where the midsummer vegetables are to stand. In that portion where the early-set or early-planted crops are to be, partly rotted manure should be used for manure is more rapid in its action than a cover crop. The manure may be put on before breaking, or it may be spread as it is made, the winter thru, on fall-broken land left rough. To fit land so treated for early garden, all that is needed is a light disking and dragging, across the furrows; in this way a relative, dry and early seed bed is secured. Speaking of garden cover crops, a considerable choice may be had. If the garden is so laid out that the early vegetables are grouped by themselves, that portion should be disked or broken whenever the vegetables are done, about August 15, and hairy vetch broadcast and disked in. Five pounds of seed will sow one-quarter acre. Hairy vetch is winter hardy, and, if sown early enough, will furnish quite enough manure to make stable manure unnecessary and a considerable amount of nitrogen besides. The portion of the garden so treated had best be put into the summer vegetables, for it takes about six weeks for this cover crop to break down.

She may be going to let it grow out—but when?

Washington, D. C. — Forced to work on Sunday or lose his job, a Detroit youth refused to use the extra wages resulting from his Sunday work and has sent two checks of considerable size to the Detroit Red Cross Chapter.

One check for $153.75 was received in the Chapter office recently with a penciled note stating: "Last summer I had to work on Sundays in order to hold my job, but I made up my mind that the money I received for Sunday work should be given to charity, so I sent it to the Red Cross."

Formerly another check had been received from him for $100, both of which are being used to finance the chapter's work, which includes Public Health Nursing, assisting ex-servicemen and civilian families, and teaching Life Saving and First Aid.

WOMEN CROWD MEN

IN BUSINESS

The changes in the business world which have raised woman's position from that of an inferior to that of an executive has brought about a peculiar economical situation. It has brought to women great financial responsibilities which were formerly regarded as peculiar to men, and if this condition is to continue, women must not expect to enjoy all privileges which have been theirs hitherto.

Woman's place in business was created by the force of necessity and it cannot be denied that it originally evolved from man's distaste for certain types of office routine. Today there are more than 12,000,000 women engaged in all types of business life, and Business and Professional Women's club alone represents 600,000 of them solidly organized for the purpose of bettering woman's position and overcoming the inherent prejudice which still lingers in the mind of man. It is confidently expected that during the next generation men will be compelled to fight and make good in order to hold their place in business in the professions.

London auctions fixes the price of wool for the world. Just at present there is too much wool, and speculators are exerting every effort to keep prices up. At the last auction, 29,000 bales were with drawn because the bids were not satisfactory. It is admitted, however, that prices must drop, because bankers hesitate to carry the speculators while stocks increase. Meanwhile the American Woolen Company announces an advance of 6 to 8 per cent over last year's prices and for some times a much greater advance.

Another Bull Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Zerkow, Folles and Green star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

THE fourth of March is a Politician's uncle. He is either coming in or going out. If he is staying in it's because they haven't got wise to him yet. I have always said Office holders should be elected for life (subject, of course, to impeachment for neglect or dishonesty). Then they could give their work all of their time, instead of worrying about how to stay in, and that would do away entirely with the biggest social problem we have to face in this country. And that is the thousands of Individuals who go through life just trying to get in office. If we could get their mind off of office, and get 'em to working at something useful. But what's the use talking about a Heaven on earth. We got to die to get rid of the Office seeker, and then I bet you we will find them, either wanting to have Saint Peter impeached, or to get a job as Superintendent of the Furnace. Oh Yes, I like to forget 'Bull' Durham. It will be on sale in both places, no advance in prices.

P. S. I'm going to write some more pieces that will appear in this paper. Keep looking for them.

WIND

March is noted over the greater part of the country for its winds. Then is the time when the tricky breezes are supposed to blow, tipping man's hat in most impudent assault into the gutter, and ruffling up Woman's skirts most scandalously. Folks that like quiet and restrained days dislike old Mr. March, and think it is a good month to stay indoors.

Yet many wholesome souls like old windy March, spite of his sometimes rowdyish habits. They feel that he blows all that stagnant air out of their lungs, and makes them feel young again. They experience a certain sense of triumph in battling against his buffets and being able to overcome them and enjoy their walk or some outdoor sport in spite of his assaults. Mr. Wind, unless he goes to hurricane extremes, is really a good friend, and he blows a lot of bad tasting air out of our towns and homes.

Coughs and Chest Colds Yield Quickly to Old Time Treatment

Physicians now say that the best treatment for a cough is not to merely numb the throat nerves as many cough medicines do, but to help Nature quickly throw off the cause—congestion and mucus. When this is done the severest cough is usually relieved in a very short time.

This is exactly the action of that old-time tried and proved cough medicine, Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey. Doctors say the pine tar is hard to beat for quickly loosening and removing the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing, while the honey not only gives a pleasant taste, but helps soothe soreness and irritation. But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey and not some substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original and has been known for many years as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other quick-acting ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in bringing quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—helps for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and all other chest ailments. Get it at all drug stores. Dr. Bell's. Costs only 30c at all good drug stores.

WHEN IS A LIE NOT A LIE

Are you a pathological liar?

If so, you form one of a very large class, according to the scientific investigators of the subject of truth who have added a new variety of lie to the previously recognized kinds, white, black and statistics.

The pathological liar, however, does not deserve the shrewd and sagacious word according to the truth of experts, because it is a lie which is not a lie and not a white attempt to deceive.

If the scientific definition of a "perfect conformity" is accepted, it is practically impossible to avoid perversion.

Even dolls, it is pointed out, by this definition become the cause of untruth, since children are trained to endow them with entirely fictitious personalities and histories.

Society conventionalities are equally prolific causes of offense, it being scientifically a lie and not even a "pathological" one for a woman to announce that she is "hot" when in reality she is not.

In addition to the discovery of the pathological lie, the scientific study of the subject has discovered a new disease called "pseudophobia," which means a fear of the false.

Persons suffering from this complaint constitute the class whose passionate desire for veracity prohibits the telling of stories about such familiar mythical characters as Santa Claus and Jack Frost.

Between the horns of this dilemma it would seem that almost everybody must be classed as a liar of one sort or another.

There seems to be room for further investigation, however, in order to determine how to detect the pathological lie and to distinguish it from other less excusable kinds.

THE ESCAPE VALVE

When General Baden-Powell started the Boy Scout movement fourteen years ago, he was ridiculed by many people who thought the idea a dream.

Today the Boy Scouts of America have 696,271 members, -21,922 troops, 164,053 adult volunteer leaders, and the founder is recognized as a public benefactor.

The National Scout organization is preparing to observe the fourteenth anniversary of its founding February 8-14 and to call the attention of the nation to what Scouting has done for the youth of the land.

Everyone knows that you can take a weakling, put him in the army and keep him there a few years, and he will come out a reasonably strong and healthy man. It is the rigid and systematic military training that performs such miracles.

The training given the Boy Scouts is much along the lines of that followed in the army, with sufficient variation to appeal to the juvenile mind.

There is a surplus of enthusiasm bottled up in every boy's breast that must escape and Boy Scout activities provide the valve.

When there is no such organization, boys will find an outlet else where--on the street, with the gang or in some sort of mischief in which the boy specially delights.

Boys will be boys until they grow into manhood. The manner of their growth depends upon the manhood and womanhood of today.

In order for them to have direction, Boy Scouts must have leaders, and becoming an adult leader requires a sacrifice.

Hebron High School Notes

The school educational picture was shown at the school auditorium last Wednesday evening. The orchestra, directed by Mr. Weil, played three selections from America, Ambition overture and activity. Everyone thought the music was fine as the orchestra has taken but seven lessons. The pictures are splendid and very instructive. A large crowd attended.

A Parent-Teachers meeting will be held at the school house Friday night, Feb. 13th.

The High Y Clubs held their weekly meeting last Wednesday afternoon.

Plans are being made to beautify the school grounds as soon as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Fowler moved to Chester Hood's last Friday.

HELPING THE PRESIDENT

Senator Edge of New Jersey recently suggested that a commission should be appointed to see if the burdens resting upon the president could be made lighter. President Coolidge has let it be known that he does not feel in need of such relief. However, it will not soon be forgotten that two recent presidents broke in health as the result of this strain.

If the politicians are constantly turning to the president for appointments for themselves and friends, such demands are likely to cause any occupant more worry than comes from the study of the real problems of the nation. The best way to help the president is to stop pestering him to help build up political machines, and give him the time free to study the big questions on which his wisdom is needed for the guidance of Congress.

AUTOMOBILE CRASHES

It was a picture of the dangers of modern automobile driving, when the report of motor accidents in Connecticut for January showed an average of 39 accidents daily. And those occurred in the middle of winter, when there was much less motoring in that locality than during the rest of the year.

The person who goes out with an automobile, with the multitude of cars on the road, needs a far higher degree of caution than was called for a few years ago. His motto should be, "Take no chances, give the other fellow plenty of room, and let the speeders have the right of way when they want it."

MANY FARMERS TO RAISE TON LITTERS

Lexington, Ky.—The world is going to know that Kentucky farmers can raise hogs at a profit, and produce ton litter along with other states. So declares Grady Sellards, field agent for the College of Agriculture extension division, who is pushing the ton-litter contest in this state.

Good hog prices and prospects of even better prices, along with the knowledge of what good breeding plus good feeding will accomplish, are helping to bring a revival in hog raising in Kentucky. Mr. Sellards said. Last year 50 farmers entered the ton-litter contest; this year it is expected that more than double that number will enroll.

SPRING FEVER

Spring seems a kind of imaginative time of year, when men and women dream dreams about natural beauty, and long for the great open spaces. People feel a revulsion from their daily tasks and cherish a vagrant impulse for aimless wandering in the cheerful sunshine. Some call this wanderlust spring fever.

Also a languor steals through one at this time when one's physique adapts itself to warmer temperatures. Many used to call their feeling spring fever, but the old times had a less polite term and they named it laziness.

Modern industry harnesses us to certain jobs, and spring fever is not accepted as a legitimate cause for absence. If we were free to wander and loaf at will, such vagrant habits would fall on us, and we would soon prefer to return to active work. Spring fever is then a kind of illusory feeling, but at least it may incite us to spend all possible hours in the cheerful sunshine.

HOBBIES FOR EVERYONE

Some questioner a few Sundays ago asked Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, through his famous service at Brooklyn, New York, which is broadcast by radio, if "every business man should have a hobby." Dr. Cadman responded "Yes," very emphatically, incidentally admitting that his hobby was his grandchildren. The word "hobby" used to be thought to mean usually some notion which people emphasized in a disagreeable way. It has come to refer now to some diversion or incidental occupation by which people obtain relief from daily work. The questioner above referred to might well have asked if everyone should have a hobby. If such occupations outside of one's main calling are desirable, the benefits should not be limited to business men.

The hard working old timers, and some modern folks who cultivate strenuously, do not fully approve of hobbies. They have felt that people must throw their entire energy into their daily tasks.

Yet when a person does a day's work, and then keeps at it during the hours supposed to be devoted to rest, his idea and energy lose something of freshness. He would do well to devote some of this time to some side issue which brightens his mind and sends him back to work in better mental condition.

The housewife at her pots and kettles, the wage-earner at his machine, the clerk in the store, might well also have their hobbies. It should be a rather active pursuit, not merely a passive amusement where they sit still and watch other people do things. The workman who develops a fine garden, the sedentary person who plays tennis or golf, the housewife who plays some musical instrument, have each gained something more than the power in that special line. They have developed consciousness of their own skill, which should help them take hold of their usual tasks with increased confidence.

APPLYING WASHINGTON'S

PRINCIPLES

President Coolidge has announced that a commission has been appointed to arrange plans for the participation of all the nations in a big celebration of the 200th birthday of George Washington, which will come in 1932.

The American people will welcome the guests for such an event. They will hope that the study of the ideas of George Washington, which will be encouraged by such an affair, will have some result to lead the nations to be governed by his principles, which have proved so beneficial to the United States.

If George Washington's ideas had been governing in Europe in 1914, there would have been no World War. The autocratic governments that plunged the world in that conflict, would long before that have been given up in favor of Republican institutions. Or at least they would have been so modified, that the powers of kings and emperors would have been checked by Democratic parliaments. And if the nations still at this late day, follow those principles of peace and justice on which Washington built his life, the danger of further wars could be abolished.

OBITUARY

Sarah Lucetta, daughter of Chas. and Lillian Hensley, was born Dec. 5, 1902, on Ashby Creek, Boone Co., Ky., and died near her Feb. 26th, 1925, aged 22 years, 2 months and 21 days.

She leaves a husband, father, mother, two daughters, brother and sister and a host of other relatives and a lot of friends.

She was united in marriage with Clifford Baker Jan. 31, 1921. To this union two daughters were born, Lillian Elizabeth and Frances Louise. She was consecrated to God in infant baptism and was ready and willing to go and meet her Maker, but she wanted to live so as to be with her two little children and other loved ones.

Lucetta, as she was always called, was of a bright and cheerful disposition, always willing and ready to do service for others. She always liked school work, progressed rapidly and graduated from the Petersburg High School in the class of 1921.

She lived all her life near the place of her birth except the short time of her married life.

Early last fall her health began to fail. Everything was done for her to try to regain health, so she might be with loved ones, but God knew best and to lock her, and we point the sorrowing relatives for comfort to Him, who doeth all things for the best.

Funeral Service.—The funeral will be held at Sunset and Evening Star and one clear call for me.

And may there be no moaning of the bar when I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,

Too full, for sound a foam

When that from which out the boundless deep

Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell and after that the dark,

And may there be no sadness or farewell when I embark

For though from out the loins of time the flood may bear me far

I hope to meet my pilot face to face when I have crossed the bar.

Kentucky Briefs

was one of the most important deals made for some time.

Shelbyville—The 10-room hotel and boarding house of Mrs. Helen Miller was destroyed by fire.

Shepherdsville—The district girls' basketball championship was won here by the girls of the Memorial Consolidated Graded High School.

Versailles—With a force of sixty men employed, the United Phosphate & Chemical Company of this city resumed operations after being closed down for eleven months.

Pineville—Judge T. J. Asber, one of the pioneer residents of Bell County, and Mrs. Asber, celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary at their home at Washington.

Bowling Green—Miss Ruth Howell, former saleswoman in the Scott-Spillerman store here, received a serious gunshot wound when a pistol was accidentally discharged.

Frankfort—Gov. W. J. Fields designated Judge J. E. Bailey to preside as special judge of the Pike Circuit Court, Wednesday, to try certain cases in which Judge J. E. Childress is disqualified.

Morehead—The estate of Altona McKee, charged with killing Andrew McKee, and that of Melvin Smedley, charged with the slaying of App Perry, were continued in the Circuit Court here until the June term.

Frankfort—The Seaford Fire Insurance Company, Springfield, Mass., has been granted a permit to do business in Kentucky, by Shelton M. Saffley, Insurance Commissioner. The firm's capital stock is $200,000.

Whitesburg—A. F. Parsons and others of Huntington, W. Va., have purchased plants of the Niagara-Elkhorn Coal Co. at Parsons and Whitesburg in the Elkhorn coal fields of Fletcher co. and will take them over at once.

Morehead—The William Combs was fined $100 and given thirty days in jail and required to execute a peace bond for $1000 for having in his possession for sale Jamaica ginger. This is the third person that has been given similar sentences for selling "Jake."

Bowling Green—Roy Wilson, 28, local barber, was arrested by Patrolman E. J. Waddle, charged with forging a $50 note on a local bank. The names of King and Sparks, local barbers, by whom Wilson was formerly employed, were signed as sureties on the note.

Frankfort—Articles of Incorporation for the Nelson County Building & Loan Association, Bardonia, were approved by Charles E. Marvin, State Banking Commissioner. Incorporators of the firm, capitalized at $500,000, are A. C. Wilson, Henry L. Muir and R. P. Griesley.

Hickman—Hickman's street building has been resumed by the Bridges Construction Company, which took this contract late last summer. The work had to be discontinued last December when the weather became so bad, but will be pushed to completion now and should be completed within a short time.

Hopkinsville—Christian County will shortly dispense with the services of the County Agriculture Agent and also the Home Demonstration Agent as a result of an order adopted by the Fiscal Court disallowing any appropriation for the Farm Bureau. Lack of funds is the reason given by the court for the action.

Lexington—Plans are definitely under way for a gigantic celebration here in June for the dual purpose of observing adequately the 150th anniversary of the naming of Lexington by its hunters from Harrodsburg, who had just learned of the historic battle of Lexington, and in honor of the 100th anniversary of the visit of Lafayette to Lexington, where he attended a celebration at Transylvania College.

Pineville—A prank played by a group of boys ranging in age from 9 to 12 years, almost came to a tragic ending when Dr. J. C. Conner, son of Dr. Mason Conner, Pineville physician, was shot and seriously wounded by Danny Hoskins, young son of Police Judge Ben Hoskins. A 20-gauge shotgun shell, thought to have been loaded with fat to "mimic" young Conner, was shot and as a result the boy is in a serious condition at the Wilson Hospital here.

Whitesburg—Alleged laxity in the enforcement of the train laws was deplored in a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Business Men's Club in the Leitch State Bank building.

Paris—A small negro boy pleaded his own case before Nelson County Judge Frank P. Lowry and won. He admitted stealing a basket of potatoes, but said he did not think it was wrong, and promised to "go good." Judge Lowry dismissed him after telling him: "If it is a sin to steal a pea, it is greater to steal a jar."

THE WORLD'S MIRROR

A young woman who was hurried on to the cow catcher of a locomotive, which hit the automobile in which she was riding, said she had had enough thrills to last a life time. The engineer was ignorant of the accident. Splitting the zero atmosphere at a mile a minute number her and in twelve minutes she rolled off, scarcely injured.

The newspapers, of course, gave the story great prominence because it was so unusual. Newspapers featured the abnormal rather than the normal. Poison booze, graft, scandal, divorce, murder, bloodshed and accidents are the daily menu that the front page serves its readers.

After reading the papers, many people, especially the young, believe that the world has gone to perdition, when in reality, it hasn't.

When a man obeys the law and attends to his own business, he seldom sees his name in the paper, unless he performs some unusual service or does something out of the ordinary.

So it's well to remember that the distressing things you read in the newspapers are the exception rather than the rule.

Very few people look at the world through their own eyes. They view the past through the pages of history and the present through the newspapers front page. History omits most of the bad and glorifies the good. The reverse is true of the newspaper.

The fact that crime, divorce and corruption are still exceptional enough to be news—should be encouragement enough to the student of our changing world.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH

Division of Publicity

Louisville, Ky.—Although holding that gasoline containing tetraethyl lead, known as Ethyl Gasoline, is not a hazard to public health when used in automobiles, the State Board of Health after a conference with chemists, city health officials and representatives of the company manufacturing this product, warned against its use for any other purpose than a motor fuel.

The ruling follows: "Gasoline containing tetraethyl lead is a safe motor fuel and the use of this product in automobiles will not result in a hazard to public health."

The use of ethyl gasoline for any purpose other than as a motor fuel is hereby prohibited. "Gasoline containing tetraethyl lead is not a cleaning fluid and its use on the skin for cleaning fabrics or other substances is dangerous. Only prompt and thorough washing of the skin, which has come in contact with the product will prevent poisoning."

The sale of distribution of the concentrate of tetraethyl lead except to refineries or bulk stations, is hereby prohibited. Such sale or distribution shall be made in sealed containers.

The concentrate of tetraethyl lead shall not be handled or mixed with gasoline or any other substance except in a manner that will fully protect the persons handling it and any persons in the vicinity.

"Nothing therein contained" shall be construed to prevent the sale of tetraethyl lead in concentrate form for experimental or research purposes or for use under special circumstances to persons whose applications therefor have been approved by the State Board of Health."

"Attention is called to the great danger and menace to life from this carbon monoxide present in the exhaust gases from all types of motor fuels and all persons are warned not to run motors in a closed garage which is not properly ventilated."

MAKE YOUR DREAMS COME TRUE

We all know things don't, just happen

In this world of toil and strife. That we must put forth an effort, In the drama we call "Life."

Boys and girls are you now dreaming

That some day your feet will stand

On the pinnacle of fortune

Or of fame in this great land?

Don't be dreamers and not "doers"

It's all right to dream a bit;

But you'll never reach the top rung

While you dream and idly sit

Pick yourselves up, square your shoulders,

Make them strong a load to bear;

Then when duty calls, you're ready

And will surely fit somewhere.

But the idler and the laggard

Never start to make the climb;

They just sit and dream and fancy

They'll be at the top sometime.

Boys and girls there's only one way

You can make your "dreams come true"

Go to work and climb the ladder—

For it all depends on you.

One Million Dollar Fund To Be Raised For College

Vast Fund To Be Raised During Next Four Years For Improvement and Upbuilding Of Georgetown College

Georgetown, Ky., March 9th.—A movement to raise one million dollars within the next four years for Georgetown College, Georgetown, Ky., was authorized by the Baptist State Board of Missions in their meeting at Louisville last week. This confirms in detail action of the General Association of Kentucky Baptists in its last session.

The action of the Board provides the campaign—will be among the Baptist churches of the State that have already put on their canvass for the 1925 Budget until June 1; after that date the entire field is to be worked.

The first three hundred thousand dollars raised will be used to meet the conditions imposed by the two hundred thousand dollar gift of the General Education Board of New York City, which provides that all debts of the college must be paid and a definite amount put into endowment before the money is turned over to the college.

It is also planned to build a new chemistry building, equip Giddings Hall for a library building, install a new heating plant, erect a fine arts building containing chapel and special facilities for music, art, etc., and equip a new athletic field and erect a concrete stadium. In addition, the campaign contemplates the construction of a new girls' dormitory and the enlargement of the boys' dormitory, as well as a new administration building and general campus improvements. A new gymnasium is already in process of erection.

Georgetown is one of the oldest senior colleges in Kentucky and has this year 296 students. Twelve states and two foreign countries are represented in the student body.

A LOCAL IMPROVEMENT— THE HEBRON SCHOOL

What has added as much and been as well appreciated in our community as our beautiful school house?

It lends an air of prosperity and shows an interest in the education of the men and women of tomorrow—they who will uphold the standard of the Americans in the years to come.

Our school is one of the beacon lights which educational interest has established for the growing minds of boys and girls. It builds the foundation for correct conclusions, for higher education and it is doing its part toward lifting the curtain of illiteracy from Kentucky and the U. S.

The farmer feeds the world and our school is giving farmers' children a better chance to make good in their work. Whatever it may turn out to be. In giving them association with fellow-students, it gives a better knowledge of human nature. In the study of the lives of others who have been successful, it gives recreation in the years to come and gives a broader and better view of life. In the training of a student's mind, he becomes more what God meant him to be. It brings out hidden qualities and teaches him to bury faults.

Our school offers a big opportunity to every scholar, for the educated man sees the right side of life—the bright and sunny side. Life is not a monotonous line of years laid out to him, for he knows how to find pleasure and diversion in many ways. He knows how to better serve the Master and becomes the most reliable person in the neighborhood. He knows how to help others and show those in deep trouble and sorrow that after all, life is what we make it and that the sun is really shining behind the cloud, which will soon pass away. They discover that after the dark comes the dawning.

This is the work of our school. Written by Dorothy Jean Hool, of Hebron High School.

FORTY-TWO KENTUCKIANS TO CRUISE 12,000 MILES ON MEN OF WAR

This state is to be represented by forty-two Kentuckians in the cruise to be made by the Midshipmen of the U. S. Naval Academy on the Battleships New York, Arkansas and Utah. The midshipmen's cruise itinerary for 1925 has been approved by the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral E. W. Eberle, U. S. N.

Upon the return of the midshipmen to Annapolis on August 30th, the entire body of midshipmen will be granted thirty days leave of absence to visit their homes. We wish them all "Bon Voyage" and will welcome forty-two of them home again in "Old Kentucky" for their month's vacation in September.

"Take a chance" is the favorite motto now, which partly accounts for the great number of hospitals needed in these times.

DEATHS

MRS. AGGIE RYLE

Mrs. Aggie Ryle, a former well known Boone county citizen, died at her home in Erlanger Monday, March 10th, 1925, from the effects of a paralytic stroke, suffered about month ago.

She was the widow of Moses Ryle to whom she was married Jan. 29th, 1870, and who preceded her to the grave several years ago. Mrs. Ryle was a daughter of Harvey and Elizabeth Marshall and was born in the Waterloo neighborhood about seventy-five years ago, where she spent her entire life until two or three years ago, when she moved to Erlanger.

She is survived by six children, two sons, Hogan of Bellevue, and Stanley of Erlanger, four daughters, Mrs. Bert Scott, of East Bend, Mrs. Owen Presser, of Union, Mrs. Lawrence Pope and Miss Minnie Ryle of Erlanger. Besides her children she was a member, the remains were taken to Grant by Undertaker Philip Taliaferro and laid to rest in the cemetery at that place in the presence of a large crowd of friends and relatives.

ERNEST LEE COPPAGE

Ernest Lee Coppage was a young man of sterling qualities that he spoke a life of usefulness and with his genial disposition and pleasant smile had won many friends and admirers; and to us, humanly speaking, it was a great calamity that his life should be cut off in the very bloom and strength of young manhood, but we bow in humble submission to Him, who knoweth all things.

The end came the evening of Wednesday, March 29, 1925, and passed away March 6, 1925, and was tenderly laid to rest in Highland cemetery, beneath the most beautiful floral offering and in the presence of a host of weeping friends and relatives.

May we all make God's word "a lamp to our feet, a light to our path" as we journey from earth to heaven to meet our loved ones gone before.

A Friend and Neighbor.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE COUNTY

(By Prof. A. M. Yealey, Florence)

The early history of Boone county would lack a spirit of interest if it was not interspersed now and then with local happenings, so the writer will give you a few that happened in print during the winter of 1819 and 1824.

Col. Johnson's big bull dog got mashed to death in John Houston's wolf trap.

Sam Mosby has a likely negro, which he would like to trade for horses, cattle or both.

Patroler caught Kirtley's negro man, Ben, without a pass and gave him a severe whipping.

Bears have been very destructive on hogs this winter, they raid somebody's hog pen almost nightly.

While Sam Johnson was breaking the brush took fire and destroyed nearly everything around. Expectation has been on tip-toe for some time on account of a report that a steam boat would pass down the river on its way from Pittsburg to N. O.

Our particular women are busy with spinning wheels and looms, making material to clothe the soldiers under Gen. Harrison and Dick Johnson.

Kittled John Grant returned lately from the army, near the great lakes, where he was shot in the knee by an Indian and disabled for further duty.

The Keel hunt, Christopher Columbus, passed up from New Orleans to Pittsburg last week heavily loaded with sugar and molasses, 57 days.

It took three hours of hard pulling, pushing and cussing to get her through the swift water in front of Laughery bar.

Thomas Allen started one of his back boys to the water mill on Woolver with a gig of corn in one end of the sack and a rock in the other to balance it. The horse scared and threw nigger, rock, corn and all off the rock falling on the nigger hurting him badly.

Robert Mosby and Mary Spangler were married during the holidays. The bride was handsomely attired in a lacy dress of own making from the spinning wheel up. The groom looked every inch a man in his regulation suit of brown jeans. Robert Kirtley, the youthful pastor of Bullittsburg church, performed the ceremony.

Col. Sebree and John Horsly, who took a flat boat load of pork to New Orleans, have returned. They gave thrilling accounts of their return afoot through the Indian country. They came through Nashville, Tenn., and report Gen. Jackson raising a large army to meet the British at New Orleans.

Col. John J. Flannery, who lives in the big house in Petersburg received a clock from Philadelphia 2 or 3 weeks ago, the first one in Boone county. People from near and far go to see the wonderful machine. Mrs. Parker's black man Jack, went to see it Sunday and when he returned home he said he had it strike 17 and still continued clicking.

Bids will be received by the undersigned until 9 a. m. Tuesday the 7th day of April, 1925, for the construction of the following roads:

Road leading from Bullock Pea Creek, Grant county line, to a point near G. C. Ransom where it intersects the pike leading to Verona & Crittenden Turnpike.

The length of said road is 1242 feet.

Also leading from the Grant-co. line to the Verona and Crittenden Turnpike a distance of 3800 feet.

The road to be constructed according to plans and specifications on file in my office.

The right to reject any and all bids is reserved by order of the Boone Fiscal Court.

RECIPROCITY

Demonstrated in Exchange of plays Between Burlington and Petersburg.

WILL ALSO VISIT DRY RIDGE

With a common purpose in view, namely, the improvement of local school conditions, the Petersburg High School play entitled the "PATH ACROSS THE HILL" will be presented at the Burlington Movie House, Saturday night, and on the following Friday night the Burlington P. T. A. will present their four act drama "BORROWED MONEY" at Petersburg.

The reciprocal spirit in this exchange is to be commended, for it enables each local organization to derive a greater benefit from its efforts. It is a small task to complete and present a play of the nature of either of these productions, and then after presenting them in the home town it seems unreasonable to think of simply laying aside the work with no further reward to be derived therefrom. Therefore when each received the invitation to visit the other community it was decided to exchange efforts, instead of a percentage basis. This plan is for each home organization to receive twenty-five per cent of the visitors net profits, which can be no more than fair, as it adds an incentive for the patronage of each production.

The Burlington caste is making the journey to Dry Ridge, Grant county on Friday night of this week where they will stage their production "Borrowed Money" under the auspices of the Dry Ridge P. T. A. which will receive twenty-five per cent of the net receipts. The caste will extend every effort to surpass either of its previous presentations, and hopes to please the Dry Ridge people.

FESTIVE WEEK-END

Mrs. E. E. Kelly and daughters,

Mrs. A. L. Stephens, of Petersburg, and Mrs. Walter Brown, of Walton, enjoyed a week end reunion.

Kelly's home on Jefferson street.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Earl Smith, Mrs. Kelly's daughter, entertained her mother with a birthday party, the guests being the members of Mrs. Nannie Riddell's class at the local Baptist Sunday school, at which Mrs. Kelly is one.

Then on Saturday evening Mrs. Smith again entertained for her sister, Mrs. Brown, with an old-fashioned "tacky" party. As most every one knows the only object at an affair of this nature is to look as ridiculous as possible, and it is reported that most of the guests followed instructions to the letter. It is said the attire of some was almost enough to give one heart failure to behold.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Stephens, Miss Nell Stephens and Misses Maude and Cordelia Berkshire, of Petersburg.

WILLIAM C. WALTON

LOCAL U. S. MARINE MAKES GOOD

Washington, D. C.—By showing marked aptitude for his military duties, William Corey Walton, formerly of Burlington, Ky., has been promoted to the rank of corporal in the U. S. Marine Corps, according to the official list of promotions just published at Marine Corps Headquarters here.

William was born in Burlington, and is a brother of Mr. Joseph E. Walton, of Erlanger. He joined the Marine Corps at St. Louis, Mo., several months ago, and in recent weeks has been stationed at Paris Island, S. C., where Marines are given their preliminary training. When certain men at that station were recommended for promotion recently, Walton was one of the Marines selected.

From its sandy bed at the bottom of the ocean the meek and lowly Jesus has risen to become a problem that is engaging the attention of Congress, which only a few days ago was asked by the Department of Commerce for an appropriation of $25,000 to investigate the industry, which is said to employ 70,000 men with an output value of $50,000,000.

Not many of our brother editors have complained that they were not getting enough advice on how to run their papers.

County Clerk Miss M. E. Rogers was very much pleased last Friday when the Court of Appeals finally relieved her of the unpleasant duty of exacting a twenty per cent penalty from all auto owners, who had failed to procure licenses for their vehicles prior to January 16, 1925.

Authorities were at variance as to the proper construction of the law, but Miss Rogers, acting upon the best legal advice, thought best to collect the penalty, then refund it to the owners should the higher court decide in their favor. Now that this has been done, the penalty will be no longer a proper persons as soon as a refund, the county clerk declares.

This is the first law requiring Dr. Milton Board, state Revenue Agent, to collect the alleged delinquent automobile tax, the Court found.

The court ruled the judgment of Judge Basil Richardson, Glasgow, Ky., who granted to W. E. Waldeck, automobile owner, a mandamus restraining Hart county Clerk W. H. Atterbury from collecting the penalty.

Dr. Board had by letter ordered the County Clerk, the opinion declared, "to declare all persons who had not procured automobile licenses for their cars prior to January 16th, 1925, delinquent and to exact a penalty of 20 per cent of such license fee for the benefit of the revenue agent as a condition to its issue."

The facts, however, the Appellate Court found, were that on the time of Waldeck's application for his license the revenue agent had not reported him to the Commonwealth's Attorney or to the County Attorney or to the grand jury as violating a law governing license tax "nor had the revenue agent prosecuted him for any such violation, or sued him for the license tax, or caused him to make the application of himself."

Chief Justice Settle, at the same time, granted an injunction to an automobile owner in Logan county restraining the County Clerk from collecting the penalty. The Chief Justice's order was governed by Judge Dietzman's opinion.

KENTUCKY GIRL RULES REPUBLIC

Kentucky, mother of pioneers, is leading the way in another direction.

Over in Bourbon county, a miniature democracy, is in the making. Patterned after the larger Republic and with a seventeen year old high school girl as President, the Junior Farm, Republic, claimed as the first self-governed boys' and girls organization ever founded by the youth of a county, is proceeding with its experiment for a higher type of citizenship.

Announcement of the formal launching of the Junior Republic at Paris, county seat of Bourbon county, came from Samuel R. Guard, director of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, which with the county school board, fiscal court and the state college extension service is sponsoring the movement and providing Congress of the Republic, which is set for March 14th.

The Constitutional Convention of the Republic convened in Paris Jan. 31, and an adjourned session of Congress was held on February 14th, over which Miss Julia Skillman, the pretty Jacksonville school miss who beat three competitors for the presidency through a personal campaign in every community, presided. Following her inaugural address, there were talks by Congressman Virgil Chapman, C. A. Mahan, state club leader, and C. H. Darrow, who represented the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Chantrelle Layson, a Smith-Hughes student of Millersburg, is second in command of the Republic.

The venture in juvenile government, according to Mr. Guard, dates back about a year, when T. R. Bryant, extension leader of the Kentucky State College of Agriculture, made application to the Foundation for aid in instituting a club work program in Bourbon county. The foundation agreed to contribute five hundred dollars annually for the years—H. D. Triplett, a Missouri College Graduate and a successful county agent, began the organization of the clubs in the county.

Citizenship in the Republic entails active membership on the part of the prospective citizen in a livestock or crop club or in a group of community leaders. Provision is made in the constitution for legislative, executive and judicial branches of government.

Those who don't look for misfortune are more likely to miss it entirely.

Eleven days afterward the two were found in a hollow oak tree on Dr. Glacken's farm alive but very thin. They had chased a rabbit in a hole that started 10 feet from the tree leading to it and went in scratching the dirt behind, and filled the hole, getting into the tree they could not back track and were kept prisoners until they were heard eleven days after they disappeared.

SPRING HOUSECLEANING

Spring housecleaning used to be an annual event viewed by the family with apprehension. The women, approached it with a certain grim determination, so fierce that they really seemed to enjoy it. Their satisfaction at a scrubbed and swept house buoyed up their spirits. They felt a lofty pride in keeping up to the high traditions of housewifery.

Taking up the carpets was a serious job in those days, with their manual drubbing in the back yard, and later the use of the vacuum cleaner. The place was left in a sorry state, and the laborer, progressed, which did not always improve their fortunes.

Modern housecleaning has been made easier by improved methods of these things, which are so generally used in the homes of Boone county. The man of the house hardly knows any cleaning has been done. Only the housewife's eye can detect the improvement that is to them so shining and glorious.

ISOLATION NOT NECESSARY.

It was formerly thought that the majority of people who bought farm, were condemned to an experience of isolation. That is not necessary in these days, when automobiles are so inexpensive.

The outlying farm today can place itself in touch with some near by town center and enjoy the same church and amusement, and social and educational privileges that the people of that center have. The use of radio instruments also offers another chance to get the best facilities of modern cities. These improved conditions should make farm homes far more attractive, and they should draw many people to the farms of Boone county who were once repelled by the alleged loneliness of such homes.

WHAT A FEW PEOPLE CAN DO.

It is amazing what a few well-wake folks can do in any country town. Many instances can be found where an active and enthusiastic person, probably a woman in the majority of cases, has accomplished wonders.

Such a person will look around her home town, and estimate its defects. She begins to agitate for a more beautiful village.

She may talk up the subject so persistently that some take her to task. But she still keeps at it. A small group of people are led to cherish the faith that their community can be made more home-like and pleasing, and acquire a wide reputation as a progressive and attractive town.

If such thoughts result in merewatching, it is useless to utter them. One would better keep still and find satisfaction in a philosophic content with things as they are.

But if people see improvements that can be made in their home town they do not have to submit indefinitely to conditions they believe to be unnecessary. They will find support, if they will proceed to translate their talk into action.

They can do one of two things. First, induce some existing organization to take up the need for certain improvements. Second, if no such organization exists that is likely to take up a proposition of this kind, they can form a new and broader one that shall promote causes that are now neglected.

Organization is a wonderful thing. It takes faint hearted people and makes them feel they have an important section of the community behind them and that all together they can get things done. With this sense of power, enthusiastic people are led to translate their dreams into action, and communities go on to success and expansion that seem visionary before.

WHERE ARE THE OLD PEOPLE?

In spite of Dr. Osler, there seems to be something about old age in this country.

Thirty years ago it was common to see an old man or woman, without any real disability, or even the faintest shadow of senility, positively disappearing in fact, not in theory.

It was once the custom in this country, as it is now in England, that when a man had secured a comfortable retired position from active work, and lived happily for a number of years, a competent nurse would not be sent to him until he was nearly blind and deaf.

There are to be heard, however, in the homes of the old, many who are just as vigorous and as active as ever, and they seem to be quite as contented.

Fifty years ago a man of forty was considered an old man. In those days a man does not get old until he is nearly sixty.

The young blood is wanted these days, and many men of sixty are still active in life and partly because of the fact that they are still active in life, and partly because of the fact that they are still active in life.

The young blood is wanted these days, and many men of sixty are still active in life and partly because of the fact that they are still active in life, and partly because of the fact that they are still active in life.

Soberly speaking, it is the age of the modern man who is hardly in his dotage until he is forty, and who never withers.

Even at twenty-five a girl is just only becoming possible, while the young matrons are the leaders of society and they are always young thereafter in their own estimation and generally in fact, because of art and artifice and by the better means of keeping in touch with life, they remain young.

OUR NATIONAL DEFENSE

Although temporarily defeated, Brigadier General Wm. Mitchell, who insisted on modernizing the government's system of national defense, won a tactical victory.

The strength of his cause and fear of his ultimate triumph was admitted when he was demoted to a colonelcy. He was found to be a very capable and efficient officer, and his demotion was not based on the only cause open to his superiors who, disgraced, was to send him to a flying field where he can be securely muzzled.

To the uninitiated in the arts of war, the banishment of Mitchell looks like poor sportsmanship. It seems to be a fair way to get rid of an antagonist.

If Mitchell's cause had merit, it deserved a fair hearing and adoption if found practical. If it did not have merit, it would have been proved impractical in time.

The people of the United States want the best national defense possible at the minimum of expense. If their theory was the best, the nation is suffering because of the bureaucratic system which permits the muzzling of an officer who was not afraid to say what he thought even tho it meant his demotion.

The controversy dates back to 1921 when airships sank some battleships in a test. Ever since that time, when the best of a new defense policy was revealed, Mitchell has been a thorn in the side of the navy general board.

Mitchell demanded a separate department for aircraft, insisting that it be ranked equal with the navy and the army. The navy board insisted that the nation should rely on the steel armor and huge guns of its great battleships as the basic element of sea defense, with aircraft purely auxiliary. The president accepted the navy board's view and Mitchell was left without a prop.

Though he may have been demoted, Mitchell will be heard from. He promises to resign and run for congress and then he can't be muzzled.

THE UNUSUAL COMMONPLACE

Millions of people heard President Coolidge take the oath of office and deliver his inaugural address.

The next morning pictures of the inaugural ceremonies, transmitted by wire, appeared in newspapers across the continent.

It is the first time in the history of the world that this has been done by a person as ordinary as the average person. The truth is that we have been moving so fast that the unusual has become commonplace; the unprecedented, happenings without precedent crowd upon each other so rapidly that the person who tries to grasp them all finds his thinking apparatus in a state of flux.

We do not marvel much at radio, since developments of the past year have shown its possibilities. The transmission of pictures by wire and their reproduction in newspapers at far distant points within a few hours, however, is an entirely different matter.

This is newer than radio and therefore not as probable to be regarded as out of the ordinary, since so few people appreciate the mechanical processes involved.

But those who stop to contem-late the transmitting of pictures over the wires, will realize this to be truly a great accomplishment and one that will prove very useful in business and detection of crime, as well as another means of making newspapers more up to the minute with news.

KENTUCKY SHOULD STANDARDIZE LAMBS

(By R. C. Miller, College of Agriculture)

Recent letters from the big packers strongly urge the importance of having all Kentucky lambs docked and castrated this year. This applies to early lambs as well as to late lambs. While these operations have paid well for the past several years, the packers are expecting to discriminate even more against unbranded lambs this year than before. It is only logical that there should be a big discrimination since the eye and weather-lamb disease out from 1 to 4 cents more the lamb gives a high percentage of high price cuts and a much smaller percentage of them are classed as mediums and seconds.

Another factor that will put an important feature in the price paid for unbranded lambs is the effort of the packers and Virginia in standardizing their lambs this year. Tennessee reports that they will have 150,000 unbranded lambs, 60 per cent of which will be to market before June 15th. Virginia will also have a large number of unbranded lambs this year, as the packers are paying the salary and expenses of a sheep specialist who has recently been added to the staff of the Virginia Agricultural College.

While Kentucky is well ahead of these other states in her campaign, and the quality of her lambs are much superior to that of Virginia or Tennessee, yet if she is to keep in the forefront, she must make special effort to put a standardized product of the highest quality on the eastern market.

Another important step forward has been taken by the Canadian Meat Packers. Two years ago they penalized lamb lambs $1.50 a hundred pounds; last year 50 cents was added, making a penalty of $2 per hundred pounds, and no exception was made.

It is hoped that no Kentucky sheep owner will fail to trim his lambs this year. Lambs can be docked and castrated from a few days old up to 6 or 7 weeks; better of course, from 1 to 4 weeks of age. There is a great saving in labor in performing these operations in early age.

FINDING A CALLING

The chairman of the board of directors of the largest bank in the middle west of "chewing call" in an Iowa general store, as a young man, and went to Chicago to seek his fortune in the big city.

He never liked the taste of calling as a general thing or he might have been sweeping the store yet, but he did develop a taste for checkerboard, which may have given a banking career after checks.

As a clerk he was required to chew samples to show customers that the products couldn't run. His sense of taste rebelled and that's one of the reasons he was able to celebrate his sixtieth birthday at his desk recently and advise young men how to win a success in life.

All young men can't be clerks in general stores and have fate lead them into their natural calling because their taste was offended.

But all young men can select the business or profession they want to follow and stay with it until they climb to the top. They can't all be the top, but there is plenty of room near the top and it is never crowded.

The parking space at the bottom is always jammed, but after you get a few rounds up the ladder, you will be able to treat easier, because of less resistance. However, it is necessary to keep plugging and hold on tight because the higher you get, the harder you fall, when you lose your grip.

WHAT YOU BELIEVE

A very gifted public speaker was once asked how he was able to speak so fluently upon occasions when he was called upon to make public addresses.

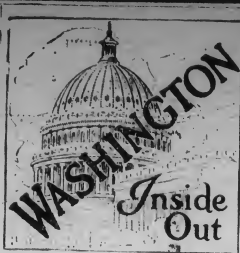

He explained that it was a simple thing to do because he always spoke about things with which he was familiar and said only that which he believed.

How true that is in every phase of life. It's never possible to be convincing on any subject unless you believe in it and are thoroughly satisfied that whatever you are saying or doing is right.

No citizen of this community can be a thorough-going booster for his home town and the undertakings in which it is engaged, without being a loyal citizen.

It is quite impossible to enter into any project whole heartedly unless you believe in it and are willing to do all within your power to make it a success.

It is reported that Senator O. P. Hogan, of Williamson, will make the race for State Senator in the coming campaign. Senator Hogan is an old and experienced politician and he gets in the race he will make things lively for the other candidates.

(By Peter Keegan)
Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

Our new and dashing Vice-President, Mr. Charles Gates Hawes, of Helenaria fame, says that he will not back down one inch from the determined antagonistic stand he has taken against the methods of the United States. Let the Senators criticize him as much as they please, declares the Vice-President, having revealed his mind on the subject he is willing for them to have their say just as he had his. Although he expected opposition in the Senate it still to the changing of rules which he believes retards the nation's progress. Hawes feels that the country is banking on that support, hoping that public opinion will be lined up during the summer to put over in December what he suggested in his inaugural speech.

A period of quiet naturally follows the adjournment of the 68th Congress, and interest will be centered for the next few months on the financial affairs of the Government as handled by the Treasury and foreign relations as handled by Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, the new Secretary of state. The foreign debt situation is being closely watched by Administration officials, and a meeting of the American Debt Funding Commission will be held shortly to take steps for collection of the long French and Italian debts. Kellogg will go to work where Hughes left off in preparing the stage for a new world disarmament conference which President Coolidge is expected to call during the summer or early next fall.

The next break in the Coolidge Cabinet, according to current reports, will occur with the resignation of a few members of Secretary of War John W. Weeks. Weeks might possibly remain on the job look to his extensive business interests in New England. Senator Wm. M. Butler, Massachusetts, who was the Republican campaign manager, is among those mentioned for the War Department post.

Before adjourning, the Senate broke a precedent of long standing by granting permission for the use of its chamber this summer by another organization—the Inter-parliamentary Union. This is an international organization composed of members of national legislative bodies of all countries. It meets each year in a different national capital and this year elected to come to Washington. The fact that several members of the American Senate are members of the Union led to the opening of the halls of Congress to the organization.

The great airplane controversy flizzed out, Congress refusing to authorize a continuance during the adjournment. Members of the House, however, who favor a unified Air Service expect to continue their inquiries with a view to resuming the whole subject in the next Congress. Brigadier General Wm. Mitchell, who furnished most of the fireworks for the investigation, by telling how easy it was to sink battleships with aerial bombs, is in for some severe disciplining at the hands of his superiors in the War Department, but it is being done in a quiet way.

Dancer of the roof of the White House, caving in may compel the President to take a vacation this summer. The General Wm. Mitchell, who furnished most of the fireworks for the investigation, by telling how easy it was to sink battleships with aerial bombs, is in for some severe disciplining at the hands of his superiors in the War Department, but it is being done in a quiet way.

A DISTRICT SCHOOL PRODUCT. William M. Lane, who has been appointed secretary of agriculture in the president's cabinet, is a fine specimen of district school product. Back in his early days he attended a district school for four months each winter, and he is one of many thousands who have had that experience who have achieved name and fame.

There was a very fine spirit in the district schools of former days. Their teachers were earnest people who fired their children with ambition. Their methods and equipment might be antiquated, but the young folks were taught the lesson of faithfulness and industry. They did not go back to the manager of a store that we have much to learn from their spirit.

Another Mystery Solved

From the night when the first man peered into the heavens and cringed in terror at the wavering green tentacles of light poised above him, the Aurora Borealis has been one of nature's mysteries. No one knew why or how this phenomenon occurred.

With the increasing knowledge of electricity, and its powers, it has been urged by scientists that an explanation of the Aurora would be found in the laws governing the discharge of electricity through gases.

This theory has been followed to a successful conclusion, and it is now announced that the unearthly ribbons of light of the Aurora are due to ion of solar radiation on nitrogen "snow" or crystals of solid nitrogen floating in the upper atmosphere, at an estimated distance of sixty miles above the earth.

To prove this theory, nitrogen was frozen on a copper plate, much as the moisture in a warm room is frozen on refrigerator pipes. The crystals of nitrogen were then bombarded with electric light rays, whereupon the crystals were made to emit a pale green light and this, when examined under the spectroscopic, was found to be identical with the green light of the Aurora.

The strange change of color then which the Aurora passes have also been explained by the same experiment, for it was found that under the bombardment of electric light rays the solid nitrogen on the copper plate partly evaporated, and that the green light changed to the reddish color seen in the Aurora and now recognized as characteristic of nitrogen gas.

It pays to be neighborly. One can't always tell just what relationship may exist with the family next door or just around the corner. Many curious incidents of this fact are of record, but the most impressive one of recent years is that of two sisters who have searched for each other for twenty years. They lived in the same block in Grand Rapids, Mich., and their husbands had been friends for years before the relationship was discovered.

TOO MUCH MONEY TO SPEND

President Hibben of Princeton University, addressing a gathering of authors of college students, told of several causes which lead college students to fall down. Too much money to spend, was one of the chief reasons for trouble that he alleged. Many still younger students, including no doubt some in Boone county, have more money than judgment. If he had to earn that money, by his own perspiration, those dollars and the time it takes to spend them, might look more valuable.

The student with money burning in his pocket and itching him to count high finks, finds digging in history and literature dull work, unworthy a youth of his sporting spirit. If he had to earn that money, by his own perspiration, those dollars and the time it takes to spend them, might look more valuable.

The ples mother makes generally get all the praise. Father thinks he ought to have a little credit for the laugh.

The man who claims to be "brak," may merely be expressing in a polite way his doubt as to the financial responsibility of his friends.

THE BACK YARD GARDEN

It might be imagined that every one in a country town would realize the advantage of raising home-grown vegetables. Yet there are plenty of country town people who have no garden and thereby miss all the satisfaction that comes from having fresh vegetables in your own back yard.

In former years nearly all the old timers in country towns had their own gardens, and the savings made in that way were one of the means by which they built up substantial prosperity. Present day people must expect to follow their thrifty example, and they can not get ahead if they spend all their spare time on amusements.

American money, hoarded in Europe during the war, is now steadily finding its way home. The Federal Reserve bank estimates that fully a half billion dollars of American money was hid away in Europe up to a year ago. During December last $9,150,000 was returned, $7,000,000 being from Germany. Since April 1924 the total amount has been $59,000,000, and it is still steadily coming.

Arthur Brisbane makes the positive assertion that within 25 years the people now driving Ford cars will be driving Ford airplanes, making 100 miles an hour on a gallon of gas. The "world is on wheels" for a short time only—wings are about due.

ANNOUNCEMENT
T. E. McHenry of Florence, is now associated with the firm of HAWKINS & CHAMBERLAIN, REAL ESTATE AGENTS, 508 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky. He will be pleased to serve any of his Boone County friends who desire to buy or sell real estate.

The Elizabeth Utz heirs recently traded their 215 acre farm near Burlington to F. L. Conrad of Dry Ridge, for a large store building and grounds in Dry Ridge. This store building was at one time occupied by J. B. Sanders and is located in the heart of the business district of Dry Ridge opposite the Carlsbad Hotel. Two stores, barber shop and four flats are located in this building and produces over $1,300 a year rent. There is also a large barn and slaughter house located on this property.

The Utz farm at one time was one of the best farm in this section, but has been neglected during the past few years, but from what we hear of Mr. Conrad as a farmer he will make this farm better, as there is considerable good land besides a lot of timber. Mr. Conrad, who is a nephew of A. B. Renaker has been here for the past few days arranging for a tenant to grow a crop on his farm this year.

Real estate agents A. B. Renaker, C. H. Youell and Melvin Jones negotiated the deal between Mr. Conrad and the Utz heirs.

Mr. Conrad does not expect to move on this farm but is looking for a nice home either in Burlington or Erlanger or Florence and will operate his farm by tenants.

Mr. Conrad is a high class gentleman and Boone county extends to him and family a hearty welcome.

Grower Jailed For Violation of Court Order

Twenty Hours in County Bastile Is The Penalty Inflicted Upon Bourbon County Farmer

ALSO FINED THIRTY DOLLARS

Paris, Ky., March 20.—Judge Ben G. Williams today fined Joseph B. Mansfield $30 and sent him to jail for twenty hours for contempt of court in defying a temporary restraining order issued by Circuit Clerk William H. Webb to prevent him from selling his tobacco to any other than the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, of which Mansfield is a member. Mansfield, who is a tenant on one of the farms of Clarence LeBus, former head of the old pool and now a Cynthiana local warehouseman, sold the crop over LeBus' floor after the restraining order was issued.

In passing sentence on Mansfield, Judge Williams said he was sorry for the defendant and that he did not believe that he realized the serious nature of the offense he had committed in defying the order of the court.

JURIST COMMENDS NEW KENTUCKY MOTOR LAW

Jurist Holds Statute Punishing Drivers Who Flees, Wholesome

The Kentucky statute providing that a motorist who runs down another person and leaves the scene without stopping to render assistance be punished by fine or jail confinement or both is a most wholesome one, in the opinion of Judge Thomas at the Court of Appeals.

The statute, Section 2739g-53, in part reads:

"Any person who, while operating a vehicle on a public highway, shall run against, over or into any other person, vehicle or personal property in possession of any other person in such manner as may injure or damage such other person or property, shall immediately stop and ascertain the extent of such injury or damage and render such assistance as may be needed, including the carrying of such person or occupants of such vehicle to the nearest medical aid, if such carrying is requested by the person struck or by any occupant."

For violation, punishment is fixed at a fine of not less than $10.00 nor more than $2,000, or imprisonment in the county jail for not exceeding one year or both within the discretion of the jury.

REVIVED INTEREST IN HEMP GROWING

Improved conditions in the market for hemp fiber are reviving interest in hemp growing, according to O. B. Jensen, Chief Section of Markets, Kentucky Experiment Station. Formerly, hemp was a leading farm crop in central Kentucky, but in recent years little attention has been given to it because market conditions have been unfavorable. Some of the other producing sections of the country, particularly Wisconsin, have established mills for the handling of hemp. The separation of the fiber in Kentucky is done with handbrakes and the labor involved in this operation has been a discouragement to hemp production.

While Wisconsin has surpassed Kentucky in the amount of fiber produced, Mr. Jensen points out that Kentucky is looked to as the source of seed for hemp growing in other states. Most of this seed is produced along the Kentucky River in Jessamine, Garrard, Boyle and adjoining counties. Due to the lack of interest in hemp growing in recent years, the supply of seed available for planting this spring, is limited so that a large acreage will not be planted this year.

A recent estimate coming from Wisconsin suggests that about 5,500 acres may be planted in the United States this season, about three-fifths of this being in Wisconsin.

Thirteen large corporations and industries show an increase of 65 per cent in number of men employed with 1914. This does not necessarily mean that there are that many more people employed in the nation than in 1914, but it does illustrate to some extent the consolidation as well as the expansion. The pay roll of these thirteen companies show an increase of about 300 per cent as compared with 1914, indicating a general average increase of 135 per cent. It is probably true that there are nearly as many idle men today as in 1914, but it must be remembered that a couple of hundred thousand college graduates have entered the employment field during the past 10 years.

CAPACITY HOUSE

Greets The Pet-urg High School Play last Saturday evening at Burlington Play House

"The Path Across the Hill," a three act comedy-drama, "went over with a bang" last Saturday evening at the local play-house. Everything combined to make the evening's entertainment a splendid success. The weather, attendance, music, acting, and plenty of enthusiasm, were the principle elements contributing.

While too much cannot be said of the players themselves, it must be said that they were ably assisted by their young orchestra, which made a decided "hit" with the crowd. The proceeds of the evening were divided 75-25. Seventy-five per cent going to the Senior class of the Petersburg school, and twenty-five per cent to the Burlington P. T. A. This plan will be followed in the reverse form next Friday evening when the Burlington P. T. A. present their play "Lorried Money" at the Petersburg theatre. Indications point to a successful exchange engagement.

KENTUCKY WESLEYAN

HAS GREAT YEAR IN BASKET BALL

Winchester, Ky., March 19.—Kentucky Wesleyan College has just completed one of the most successful basketball seasons ever enjoyed in the history of the school. The team won fourteen of the nineteen games of the regular collegiate schedule, defeating among others: University of Louisville, Georgetown Transylvania, Eastern Normal at Richmond, Paris Athletic Club, Western Teachers' College, Morris-Harvey and Centre College.

The Panthers carried off all honors in the newly organized Kentucky Conference, winning six and losing one—a percentage of 857. University of Louisville was her nearest competitor, with a conference record of four won and two lost—a percentage of 666.

Wesleyan is planning big things for next year. Bearly, pivally, man, is the only player lost by graduation and Coach Webb will have a wealth of Freshman material with which to fill in. Wesleyan is a member of the S. I. A. A. and will take part in their tournament at Macon, Georgia, next year.

COAL COMPANY TO FARM BIG TRACTS

Madisonville, Ky.—The West-Kentucky Coal Company, which owns 22,000 acres in Hopkins and neighboring counties, plans to devote several hundred acres of its best land to crops, grass and live stock. The company has already built up a dairy herd of Holsteins and Jerseys and is supplying milk to the town of Earlington.

County Agent W. D. Sutton and S. C. Jones, soil specialist from the College of Agriculture, recently conferred with D. M. Souleberry, the company's farm manager, regarding its farming plans. Samples of soils were sent to the Experiment Station at Lexington for analysis, and found deficient in nitrogen and phosphorus and also were acid.

Mr. Jones advised the company to apply two to four tons of ground limestone and 200 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate per acre. He also plans to grow alfalfa and Japan and sweet clover. The company limed one field seven years ago, and sowed it to alfalfa and blue grass. This field now has a blue grass sod which yields anything to be seen in central Kentucky, according to Mr. Jones.

Messrs. Jones and Sutton visited several Hopkins county farms where applications of lime and acid phosphate are returning additional yields of grain and hay. Coal measure soils often return from $5 to $15 for every $1 invested in lime. Mr. Jones said.

The Sun Light Mining Co., south-east of Madisonville has large quantities of limestone which is produced as a by-product. In crushing it for ballast and road purposes much finely-ground limestone accumulates. Four car loads of this was recently purchased by Mr. Sutton for distribution among Hopkins county farmers.

ARTHUR BRISBANE'S LETTER TO WILL ROGERS

(Mr. Will Rogers' America's famous humorist, is now writing the Bull Durham copy for the American Tobacco Company's advertising.)

My Dear Mr. Rogers:

You will learn by the enclosed that your advertising is read—at least by one reader. I saw that advertisement of Bull Durham where you probably never saw it, in the Hamlet News-Messenger, an excellent little paper published in the active town of Hamlet N. C.

I am particularly glad to see that Mr. P. S. Hill, who I suppose is your boss, puts his advertising in many of the smaller newspapers of the country. Those are the most important newspapers, and, incidentally, in proportion to their circulation, their advertising results are the biggest and their advertising rates are the smallest in the country. They are read through from end to end. Every copy of circulation means an entire family, not a family that lives in the room with a can opener, but a family that owns its own house and land around it, at least ninety times out of a hundred, a family that buys everything from the roof on the house, to the cement on the cellar floor, from the hat on the mother's head to the skates on the boy's feet.

I hope you will persuade Mr. Hill and those that represent the advertising department of his big company to continue and to send advertising to what are called "the country newspapers." They not only pay well, but the service that their publishers render to the public, is in my opinion the most important service rendered by any class of citizens in the United States. The country editors are distributors of information, they reach the minds of the boys that leave the farms, and they are the nation's mental police force.

YOURS TRULY,

ARTHUR BRISBANE

C. SCOTT CHAMBERS

Leaves for California to accompany His Mother Home

TO BE GONE SEVERAL WEEKS.

Scott Chambers, of Walton, passed through Burlington enroute to Petersburg last Saturday morning. While in town Mr. Chambers informed us that he was to leave one day this week for Los Angeles, California, to accompany his mother, Mrs. Laura Chambers, back to Kentucky. Mrs. Chambers left her home in State with her son Dr. Will Chambers.

Mr. Chambers also stated that he is leaving his undertaking establishment in charge of his daughter Miss Mary, and Henry S. Mathews, of Newport. Mr. Mathews is no longer an apprentice in this business, as he has spent the past year and a half with the H. H. Radel undertaking firm in that city, which association has rendered him quite as much experience in his chosen profession as he could have received in country practice in twice the time.

Mr. Chambers thinks too much of his patronage to leave it in the hands of inexperienced people, and in that respect the public may be assured of competency.

HAROLD BEEMON

BOONE COUNTY BOY IS OUT FOR SPRING PRACTICE AT WITTENBERG

Springfield, Ohio, March 23.—Harold Beemon, of Florence, Ky., is now wearing mokeskins of Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio.

He was among early players to report to Coach E. R. Godfrey, director of athletics, when the call was made for spring practice on the gridiron.

Beemon is in pre-freshman work here, and, providing he makes all necessary study credits, will be eligible for the Cardinal and Cream team in autumn of this year. And seven holes in the team wait to be plugged with the right kind of material.

"Never had so many candidates before" says Coach Godfrey in much glee. "Besides that, most of them must come in for careful consideration to see if they can make the change from high school players to college men."

Wittenberg college finished second in the big Ohio conference in 1924. Besides going undefeated for three seasons the Lutherans have lost only seven games in as many years. They have a terrific schedule of nine conference games this fall, meeting the hardest teams available, in the league. The first game comes September 26 here with the University of Akron. That is just 10 days after school opens, and Coach Godfrey must win that first conference game, and must know before this school-year who are to file into the stadium on that day to defend the ancient colors of Wittenberg.

Spring practice will include punting and goal-kicking in the "first stages, rapidly developing, however, into signal practice and into scrimmages. Weather during the first week has been fair and cold, and the Wittenberg coaching staff is in good spirits over progress made with the yearlings.

The news that the congressmen are to get more pay is heard with enthusiasm among many patriots who would consent to serve the government if called upon.

DRY RIDGE

VISIT IS VERY MUCH ENJOYED BY BURLINGTON CROWD

About twenty-five members of the Burlington P. T. A. which included the "Borrowed Money" band and the five-piece orchestra, journeyed to Dry Ridge last Friday evening, where their play was presented to an extremely appreciative audience.

Everything "done" by the Dry Ridge folks to make the enjoyable, in fact too much cannot be said of the splendid treatment accorded the visitors.

There was a splendid crowd present, an especially good one when consideration is taken of the fact that very little advertising was done, and that no one in the caste was very well known in Dry Ridge except A. B. Renaker, it being his former home.

The Burlington folks were so well pleased that they extended an invitation to their Grant county neighbors to return the visit.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE COUNTY

In a previous article we stated that when our county was organized in 1798 it had a population of 1400. We shall now inform the reader who some of these people were and from whence they came.

During the autumn of 1790 two brothers James and John Ryle with their families, a sister and a colored slave left North Carolina for Boone county, following the Daniel Boone trail James, Jr., age 9 a son of Jas. Ryle rode on a horse all the way behind the colored slave. They arrived at Tanner's Station (Petersburg) in December of the same year and Mr. Tanner had them winter in his fort, and the Ryle daughter was born to James Ryle and wife (Polly Ann Ryle) undoubtedly the first white child born in Boone county. When she became grown she married William Presser, and was the mother of the late Logan Presser.

In the Spring of 1791 they left the fort at Petersburg and located near the mouth of Middle Creek, where they remained for about two years, but the land being swampy they contracted fever and were compelled to seek higher ground, purchasing from the government a great number of acres of hill land near Waterloo and Bellevue at a cost of 72¢ per acre, a great part of this land is still in possession of the Ryles.

As a whole all the former immigrants to Boone county were religious, the Ryles also united with the Bullittsburg Baptist church, walking a distance of 14 miles to their church on Sunday, taking their dinner with them, the above church was their place of worship until 1808, when the settlers along Middle Creek erected for themselves, the old Middle Creek Baptist church. (Now called the Bellevue Baptist church) a few of the early settlers of Middle Creek in addition to the Ryles were the Hogan's Porter's Presser's Campbell's and John Marshall who had fought in the French and Indian wars and died at the ripe age of 91 years.

The Kentucky State Highway Commission "hasn't eight cents," W. C. Montgomery, Chairman told representatives of the Louisville Fraternity Club, who called on him at Frankfort to ask an appropriation of $8,000, the State's share of the cost of eliminating a grade crossing on the Midland Trail.

GOVERNOR FIELDS VISITS NORTHERN KENTUCKY

Chief Executive Pays First Official Visit To Northern Kentucky In Interest Of Proposed Inglis Highway

A. B. ROUSE ON PROGRAM

Governor William J. Fields, of Kentucky, was given a rousing reception by residents of Campbell and Kenton counties Friday on his brief visit to Northern Kentucky in connection with the mass meeting at Eagles' Hall, Bellevue, in the interest of the Inglis Highway. Men, women and children vied with each other in giving the Governor a royal greeting in his trip through the two counties and at the brilliant reception tendered him at the Newport Elks' Home in the afternoon.

The Governor was met at the Ludlow station by a large delegation of Northern Kentuckians, who formed in a procession which passed through Covington, Newport, Dayton, Bellevue and over a part of the proposed highway.

After various formalities the Governor, and other speakers addressed an enormous crowd in the Eagles' Hall, Bellevue.

Among other speakers was Congressman A. B. Rouse, formerly of Boone county, who said: "I don't know of any person who would not consider it a great pleasure to be present at this meeting. I know that Governor Fields will agree with me that the beautiful scenery of Campbell and Kenton counties from the hills, is not necessary to go to the Hudson for scenery."

"Governor Fields and myself were colleagues in Congress for many years. He and I supported the first Federal road bill. Gov. Fields and I in 1910 and at the same time for road purposes was made in 1912. I was a member of the Postoffice Committee which put over the first $100,000 road appropriation, and I had the pleasure of voting for a $1,000,000 appropriation for roads."

"This Ohio River road must be made a Federal highway, and must be indorsed by the Highway Commission. I know Governor Fields, and while I believe he has gone back ward in leaving Congress for the gubernatorial chair, I know that if he promises to support this project he will do it. His word is his bond; his record in Congress being honest and faithful to the people he represented."

"This road is necessary for us and for the Governor, for it will bring his folks into our counties, and he will give this project his support because it will permit our folks to go to his country, to improve and benefit them."

Congressman Rouse's remarks were greeted with cheers and laughter. Chairman Dorsey, in introducing Governor Fields, the next and last speaker, referred to him as "Honorable Bill From Olive Hill." Governor Fields said:

"I am willing to concede that the Sixth District has the best Congressman in the United States, that is since I left it, but I cannot agree with him that it is the greatest district in the state. I had the honor to serve thirteen years with him in Congress, where I was able to help him to become the best Congressman."

"I want to go on record right here as being heartily in favor of this project, and congratulate the county of Campbell which has worked so diligently for its consummation. They are pioneers in the movement. My congressional district comes down to within a few miles of your district. When I made the races for Congress, whenever I wanted to come down to Bracken or Mason county I was compelled to cross the Ohio River at Ashland and come in the Ohio side to Mayville to get in to the northern end of my district. I vowed then that if I ever had an opportunity to champion the cause of a roadway along the Ohio River in Kentucky, I would do so."

"When I became Governor" the Governor said, "I asked the State Highway Commission to make me a member ex-officio of the body, and it is now my duty to sit at all hearings, but the Governor does not vote. Therefore he can only act in an advisory capacity. In the construction of roads we are confronted with serious engineering problems, and we must yield to our judgment of competent engineers in constructing roads. Another serious problem, in that of finance. Our state road fund has been depleted. I do not charge that the road fund has been squandered, but the fact remains that we have no money, except that coming in yearly through taxation for road purposes."

"We are endeavoring to build up the best highway department in the country. We have as good talent here as anywhere in the U. S. "The Highway Commission intends to give Kentucky a real administration. We have installed a new system, and will soon have it perfected. When the new Highway Commission assumed office it was the heir of an estimated indebtedness of $5,000,000. But when we made our final audit we found that instead of $5,000,000 we owed $8,500,000. Therefore, we owe ourselves without funds, and there will be none available until July 1, 1926."

Big System Planned

"But with the new system we have been organizing we will be prepared to start to work on an elaborate system of road construction, and in this matter we want to see that every dollar hits the ground."

Gov. Fields stressed the importance of constructing a network of roads throughout the state, particularly the project to connect the Ohio River system with that of the Big Sandy into West Virginia and Virginia.

He referred to the defeat of road bond issue at the last election, saying that he and the Highway Commission had received a mandate from the people to pay as they go. "They had a right to their opinion," he said, "and we will respect it. But I am looking for some master mind who will evolve a plan to finance the road construction on this basis."

This is the Governor's last visit to Northern Kentucky, when he spoke at Burlington and Whitesburg, on October 16th, 1924, in the interest of the "lost cause"—the Bond Issue.

KELLY-YOUELL

The many friends of Robert Youell and Elizabeth Kelly, were very much surprised when they heard that the young couple had been married last Saturday afternoon.

They were very quietly married in Covington at the home of Rev. Webb pastor of the Madison Ave. Christian church, after which they returned to the home of the bride's parents.

The groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Youell of the Florence Pike. He is one of Boone county's most promising young men and an excellent farmer, in which profession he is at present engaged.

The bride is the attractive and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kelly, of the East Bend Pike. Miss Kelly taught the Primary Grades at the local school for two years previous to this and was very strongly urged to accept again this past year, but she could not be prevailed upon. She was an outstanding teacher, and made one of the very best instructors this school has ever had in her department.

The young couple certainly carry with them the best wishes of the Recorder.

INTERESTING TEST

Conducted By Tobacco Growers

Harrodsburg, Ky.—County Agent J. R. Spencer reports a test which two farmers made with fertilizing tobacco land. J. L. Crutcher, a Merrett county farmer, and his tenant George Sexton, made a wager as to who could grow the more tobacco and make the larger profit per acre. One was to apply commercial fertilizer and the other stable manure to the land.

Mr. Crutcher applied 500 pounds of a high grade complete fertilizer to an acre of tobacco land, and Mr. Sexton used 30 wagon loads of well rotted stable manure. Six acres, to which neither manure nor commercial fertilizer was applied, were used as a check plot. The tobacco on the plots was cut, housed, stripped, graded, weighed and sold separately over the local pool floor.

Mr. Sexton's acre yielded 1,910 pounds of tobacco, on which he was given an advance of $13.50 per hundred, or a total of $257. Mr. Crutcher received 1,440 pounds from his acre of land treated with commercial fertilizer, on which he was advanced $13.03 per hundred or $188. The unfertilized six-acre averaged 655 pounds per acre, on which the advance was $10.80 per hundred, or an average of $70 an acre.

Mr. Spencer calls attention to the fact that the two fertilized acres returned more money than the six unfertilized acres.

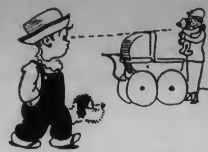

There isn't much glory in virtue if no one knows you have it.

WONDERFUL THING

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

March has furnished us some nice weather.

Robt. K. Aylor and Geo. W. Rice, of Waterloo neighborhood, were in Burlington, last Saturday.

L. E. Goodridge, of Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, last Saturday.

A large crowd attended W. L. Kirkpatrick's sale last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Albert Greenup spent the week-end with his uncle Mr. Claude Greenup.

Geo. Nicholson, the well known contractor of Walton, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Saturday.

Mr. Claude Greenup spent Saturday and Sunday with his family in Burlington. Mr. Greenup is employed at Ft. Thomas as carpenter.

Next Monday is county court and on the following Monday the April term of the Circuit Court will convene for a two week's session.

Mr. W. T. White and family, of Williamstown, were guests of his uncle C. E. White Saturday evening and attended the play here given by the Petersburg talent that night.

The Campfire Girls conducted the program at the Baptist church Sunday evening. A very interesting program was rendered by these young folks.

A. B. Renaker has made some changes in his real estate adv. this week. If you are in the market it might pay you to look over his list.

The Boone County Poultry Association shipped seven hundred eggs to O. D. Hall County Agent at Knoxville, Ga. This is the second shipment of hatching eggs made by the Association this spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sarbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Sarbeck, of Walnut Hills, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. L. and Mr. A. B. Corbin, of Erlanger, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil L. Gaines, near Limaburg.

The rural carriers received their first check last week with the allowance for equipment which is at the rate of four cents per mile, this is an increase in the compensation of the carrier and is much appreciated.

Mr. Z. T. Kelly, one of the oldest citizens of the Rabbit Hash neighborhood, spent the week-end with his son, Wilbur and family. Mr. Kelly has reached his seventy-eighth birthday, and fifty-one years of the seventy-eight have been spent in the neighborhood in which he lives. He looks well for one of his age.

A. B. Renaker reports the following real estate sales for the past week:

Sold 51 acres of Sol Winkle farm to Wilford Rouse.

Traded 103 acres of Elmer Goodridge of Burlington, to W. L. Landrum for house and lot in Erlanger.

Because of the youthful appearance of the would-be bride, the County Clerk refused to issue a marriage license to Herbert Dodge and Helen Leach, one day last week. Miss Leach had the consent of her mother, who is her legal guardian, but this did not induce the clerk to issue the license, as the parties were all strangers to the official and were unable to furnish the necessary bond as is required by law. The young couple left town headed toward Covington. We understand these young people are tenants on Mr. Irvin Conrad's farm he recently purchased of the Utz heirs out on the East Bend pike.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE FOR JAILER

In this issue will be found the announcement of Elmer Kirkpatrick, of Burlington, for jailer. Mr. Kirkpatrick is a member of a prominent Boone county family of Democrats, it being a very singular fact that Mr. Kirkpatrick's father, the late Thomas Kirkpatrick, was the only Democrat of a family of twelve sons and daughters.

Not one of the Kirkpatrick family has ever offered as a candidate for a Boone county office, and if nominated and elected, he will unquestionably do his best to give satisfaction as an official.

REV. TOMLIN TO PREACH HERE

Rev. J. G. Tomlin, former regular pastor at this place, will occupy the local pulpit again next Sunday evening. This is the fifth Sunday and not the regular preaching day at the M. E. church, but it is practically certain that a good crowd will turn out to hear Rev. Tomlin.

The Camp Fire Demonstration of last Saturday was quite a success. The donations for our tennis court amounted to almost six dollars.

The Girls Service at the Baptist church, which was a special service, given over to Camp Fire work, was attended by a large crowd.

On next Saturday, March 28th, the Camp Fire Girls will clean the vacant lot below the Boone County Depot Bank. Any and all voluntary work will be appreciated.

NOTHING UNATTAINABLE

The average American community can become whatever it wants to become.

This truth was uttered recently by a public speaker in discussing the possibilities of civic organizations. The fact that there are few limitations on development of a city or town has been demonstrated so many times that it scarcely needs reiteration.

But it has to be re-emphasized to refresh the memories of those backward citizens who are pessimistic and have nothing but gloomy forebodings of the future.

Communities improve industrially by supporting and encouraging the industries within their own borders, and agriculturally by lending moral support to projects that will better the condition of those engaged in farming.

It has long since been proved a poor policy to offer large bonus either in cash or favorable sites, to pull industrial establishments away from other places.

If we have the thing that an industry wants, no inducements will be required. It will come if assured of the proper kind of treatment. Any community can attain a reasonable goal with the right attitude on the part of its citizens and hearty cooperation of everyone.

Once upon a time there was a man who didn't think his car was the best one on the road.

SPRING AND LOVE

According to the poet, in the spring the young man's fancy light turns to thoughts of love. Is this merely a bit of poetic imagination or is there something in the spring-time that makes young people sentimental?

The fact that June is considered the most popular of all months for weddings might look that way, although the old timers would have said a couple were rushing if they got engaged in April and married in June. However, some of our speedy young crowd here in Boone county would call that a long engagement now.

Anyway the spring is a season that produces hope. It encourages people to start out with new projects. The sap runs up the trees in spring, and the same renewal of energy may lead youth to blossom out into tender sentiments that were not dreamed of in the cold of winter.

Georgetown, Ky., March 28—A gift of $305 from each student and three per cent of the salary of faculty members for a period of five years is the first objective in the Century Campaign for one million dollars launched recently by Georgetown College, Georgetown, Ky. Already more than one-third of the students have pledged and the remainder are being canvassed this week. The plan provides that each student, after his graduation, pay to the fund three per cent of his yearly income until the $305 gift is completed.

All of the thirty faculty members have responded to the call, their gifts making a total of more than three per cent of the combined salaries. The campaign will culminate in 1929 with the Centennial of the College, which marks one hundred years of continuous service.

Georgetown College is one of the oldest colleges west of the Alleghenies, its history extending back to the days when Kentucky was a part of the old Northwest territory. On its campus are a number of the original markers used in his first survey of the State.

CHILD MARRIAGES

The Russell Sage Foundation proposes to appeal to the legislatures of various states to revise the marriage laws which have permitted 667,000 marriages of girls under 16 years in 90 cities.

In 14 of the 28 states investigated, it was found that girls were permitted to marry at an earlier age than they may legally become wage earners. The legal minimum marriageable age is only 12 for girls, and 14 for boys in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana, Virginia, Florida, Maryland, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Colorado, Idaho, Maine and Mississippi.

The foundation calls attention to the fact that the great majority of these children are native white and of native parentage.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S DEFECTS.

A superintendent of schools in a Minnesota county reports that in one school of 22 pupils, 12 were found to have decayed teeth, eight had defective vision, besides other troubles. Facts like these suggest that a large proportion of the pupils in the country towns need some kind of treatment.

Some of these defects might cause serious harm, if neglected. Yet it will be said that in most country districts, the schools are costing all that the taxpayers can afford. Yet medical examination of pupils would not cost a great deal. In some towns medical men would arrange to give it with very small expense or none at all. At any rate, it is wrong to let so many children come along without discovery of defects that may handicap them in later years.

PASTOR'S WIFE DIES

Mrs. Francis Stone, aged 35 years, beloved wife of the Rev. A. G. Stone pastor of the Methodist church at Erlanger, passed away at Bethesda Hospital Thursday evening after a lingering illness. Funeral services were conducted by Dr. Clark, the Presiding Elder, assisted by Rev. Cardwell at the M. E. church Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, after which the remains were forwarded to her former home in Lynchburg, Virginia where interment took place Monday p. m.

Mrs. Stone had made many warm friends since moving to Erlanger, and Rev. Stone and his little four year old daughter have the sympathy of the entire community.

Undertaker Philip Tallafiero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

American people said to need more capacity for self expression, but they show plenty of ability that way when yelling at the umpire.

People who watch their step never have to resort to dodging.

The Recorder Stands for BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES

The razing of the old barn at the Boone House, last week, has removed from the town another old landmark. This old building, built more than seventy-five years ago, has housed many fine horses and cattle—being the stopping place for J. C. Jenkins' fine herd of Shorthorns while enroute to the old Boone Fair. Besides being a shelter for horses and cattle, many other happenings have taken place under its roof, if put into book form would make interesting reading, although all of those who participated in a game of chance, and they came from all parts of the county on court days, have crossed the Great Divide. It was in the latter part of the sixties that the writer served as check boy while the hotel was under the management of John O. Campbell, and on court days the crowds were so large that outside accommodations had to be secured to accommodate the large crowds.

During the nice weather of the past week several members of Burlington's "Isaac Walton Club" have tried their luck with the flinty tribe in Gunpowder creek. Although they have not had much success in landing a great many of the inhabitants that infest the waters of old Gunpowder, it has offered them much pleasure to sit on its banks and watch the sparkling rivulets that wind their way over stones and pebbles, as they grind their way on to the mighty ocean. Said one enthusiast, "I should like to listen forever to this happy stream, though when I leave it to its play it bids me no farewell, but runs carelessly on and on its way, caring not for me nor heeding me."

Farm work in Boone county is well under way. The work this year is much further advanced than it was last year at this time and early preparations count much in the raising of tobacco and corn. More attention will be given to the raising of corn this year than last. The corn crop is much easier to be raised, with far less work, but the price the past few years has not warranted growing very much of it until the past season when the prices soared. The tobacco crop will not be as large as that of last year, as the farmers will give more attention to the raising of other crops.

PLAYING MARBLES

One of the sure signs of spring, it is declared, is that it is coming when you see the boys playing marbles on the sidewalks. It is a remarkable evidence of the performance of human habits, that this ancient game that was played long before the Christian era is still popular with boys all over the world.

The boys show in this primitive sport the traits that will mark their later careers. A boy who is masterful in the marble ring is likely to be the leader later on, when it comes to the competitions of school and college sports.

One thing needed in the marble ring is some regulating power that shall make the bunch play fair, so they shall not graduate into other games with the feeling that crooked tricks and bluffs can be worked. The boy's organizations that have arranged marble contests played according to regular rules, perform a service, and help make this ancient boy instinct a means for learning fair play.

THOSE "BARGAINS" IN INVESTMENTS

There are no bargains in investment securities, on the public understands bargains through its experience with merchandise. The fair and honest price for any security is not made by any man, company or group of men. It is made, first, by the safety of the security; 2nd by the amount of interest dividends it will pay; third, by its marketability; fourth by the interest rates banks are charging for loans.

At hand is a circular advertising "bargains" in oil stocks. If someone is spending money for postage and printing bills to sell those stocks "cheap," it is absolutely certain that they are worth less than the "bargain" price named in the circular. If his stocks were safe, if they paid dividends in money and not in gutting promises, if they were desired ed by experienced investors and if they paid higher returns than the present bank rates, those factors would make a fair and honest price for his stocks and he wouldn't have to sell them at a bargain. All this get-rich-quick talk about "bargains" simply indicates that some one is trying to peddle something for more than it is worth.

Occasionally a good stock or bond may be bought for slightly less than it is worth. This is because shrewd judges of securities, who are constantly seeking sound securities for 1 or 2 per cent or even a fraction of 1 per cent less than they are worth, have temporarily overlooked these particular securities. When that happens some experienced investor soon discovers it and the securities are quickly bought up. "Cheap" securities are rarely "bargains." They are the most unsafe and the most expensive to buy.

No President since Andrew Johnson (the only Chief Executive who ever was impeached) has ever received such an official slap in the face as that which Coolidge got when the Senate turned down his appointment of Charles Becker Warren of Michigan as Attorney General. In an effort to show as good a face as possible in a bid situation, the President however, and his friends likewise look upon Warren's rejection by the Senate as a parliamentary mishap rather than a straight out rebuff. That is the opinion of several Administration Senators, who would have voted for Warren, and that the unfortunate absence of Vice-President Dawes enabled the Democrats to carry the day. Dawes is in for some bad seedling as a result of this, many Republicans finding it wise to try to make him shoulder all the blame for Warren's defeat.

The Melons-Couzens row, involving one of America's richest men, has broken on the front pages again this time a charge from the Treasury that the Senator from Michigan failed to pay all the income tax that was due the Government as a result of his sale of his holdings in the Ford Motor Company. The bill for back taxes drawn upon Couzens by the Bureau of Internal Revenue amounts to something like ten million dollars. Although the House of Representatives is flatly on record in favor of American entrance into the World Court, it appears that there will be no action by the Senate on this proposition despite the renewed demand by the President for action. The trouble in the Senate is that there are too many factions each with its own private idea of how the U. S. ought to join the international court. The irony of it is that the plan of the Administration is that of the Democrats, while the Republicans have a plan which would divorce the court completely from the League of Nations.

Frank Kellogg should become a popular Secretary of State, regardless of the record of his accomplishments in international affairs. One of his first offers to the newspapers was that he would see them in his private office whenever they had something they wanted to talk to him about. Such freedom is rare in a Secretary of State. Assuredly Mr. Kellogg did not learn such things in Europe—it is a hang over, rather from his Senatorial days and as a "trust buster" in Minnesota under the Roosevelt Administration.

The success with which aviators at Hampton Roads flew all around the coast defense guns in perfect safety while attempts were made from the ground to bring them down is not pleasing to Secretary of War Weeks in view of the charges of General Mitchell that the American coast defenses are helpless against aerial attack. Weeks, therefore, has ordered the tests to be made again and on a larger scale. He wants to give the coast artillery men another chance. As they are so loud in their declarations that conditions were so unfavorable in the first test that they could not really prove their effectiveness. In the meantime, Mitchell, having had his say, is going back to the rear of Colonel and will be transferred away from Washington, probably to the Middle West.

A combination church and office building is being planned by the building committee of the First Congregational Church of Washington.

Timely Agricultural News

By R. J. Matson, County Agent

The Co-Operative—

The Co-operative Livestock Commission Association at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards is doing nicely. Business is gradually on the increase. During the first week the association handled 7 per cent of the livestock going thru the yards. In the fourth week they handled 14 per cent. This is a very rapid growth.

The Association is operating along the same lines as all of the other producer agencies now in operation. It is a member of the National Organization and is incorporated as a co-operative association, as such, all profits are refunded to the producer members.

This is the farmers association and is ready at all times to do the best of service.

Community Meetings.

Meetings held at Walton, Florence and Union during the second week of March were very well attended. Music and movies furnished the greater portion of the entertainment. Next month the boys and girls of the different schools will add to the entertainment list. Hebron community had the largest meeting this month.

Poultry Association.

Eggs are moving nicely with the greatest demand for Reds, Rocks and Leghorns.

Jersey Cattle Club

The Boone County Jersey Cattle Club met at the court house Monday afternoon to reorganize for the year 1925. Some big sales have been made out of this county during the last year and prospects are looking very favorable.

The club is planning a sale to be held early in June, in Jersey town, a pure-bred sire drive and a boys and girls Jr. Calf Club.

The annual meeting will be held in Burlington the first Monday in April at 1 o'clock. All breeders of Jersey cattle are invited to attend this meeting.

Tabernacle

Dr. Renter will be with us only two weeks more. Let's try and have every one tested before Doc leaves. If you have some not tested call me at 112 and I will have him come to your place to test.

President Coolidge's church. The new structure is to be ten stories high according to tentative plans, with the church occupying the first two or three floors and with the rest of the building to be used for other purposes, lawyers and other professional men of that kind thought that a building of that kind will enable the church to pay its own way without making repeated financial appeals to the membership.

WAKING UP THE ORGANIZATIONS

There are plenty of organizations in almost any country town, but some of them need a little waking up. Many country churches, for instance, could accomplish more if they could branch out a little and make more effort to render real service and make their functions attractive.

Perhaps they need a drive to get more children into the Sunday school or to secure more teachers for such classes, or to provide a new organ, or to organize a chorus choir, or to start organizations for the boys and girls, etc. There are many things that could be done in almost any country town to broaden the service of organization and give them a firmer hold on the community.

INFLUENCE OF COUNTRY SURROUNDINGS

A noted writer once remarked that there is something in country surroundings and experiences that invigorates the mind that encourages hope, that allays fear and that our happiest plans and wisest resolutions are usually formed under the healthful influence of a country scene.

People develop in country towns in a normal and healthful way. In cities there is strong tendency for people to pursue artificial ends. There is a great deal of needless rivalry involving one in heavy burdens of expense.

They are expected to conform to certain fashions as respects their clothing and homes and manners. Up to a certain point that may be useful, but it goes beyond all reason, and forces people to spend far more money than is necessary to keep up appearances and have what their neighbors have.

That makes the pursuit of money, much fiercer than it is in country towns. People get feverish and excited about it, they worry and lie awake nights if they think they are not keeping up with their neighbors, and they grow old prematurely.

The modern country town conforms in many ways to the fashions of the time, and it will take pains to seem up to date and enter into modern movements. But there is not always intense rivalry for show and display. People's ideas are simple and natural, and few will spend any money for personal display. Extravagant habits are gradually upon, and Abortion.

Contagious abortion has been causing great losses in our cattle. Dr. T. P. Polk from the Experiment Station at Lexington, was here last week to check up on the situation.

He will be back as soon as weather conditions to bleed around 150 cattle to ascertain if they are diseased or not. Parties who want this free service should get in touch with me soon.

Ton Litter Contest

Chester Tanner and C. F. Kinsey have signified their intention of entering the Kentucky Ton Litter Contest. Anyone else interested in this contest should get in touch with me in the near future.

Hebron Orchestra.

The Hebron High School orchestra played at the Co-operative Pure Milk Association meeting held at Hebron last Thursday night and Florence.

The group of 36 boys and girls have only had seven lessons but they delivered entertainment that was highly appreciated by both audiences.

500 BOYS AND GIRLS TO ATTEND CLUB WEEK

The Board of Trustees has decided on June 8-13 as the dates of the annual Junior Agricultural Club week at the University of Kentucky. It is expected that about 500 boys and girls will be in attendance, according to J. V. Whitehouse, of the College, state leader of junior club work. Approximately that number, from 47 counties, attended last year and that is about the limit of the accommodations available, he said. Since there are 20,000 club members in the state, this means that only one boy or girl in 40 will be permitted to attend.

The purpose of the week is to give club members short courses in agriculture and homemaking, and to acquaint them with the State University.

Lime Crusher

A letter from Clell Coleman, Commissioner of Agriculture, states that the state lime crusher will come to the county in the near future. This will afford a very cheap source of lime stone for other farmers who have rock that they can grind.

People are judged by their solid worth and usefulness, rather than by whether they have a handsome house or well around in fine clothes.

This spirit makes it much easier to get along, because the standards of expenditures are not nearly so high. A fair amount of money that would be wholly inadequate in a city will make one very comfortable in a country town.

COOLIDGE SILENCE

The famous reserve in conversation which is characteristic of President Coolidge, raises the question whether people could cultivate to advantage. It is evidently not merely an unconscious habit with Mr. Coolidge, but he seems to be convinced that the majority of people talk too much, and that it would be for their advantage to say less, and to listen and think and read a good deal more. So it could be asked in a "general way whether as a rule the American people talk too much?"

Many people would be better off if they talked a little more. They give an impression of cold and unfriendly reserve, which makes it seem as if they were haughty and proud and not interested in other people.

On the other hand, a multitude of people are constantly pouring forth a stream of words. They never seem happy unless they are giving out this flow of language. One sees them approaching with distaste, as they interrupt work and it is hard to get rid of them.

It is a difficult matter to draw the golden mean between an excess of silence and such a superfluity of conversation. It is true, however, that still waters run deep, and if a person wants to do the highest type of work, he can not spend any large amount of time in aimless talk. Nevertheless, talk is the vehicle of communication, and it is by communication that intelligence is distributed and induced to accomplish things. What is needed is for the shallow talkers to curb their loquacity, while the taciturn folks should open up and communicate their stores of wisdom to the world. But many statesmen and politicians might well imitate the Coolidge silence, and give their attention to winning popular support by efficient service rather than by their voluble talk.

In placing himself on record as a firm believer in the future supremacy of the airplane over battle ships, and as a severe critic of the Navy department management, Admiral Sims declared: "With an adequate number of efficient seagoing submarines and with more airplanes on our coast and in our Navy than has been brought against us across the sea, nobody is going to bother us."

COUGHS

Quick Way to Stop Them

Persistent, racking coughing, which by rapidly weakening your entire system lays you open to more dangerous infections, can be checked often with the first dose of that old-time tried and proved remedy—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. And there's a reason—because this honey-like pine-tar quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which give rise to the coughing, while the honey soothes the inflamed throat and helps soothe irritation. It often astonishes how quickly this combination relieves the stubbornest cough.

But be sure you get the original Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, and not substitute. Dr. Bell's has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other cough-acting ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief.

Children—fine for spasmodic coughs. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's. Only $2.00 a good drug!

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, AND ALL AFFECTIONS OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS.

Let women who have swallowed wholesale the proverb that short cuts are sometimes longest, forget it. This is a day of short cuts; if you take the long way round you never arrive.

But to be short need not be poorly done with a blunt knife; the cleverest surgeon is he who can perform the biggest operation with the shortest cut.

Learn to do things quickly—but well. Pottering is a word tabooed in the up-to-date lexicon.

In this hustling world the woman who does not "get there" on an air line never has a chance to rest.

Take to conventional short cuts. She who rambles and beats about the bush, loses her hearers and uses up her own nervous energy. If terseness were a habit doctors would never have to order for their women patients periods as rest cures.

Be a housekeeping short cutter. Avoid non-essentials; spend on labor-savers rather than on frills; get down to a system and hold every one else in your household to it. This way lies the solution to the eternal "servant problem."

Hunt short cuts with the needle. Many women wear their lives out with constant stitching. Fine handwork is a luxury; take in an electric machine for steady wear. Don't wear out your life that wife No. 2 may have what you have toiled for.

Digging is for the specialist, the scholar; the average busy man or woman to read at all must seek short cuts. Reviews and abstracts are not admirable, but they are better than total ignorance. Literary culling is not the old way, it seems to be the only way these days of varied interests.

Be a short cutter in business. Learn details; then study to eliminate them if you have the strength for bigger things. The swiftest road to success has the fewest curves.

Governor Silzer, of New Jersey bewails the existence of a "cement trust." If there was not a cement trust it would be the only productive business not so organized. Trusts seem to be popular. They are now engaged in absorbing each other, by doubling the capital and untangling the stock on the public. They now come under the head of "cooperatives."

Representative Henry Tucker of Virginia has notified the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House that he will not accept the increased salary voted by Congress. In this decision Mr. Tucker is following the precedent set by his grandfather who was a member of the House in 1816 and refused to accept an increase of Congressional pay from $8 to $8 per day. This fund has remained in the Treasury to the credit of his heirs for 108 years.

KID CANVAASERS

When you get that very imperative ring at your doorbell, it may not be some impressive person demanding immediate attention, but merely some youngsters who are trying to earn a little pocket money by selling some article, or disposing of tickets for some entertainment.

Some people are irritated by canvassers and they turn down these juvenile solicitors with a sharp refusal. Yet boys and girls who show initiative and energy should not be frowned upon.

The majority of people are always lacking in force and ideas of their own, and when a youngster starts out with some original idea as to how money can be made, he is showing a good spirit that will help him later. He can then be greeted with a pleasant smile and hope for his success, though that is no reason why any one should buy anything that he does not want.

No one ever discovered gold in their people's tracks.

A St. Louis Judge handed a "loan shark" a severe jolt recently when he decided that the defendant sued for $75 on an original loan of $18, must pay, but he could have 16 years in which to do so--the interest charge covering that period.

The late James J. Hill was a wiser man than his biographers have noted. He left to his family a farm worth $350,000, and with it a fund of $750,000 for maintenance. Farmers generally will admit that he was wise beyond his generation.

Order An Amendment You Want

THEY are trying to pass an amendment to keep children from working. Now children didn't want to work, but they got tired waiting for somebody else to do it. If they would just put through an amendment to MAKE grown people all work, there would be no need to have this children one. Grown people stopped working without an Amendment or even a reason, so it will take more than an Amendment to start them. It will take a Miracle.

They are going to pass another Prohibition Amendment, somebody mislaid the rules of the other one. The 19th amendment made Women vote, some amendments make us do something and some keep us from it. No. 21 will give men with Knee Breaches the vote. About the 25th Amendment will prohibit smoking and when they do "Bull" Durham will bootleg for a dollar a sack. After 20 years of controversy in fact since the war with Spain, the Senate has finally decided that the Isle of Pines belongs to Cuba. About 900 Americans have made investments in the Isle of Pines on the supposition that it belonged to the United States, but the peace treaty with Spain was so loosely drawn that up to this time it has been a question. BANKRUPTCY FILED AGAINST K. M. I.

PETITIONS OF SIX FIRMS NOT CONTESTED BY MILITARY SCHOOL NEAR LYNDON

Building Cost Error Blamed—Effort To Finance 80-Year Old Institution Under Way, Commander Says

Lyndon.—The Kentucky Military Institute, near Lyndon, which would have celebrated its eightieth birthday this year, was declared bankrupt by Judge Charles I. Dawson in the Federal Court. An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the school November 12 by six firms and, according to records, the petition was not contested.

Because of financial difficulties the school was not reopened last autumn, but it was announced plans for reorganization were under way and that the coming fall would again see the institution in operation.

Abandonment of the annual trip to Florida in 1923, a feature of the scholastic term that was inaugurated in 1906, led to a tuition of forty of the then sixty students. The revolt occurred January 20, 1924, after students were said to have been in a virtual state of revolt for several days. Some of them returned, ringleaders are said to have been expelled, while others refused to return. Lack of a sufficient student body led to the closing of the school at the end of the term last June.

The cost of replacing a building destroyed by fire was under estimated by $50,000 and that, combined with the increased railroad fare which caused abandonment of the Florida trip, resulted in the financial embarrassment. Col. G. W. Sells, commander of the school, said.

Assets of the institution are almost four times as great as the liabilities, he declared. Efforts to finance the school are under way and it possibly may be reopened in the fall, he added.

During the World War K. M. I. year after year was designated an honor school by the War Department. It always was considered one of the best military institutions in the South.

Firms filing the bankruptcy petitions are the Suttelle Co., J. C. P. Morton & Co., St. Mathew Bank & Trust Company, Klarer Provision Company, Thomas E. Basham, Co., Harbee & Castleman.

Amount of the liabilities or assets were not filed in the proceedings.

NEW HOSPITAL ERECTED

Equipment For Owensboro City Hospital Addition To Cost $26,000.

Owensboro.—With the new addition and new equipment, costing $26,000, it is the opinion of Owensboro physicians that the Owensboro City Hospital is one of the best equipped in this section of the country.

The hospital can now comfortably take care of from sixty-five to seventy patients. At the present time there are twenty-four student nurses and four supervising nurses at the City Hospital, with Mrs. L. M. Justice, superintendent, in charge.

The third floor addition afforded fourteen new rooms for patients, all of which have been furnished with the most modern equipment, and also rooms for twenty-five additional beds for the nurses.

The maternity ward is now located on the third floor of the hospital and it has been handsomely equipped with every modern convenience. The operating room is also on the third floor.

The addition to the hospital was necessary on account of the often crowded conditions. Then, too, the addition affords more pleasant quarters for the nurses. At the same time, during an emergency, the rooms occupied by the nurses can be turned over to patients, and the nurses return to the building adjoining the hospital.

It is believed that the new addition will meet the requirements of the City Hospital in Owensboro for a long term of years.

White Way Plan In Warren Heard.

Bowling Green.—A movement was started for a white way from the Public Square, Main and College Streets, to the foot-bridge, First and College, and from College and Fourth to the new Louisville & Nashville Railroad passenger station, Kentucky and Fourth Streets, at a meeting of the Bowling Green Kiwanis Club here.

Women Jurors Obliging.

Ashland.—A "court dinner" was served to Judge Henry L. Woods and other officials and attaches of the Boyd Circuit Court at Catlettsburg by the nine women members of the regular panel of the present court.

$1,000 Rotary Gift to Children.

Louisville.—Kentucky stepped ahead of all States and Provinces of North America in the opinion of members of the International Society for Crippled Children. A vision that these members have seen for three years was realized suddenly and brought Kentucky to the front as they were preparing to conclude their annual meeting. It was when the Rotary Club gave the Kooler Temple $1,000 for the Shrine programme for treating crippled children of the State.

Stop Night Coughing

This Simple Way

People who have persistent, annoying coughing spells at night, and who through loss of valuable sleep are weakening their systems and laying themselves open to dangerous infections, can stop their distressing trouble promptly by a very simple treatment. Hundreds who have hardly been able to rest at all for coughing, have gotten their full night's sleep the very first time they tried.

The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. The result is that you usually sleep as soundly as a babe the very first night, and the entire cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, hoarseness and bronchitis, and is wonderful for children's coughs and spasmodic croup--no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. It is on sale at all good druggists. Ask for

Huge Kentucky Hydro-Electric Dam On Dix River Now Near Completion; Engineers Close Tunnel To Fill Lake

More Than 1,000 Men Are Working Day and Night to Complete Dix River Dam, Which Is 270 Feet High, 920 Feet Long and 700 Feet Thick At Base. At Right Is Intake Tower Through Which Water Will Plunge To Three Turbines in Power House Below the Dam Where Generators Will Produce Current of 30,000 Horsepower.

By JOHN E. DAVIS

FIRST steps in actual operation of the great Dix River hydro-electric dam, near High Bridge, Ky., were taken March 15 when engineers closed the tunnel through which the river's flow has been diverted during a major construction period of fifteen months.

This will start formation of a lake thirty-four miles long whose carefully controlled waters soon will be driving three generators with a total capacity of 30,000 electrical horsepower. Before the end of summer this plant, developing more power than the famous Roosevelt Dam in Arizona, will be sending electricity to Lexington, Virginia and Central and Southeastern Kentucky.

Tremendous activity now marks the scene at Dix River dam. Nearly 1,400 men with dozens of steam shovels, derricks, donkey engines, power drills, concrete mixers, cable ways, locomotives and dump cars, are pushing the big job to completion at top speed. Day and night the air is filled with the clatter and rumble and dust and smoke of large scale industry.

270 Feet High, 920 Feet Long.

The dam is 270 feet high, about the height of a twenty-one story modern office building. At the river bed it is 700 feet thick, equal to the length of two ordinary city blocks. Between the abutting cliffs which form the river gorge, it is 920 feet long, the length of three city blocks. The top of the dam is twenty-four feet wide, which some day will be paved and made a stretch of scenic highway. The largest rock-filled dam in the world, the highest dam east of the Rocky Mountains, this structure is 105 feet higher than the falls of Niagara. More than $7,000,000 has been spent on the development. Power house, transformer sub-station and steel tower transmission lines are practically ready for the opening of giant valves that will turn water into turbines propelling three generators producing electricity of 18,000 volts. From the power house the current will go to a transformer sub-station nearby, raised to 60,000 volts and put on the transmission lines leading to the outer world.

Pioneer Development.

The development is owned by the Kentucky Hydro-Electric Company, a subsidiary of the Kentucky Utilities Company, which operates nearly 1,000 miles of transmission lines and supplies 102 towns, besides 500 industrial concerns, with electricity. Hydro-Electric Company officers are Samuel Insull, chairman of the board, Martin J. Insull, president, Lewis B. Harrington, first vice president, Harry Field, second vice president, G. A. Tuttle, treasurer, Mrs. Florence A. Tate, secretary and Miss R. E. McKee, assistant secretary. There are 4,500 stockholders in sixteen states and five foreign countries.

Dix River dam is the pioneer hydro-electric development in Kentucky. It is destined to play an important part in the industrial expansion of the state. According to Martin J. Insull, the Dix River plant is the first movement toward utilization of Kentucky's water-power resources, and will occupy a key position in the super-power transmission network to be built in this and adjoining states during the next ten or fifteen years. It is further destined to be an important unit in the inter-connecting super-power development which will cover the entire United States—a recently projected co-operative plan encouraged by the Department of Commerce.

Harrington's Dream Comes True. Scaffolding and ironies will be torn away, construction machinery and tools removed, and the completed work turned over to its owners by the E. K. Myers Construction Company, the contractors, early in the summer. Then Mr. Harrington will see materialized his dream of almost two decades. Likewise the hovering shade of Daniel Boone presumably will smile triumphantly over the vindication of Old Daniel's engineering judgment after almost a century and a half of waiting. In 1784 Daniel Boone wrote a book on Kentucky. "Dick's river flows many excellent mill seats . . . (and they) . . . will have plenty of water in the driest seasons."

While he was operating the electric light plant at Richmond, Ky., in 1899, Mr. Harrington, then in his late twenties, saw in the swift-flowing, cliff-walled streams of central Kentucky enormous potential hydro-electric power. He began to explore the streams of the region as he found time to do so. With G. T. Bocard, now chief engineer of the Kentucky Utilities Company, he covered hundreds of miles—on foot, on horseback and in canoe.

Finally the present site of Dix River dam was chosen as most suitable by these two young men. A dam site and a big idea and no capital debt, however, resolve themselves into $7,000,000 hydro-electric plant over night—not by a dam sight! But Mr. Harrington had this vision, his enthusiasm and no small fund of perseverance. He went to work.

Power Company Formed.

After three years, during which a great amount of data was collected, Mr. Harrington and fourteen friends organized the Dix River Power Company. His partners were: Harvey Chesnut of Richmond, Ky.; Harry Field, now president of the Kentucky Utilities Company and the Interstate Public Service Company; Mr. Bogard; J. H. Dean and J. J. Greenleaf of Richmond, Ky.; G. A. McRobert, J. S. Van Winkle and L. P. Yandell of Danville, Ky.; J. Q. Ward and Sidney G. Clay of Paris, Ky.; C. P. Kennedy of Burgin, Ky.; R. L. McDonald of Nigara Falls, N. Y.; S. W. Worgo of Elkhorn, Ky.; and Hite H. Huffaker of Louisville.

Mr. Harrington continued to gather vital facts. He made a record of the monthly rainfall of the region and of the daily amount of the river's flow at the dam site covering a period of twelve years. Then the interest of two of the foremost public utility men in the country was enlisted—Samuel Insull and Martin J. Insull, respectively chairman of the board and president of the Middle West Utilities Company. Formation of the Kentucky Hydro-Electric Company out of the old Dix River Power Company followed, and with the backing of the Middle West Utilities Company, its capital and credit, and in administrative, financial and engineering experience, the Dix River dam project got under way.

The Insults Brought Success.

"Our success in this great enterprise is due to Mr. Samuel Insull and Mr. Martin J. Insull," Mr. Harrington says. "Their hearty support and their wide knowledge of the public utility business materialized a dream and built an everlasting monument to industry and progress."

Following the birth of the new company came an advance guard of engineers headed by Arthur P. Davis who planned and built the Roosevelt Dam, E. W. Hamilton, chief engineer of the Middle West Utilities Company, L. E. Harza and George W. Hoxson, famous as planners and builders. Mr. Harza is chief engineer and Mr. Hoxson resident engineer of the Dix River dam development.

After surveys were made, the Company bought hundreds of acres of river bottom farm land which will be submerged by formation of the lake. The area of about twenty square miles to go under water includes many homes and other farm buildings, two bridges, several miles of the Lexington-Buena Vista highway and the Lexington-Buena Vista county road in Boyle, Garrard and Mercer counties.

Beginning of Work.

Actual construction began in the fall of 1922. A tunnel, 935 feet long and twenty-four feet in diameter, was bored through the east cliff, which forms one of the dam abutments. It extends from a point immediately above the dam to a point just below, is located 100 feet back of the face of the cliff except at the points of entrance and discharge and has been used temporarily to divert the river flow during construction.

The dam is composed of rocks, varying from a coffee-pot to a roll-top desk in size, to the amount of 1,500,000 cubic yards. Over the loose rock is a covering of hand-packed rock in places over thirty feet thick, and this hand-packed wall is embedded under a solid concrete blanket on the upstream side.

To move a million and half cubic yards of rock into a pile requires a tremendous amount of work and a lot of equipment. Nine hundred to a thousand men have been continuously employed. They have been living in a temporary town—made up of bunk houses, restaurants, a hotel, power plants, repair shops, a hospital and even a movie theater—with electric lights, waterworks and sewers.

Artificial Earthquakes.

The rock for the dam has come out of two quarries on opposite sides of the river. Two great blasts blew hundreds of thousands of tons of material off the cliff tops into the river bed where it would do the most good. For the largest blast—84,500 pounds of explosive was packed into two wells and fired. For the next largest, 28,000 pounds of dynamite was put into 167 holes and exploded. As 600 pounds of dynamite make a big blast, these two upheavals were artificial earthquakes.

The remainder of the rock was loosened with smaller blasts and carried in trains shunted over standard gauge railroad restles built on the rising pile and damped. As the pile mounted to the track level, the old trestles were abandoned and new trestles erected—a process somewhat like nature's construction of coral reefs. Nine locomotives, sixty cars and two and a half miles of switch-back track have been used in this phase of the work. Dispatchers, operating a block signal system, control the trains.

The L. E. Meyers Company has handled more material in a given time and worked faster on the Dix River job than on any previous work, company officials say.

A system of radio communication was recently put into operation between Louisville, Dix River Dam and the steam generating plants of the parent company at Pineville, Ky., and Pocket, Va. Engineers call it the "wired Wireless" because the radio current follows the high tension line.

Old Bridges To Go.

Besides the dam, power house and transformer sub-station, the construction includes 110 miles of transmission lines, an intake tower 235 feet high, a spillway 250 feet wide, 100 feet deep and 3,000 feet long, a waterworks pumping station and filtration plant for the city of Danville, several miles of modern highway and two expensive bridges.

The intake tower, connected with the upper end of the tunnel, looks like a tall factory chimney. When the plant is operating, water will flow into the tower near the bottom, pass through the tunnel and pour into three tubes, or penstocks, connected with the turbines. The waterworks station and filter, the bridges and highway will take the place of those submerged. Kennedy bridge, three miles above the dam, is 125 feet above the present water level and 900 feet long. Chevalier bridge, thirty-five miles above the dam, is 100 feet above water level and 500 feet long. Both bridges replace picturesque covered wooden structures of the Civil War period.

Recent issues of newspapers in Garrard, Mercer and Boyle counties have published warnings to families living in the Dix River bottoms above the dam to vacate at once. Dix River Dam is situated in the heart of the Blue Grass region, abounding in picturesque scenery, with the famous Shaker town a few miles away.

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I DO not know why I have always liked a rainy day. Nothing else so calms my nerves, nothing else so soothing and so restful, nothing else puts me in so amiable and kindly a mood toward humanity in general. I am not usually affected by the weather; cold or heat, sunshine or clouds are equally pleasant to me. Only the windy day with stry paper and flying straw and dirt in the air gets on my nerves; but the rainy day brings quiet and contentment, placidity of mind, and eagerness to work. I like to read or write before the open fire on such a day, but I enjoy almost as much being out in the storm. I like to draw the moist air into my lungs. I do not know how it happens, but I some way never get uncomfortably wet when I am out in the rain. I come into the house on a rainy day cheerful and exhilarated and quite fit. Perhaps it is because my ancestors came from England where it seldom does anything else but rain, that I am so happy and so satisfied with the rainy day; perhaps it is because as a young boy I lived on a farm where the rainy day meant leisure and release from the toll and grinding routine of the days of sunshine.

What a joy it was when I awoke in the morning with the rain coming down steadily outside, to feel that after my chores were done, I could curl up in a warm corner with a delightful book without danger of interruption or annoyance. It was on such days that I followed D'Araguana and his three glorious musketeers through their varied and thrilling adventures; it was then that I tramped with Jeanie Deans on the long road from Edinburgh to London; it was then that I made the acquaintance of Tom Sawyer, and the Marchioness, and Bill Sykes, and Jean Valjean, and Marie Gamp, and Rob Roy, and trailed through the American forest without treading upon a single twig behind those incomparable and impossible Indians of Cooper.

Very likely we were mistaken, but we were quite convinced, when I was a boy, that the only time to go fishing was on a rainy day. The fish were shy then, they bit hard, and more plentifully, there was greater likelihood of catching the big ones. Safely covered with father's old rubber coat, I would sit on the bank of the creek throughout a rainy afternoon quite happy and comfortable so long as the bait held on. All through the spring I would watch the sky with eagerness for signs of the gathering clouds and a glorious rainy day. Most of my love of sport and most of my mechanical skill were developed on rainy days, and the old barn yard hayrack was the arena of contest.

It has always seemed to me that the person who disliked a rainy day lacked the resourcefulness and imagination. Was there ever such a time for recounting the past; was there ever such a time for planning the future, if I have ever accomplished anything, I am sure it is because the idea came to me on some peaceful rainy day. It was then, in my imagination, that I performed my bravest acts, wrote my most appealing tales, was the most heroic and aggressive, and showed the strongest powers of leadership.

"FRENCH LEAVE"
Eighteenth century books of French etiquette warned the social struggler against taking formal leave of his host or hostess. The guest who enjoyed the party wasn't supposed to sulk around for the final hand-shaking. Only those who wished to register complaints resented. Consequently, taking "French leave" came to mean a hurried departure. "French leave" today is usually taken by cooks, second-story men and unwary politicians.

Leaf Speculator Given Fine For Inducing Breach

First Conviction Under Section 26 of Bingham Act Secured in Pros- ecution of Buyer

Lexington, Ky., March 28.—The first conviction under Section 26 of the Bingham co-operative marketing act in Kentucky was obtained in the Spencer circuit court at Taylorville, when a tobacco speculator connected with the loose leaf auction warehouse of Joe B. Turner at New Albany, Indiana, guilty of inducing Fred Harley, a Spencer county tobacco grower who is a member of the Bufile Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, to breach his contract with the association.

Milton, who was charged, induced Harley, whom he knew to be a member of the Association, to sell his tobacco to him (Milton) and Milton marketed it over Turner's floor at New Albany. Later he was indicted by the Spencer county grand jury for inducing a breach of contract.

At the trial, the jury found the defendant guilty and fixed the punishment at a fine of $100 and the costs of prosecution.

Captain H. B. Kinsolving of Shelbyville, prosecuted the case for the commonwealth. The penalty provided for the offense of which Milton was convicted is $100 to $1,000.

A SAD DEATH

Rowena, the oldest daughter of Prof. E. S. Ryle and wife, died at their home where they moved to last fall, at Morgan, Pendleton county, Saturday, March 28, 1925, after an illness of several weeks of pneumonia.

The remains were brought to Burlington Monday, March 30th, at 1:30 p. m., and the funeral services held in the Baptist church, of which she was a member. In a short, but beautiful talk Rev. Bush, of the Bellevue Baptist church, conducted the services in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends.

Rowena was 14 years of age and leaves a father, mother, two sisters and two brothers to mourn her death. Their loss is great, for she was a kind, loving daughter, a patient and indulgent sister, always faithful and obedient.

She battled bravely for life while every effort was put forth for her recovery, but the frail body was overpowered and after all mighty billow swept it away and she closed her eyes forever on this world to open them in a happier one, where there is no more painful separation, no more sickness and death.

Such trials as death are hard to bear and we can not lift the curtain and see why one so young in years should be taken. To some all is sunshine and no shadow for a while, but we must remember the words of the poet—

"There is never a day so sunny,
But a little cloud appears;
There is never a life so happy,
But it has its time for tears."

After the remains were viewed, we saw tenderly borne to the O. C. Fellows cemetery just east of town, and laid to rest in the family lot. Six of her schoolmates from the Morgan school, acting as pallbearers, assisted by the Burlington Camp Fire Girls of which she was a member.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE COUNTY

(By Prof. A. M. Yealey, Florence)

During the year 1790 Wm. Underhill and wife left Pennsylvania, passing down the Ohio river in a house boat and made a landing near Taylorport. A family by the name of Craig had previously located here and in a conversation with Mr. Underhill Mr. Craig learned that he was a shoe maker and insisted that he remain and make shoes for his family and some 26 slaves which he owned, other settlers hearing of a shoe maker being here gave Mr. Underhill all the work he could do and he decided to build himself a cabin and make Boone county his future home, which he did and while here a son John was born Nov. 18th, 1798 (the first white child born in the county after it was organized). In later life this boy studied for a ministry and preached at the Gettysburg church for more than fifty years.

While living near Taylorport Mr. Underhill had considerable experience in Indian warfare, as the Indians molested the whites and the river during the period of 1791 and 1792, and on one occasion a band of them crossed the river on the Boone county side. Mr. Underhill aroused the settlers to arms and the Indians were forced to recross the river in their canoes, and thinking that the white man's rifle could not reach them, gave a war-whoop and howled vile epithets at the white men when one Lewis Fitzgerald (nephew to Mrs. Underhill) called to them and said he would accompany them, and laying his gun on one of his comrades shoulders took a steady aim, and when the gun cracked the Indian fell. The Indians then gathered their comrade up and retreated back in the forest. To stop these raids the settlers formed a company and called it the Squirrel Hunter's Brigade and chose Mr. Underhill their leader, and marched to Chillicothe, Ohio, where the Indians had left on their approach, but the whites set fire to their wigwags and cut down their corn, after that they were no longer a threat.

Mr. Underhill moved his family from Taylorport about the year 1804 to the forks of Gunpowder and settled on what is now known as the Onnie Rouse farm, but was ousted by an older claimant, he then moved to what is known as the Weaver farm, but was again ousted, then moved to the farm now owned by John and while living here another son, Thomas, was born March 6th, 1811. He got a good title to the last farm and at his death his son John got possession of it and it is still known as the Underhill farm.

Few Boone county people know that a survey was made down Gunpowder for a railway, by the way of the Weaver and Crisler mills. This survey was made in 1854 and considerable stock was sold along the route, but with the understanding that the stock would not be paid until the road was built so we see the people in those days were more careful and not as easily caught as now.

Among the county agents. County Agent S. W. Anderson predicts that 1,200 to 1,500 acres of alfalfa will be sown in Nicholas county this spring. Alfalfa seeded in the county a year ago has done well, and provided much feed during the winter. Six men who sowed soybeans last year plan to grow an increased acreage this year, and several other farmers will try them.

There is much interest in tobacco growing in Knox county, due to the success of this crop in Laurel and Clay counties, according to County Agent Earl Mayhew, who reports that 100 farmers plan to grow tobacco. A few farmers will grow soybeans.

Oliver R. Carrithers, county agent in Harlan county, in his February report to the College of Agriculture, says: "Seventy-five to 100 carloads of clothing and food supplies are brought into Harlan county every day. It is estimated by a railroad official that 75 per cent of this is food. Our plan is to stop this as soon as possible. Our only problem is that of production, and we expect to devote our entire time to it until it is solved."

Ten new orchards are being set in Boone county under the supervision of County Agent R. J. Matmon. He attributes much of the enthusiasm for fruit growing in that county to fruit shows held at Covington and other northern Kentucky points.

"One thousand farmers to grow soybeans in 1925" is a slogan adopted by Russell county farmers, County Agent M. H. Sasser reports. About 80 per cent of the acreage will be for seed, a like amount for hogging down purposes, and the rest for hay.

County Agent C. E. Hook has placed 156 calves in the hands of members of Garrard county club. They cost an average of $9.87 per 100 pounds. All but six are Aberdeen Angus.

County Agent L. C. Prover reports that 11 Fayette county farmers will enter the state ton-litter contest, provided they have litter suitable to enter. Six will enter Poland China, four Durocs, and one Hampshire and one Spotted Poland China.

POSTAGE RATES

CHANGED UNDER NEW POSTAL LAW EFFECTIVE APRIL 15—LETTER RATE NOT CHANGED

The new postal law which goes into effect April 15 increases the rate on private mailing cards from one to two cents, but the price of postal cards remains at 1 cent each. The rate of postage to publishers is increased, and postage on newspapers, magazines, and periodicals by persons other than publishers is 2 cents for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof up to eight ounces, which means that the postage on any paper weighing 2 ounces or under will be 2 cents.

Letter postage remains at 2 cents per ounce or fraction thereof. A synopsis of the new postal rates effective April 15, is as follows:

Private Mailing Cards

Two cents each; the old rate was one cent each. There will be no change in the price, issue or sale of Government Postal Cards.

Newspapers and Magazines

Those who are in the habit of sending single copies of newspapers and magazines will find that the new rate of postage on publications entered as second class matter, "when mailed by others than the publisher or news-agent," shall be two cents for each two ounces or fraction thereof for weights not exceeding eight ounces; for weights exceeding eight ounces, the rates of postage prescribed for fourth class matter shall be applicable thereto.

Third Class Matter

The former rate for third class mail was one cent for each two ounces up to four pounds. Third class mail will now include "Merchandise" which was formerly fourth class. The new third class rate is one and one-half cent for each two ounces up to eight ounces, except on books, catalogues, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, and plants, not exceeding 8 ounces, on which the rate is one cent for each two ounces.

Fourth Class Matter

All matter over eight ounces which is not included in the other classes is now fourth class. The basic rates remain as at present, the new bill, however, adds a flat two-cent service charge to each package and provides a "special handling" charge of 25 cents that is optional.

This entitles such matter to the same expeditions handling, transportation and delivery accorded to mail matter of the first class.

There were no such provisions under the old law.

Mail Order, Registry, C. O. D. Fees

Money order fees have been raised from 3 cents to 5 cents; from 5 cents to 7 cents; from 8 cents to 10 cents; from 10 cents to 12 cents; from 12 cents to 15 cents; the 18-cent fee remains the same; the 20-cent fee is reduced to 18 cents; the 25-cent fee is reduced to 20 cents; and the 30-cent fee is reduced to 22 cents.

Whereas the old registry fee was 10 cents for an indemnity up to $50 and 20 cents for an indemnity up to $100, the new law provides that not less than 15 cents nor more than 20 cents, in addition to postage, shall be charged. In addition there is a charge of 3 cents for a return receipt.

The insurance rates are raised as follows: From 3 cents to 5 cents; from 5 cents to 8 cents; the 10-cent and 25-cent rate remain the same, and as in the case of registry fees there is a charge of 3 cents for return receipt.

The old C. O. D. charges were 10 cents for collections up to $50 and 25 cents for collections up to $100. The new rate is 12 cents for collections up to $10; 15 cents for collections up to $50; and 25 cents for collections up to $100.

Special Delivery

The old Special Delivery rate of ten cents remains in force for packages weighing up to two pounds. Under the new bill, packages weighing more than 2 pounds and up to 10 pounds will cost 15 cents. On packages weighing more than ten pounds, a special delivery fee of 20 cents is charged.

The Special Delivery fee on first class mail remains the same, ten cents, plus the postage.

The chief salary rates of the new bill, together with the old rates, are as follows:

Salaries of postmasters: First class $3,300 to $8,000; this was also $3,300 to $8,000. Second class $2,400 to $3,000; the old rate was $2,300 to $3,000. Third class $1,100 to $3,300; the old rate $1,000 to $3,300; post-offices (Continued on Page Four)

40 and 8 Society of American Legion Will Present Play

FOURTH SHOWING

OF LOCAL PLAY WAS GIVEN A SPLENDID PRESENTATION AT PETERSBURG LAST FRIDAY EVENING

The fourth, and possibly the last, presentation of the local play, "Borrowed Money," was given at Petersburg last Friday evening in the local amusement hall. The seating capacity of the building was taxed, and those in charge of the undertaking, both locally and from Burlington, were very successful in the splendid order and attention given. Prof. Carter and members of the Senior Class of Petersburg High School, who were seemingly so well pleased with the attendance, and treatment they had received on the Saturday evening previous in Burlington, certainly extended themselves to the limit to make everything as comfortable and convenient as possible for the visitors, which they certainly did.

Petersburg and Burlington have been exchanging courtesies in amateur theatricals for the past fifteen years, or more, and the visitors at both places have always been cordially received. This neighborly feeling is to be commended and should be cultivated all the more.

J. D. GAINES

One of Texarkana's pioneer residents passed out yesterday afternoon about 1:30 o'clock at his home 1316 Walnut street at the ripe old age of 79 years, 41 years of which were spent as a resident of Texarkana. In the passing of J. D. Gaines, who for many years has been a familiar figure in and around this city, there is a loss that will be universally mourned, because Captain Gaines was greatly admired and beloved of many Texarkana people.

The weakness of old age are given as the primary cause for his death. He has been retired for some time from active work as an accountant, having been in Boone county, Kentucky, on November 26, 1845. When the Civil War broke, he promptly enlisted in the southern cause, remaining until the close of the war, when he returned to his old home. In 1864, Captain Gaines removed to Texarkana where he has since continuously made his home. He is survived by one son, Collins Gaines; two grandchildren, Collins Jr. and Janie Belle; one brother, LeGrand A. Gaines, and one sister, Mrs. Ben Collins, all of Texarkana.

Following his coming to Texarkana he became a member of A. P. Hill Camp, Confederate Veterans and for 25 years served as adjutant of that camp.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home 1316 Walnut, conducted by Rev. W. W. Dauph pastor of St. James Episcopal church. Interment will be made in the State Lane cemetery.

A large crowd attended the sale of personal property of the late William Clure and Bette Acra in Burlington last Saturday afternoon. People were there from all over the county and from Covington and Cincinnati.

A large line of home made quilts, comforts and blankets were on display and sold at very good prices. A lot of dishes, canned fruit, table linen and etc., was sold.

Two shares Peoples Bank stock was offered for sale and after spirited bidding, was sold to Melvin Jones. One share bringing $380.00 and the other share bringing $386.

Dolph Seebree was the auctioneer on the occasion and conducted the sale like a veteran, notwithstanding that this was the second sale he ever conducted. Many who heard him say that Dolph is one of the coming auctioneers of the county.

At one time there were five auctioneers on the ground and some of them sold a few articles just to be courteous to the regular auctioneer. Dolph says it was a kind of auctioneer's reunion.

DELCO PLANTS SOLD

Messrs. Prather and Ferguson, Delco Light dealers, of Georgetown, Ky., were in Burlington several days the past week. They are in the market for used lighting plants, which have been placed on the shelf in this vicinity since the high tension line has been in operation. They succeeded in buying several plants.

An optimist is a man who will buy an eskimo pie and carry it home in his hip pocket.

A condemnation of wealth that does with it appeal for funds is not very convincing.

"If I Come Back"—War Story, to be Presented In Grand Opera House

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 30.—Members of the American Legion and their friends throughout the entire Ohio Valley will attend the first presentation on any stage, at the Grand Opera House in this city, during the week of April 19, of "If I Come Back," a big war-drama adapted from that celebrated success of bygone years, "Arizona." Augustus Thomas, dean of American playwrights and author of "Arizona" has consented to the revision of that martial classic. The play will be produced by the 40 and 8 Society of the Legion.

Bob Newhall, well known Cincinnati writer, authored the book of "If I Come Back." Numerous war time songs will be interpolated; special scenery is being built and no expense will be spared to make the production one of professional caliber. It will be the successor to "Private Smith" which the 40 and 8 presented to capacity audiences two years ago. Milton D. Campbell, general chairman of committees arranging the affair, declares the coming performance will be even better than "Private Smith" and that it will take rank with the big road shows. "If I Come Back" will go into the Grand Opera House as a regular attraction and is expected to draw packed houses all week.

The entire production will be made and staged under the personal direction of Noah Schechter. Albert E. Thompson, who formerly starred on the road "In Old Kentucky" and who played the title role in "Private Smith" so capably, is to have the male lead. One hundred of the most talented members of the American Legion will take part, including Judge Joseph H. Woeste, Chief de Gare or commander of the 40 and 8.

THIRTY-FIVE

PER CENT OF KENTUCKY SEED CORN WORTHLESS

Only 65 per cent of the seed corn in the crib of the Kentucky farmers this year is fit for use, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. The figure is based on germination tests of seed corn from 462 farms in 97 counties in the state that were entered in the National Seed Corn Show held in Chicago last week.

Only 35 per cent of the Kentucky seed corn tested showed poor germination, according to J. S. Naylor, the expert in charge of the testing. Presumably they are the best ears that these farmers could find, and yet this large percentage of them will not grow when planted. Unless farmers test their seed corn before planting time, there will be a prodigious amount of replanting necessary. Testing now will prevent an absolute shortage at harvest time, he says.

"The big lesson of the National Seed Corn Show can be learned by each Kentucky corn grower in his own crib," says Mr. Naylor. "Take the dozen best ears. Then take the poorest dozen ears. Each dozen of ears will plant an acre of ground. The land is the same, the work is the same. Same weather. Some over-land. Same cost. At the end of the season the best dozen ears will yield perhaps 40 bushels of corn on the acre; the poorest dozen ears will yield 20 bushels. The 12 good ears will yield twice the crop of the 12 poor ears. This is the lesson that every farmer should take to heart."

The Kentucky state sweepstakes of the National Seed Corn Show was won by J. C. Harris, of McCracken county, but he was later defeated for the national championship by Mrs. Elsie M. Paluk, whose entry was awarded the thousand dollar C. M. Kittle trophy, the prize of the show.

There is no more appropriate time than the present to aid nature in her work of beautification.

Every good citizen will find some time and give some thought to the planting of trees, flowers and shrubs at this season of the year when nature is so kind and beneficent.

Just a little effort and care on the part of the people of Boone county in the planting and cultivation of such ornaments and adornments will bring joy and satisfaction and will make this community a more attractive place to visitors.

It is unfair not alone to the present, but to the future as well, not to make a little more money and energy to the beautifying of lawns.

"MAN FRIDAY"

Man Friday was handy man and chief flunky to Robinson Crusoe, of desert island fame. Friday was of a submissive nature and cheerfully washed all the dishes, or at least whatever they used as substitutes, in their bachelor quarters. Consequently anyone who is of a servile disposition and submits readily to the will of others is known as a "man Friday."

Trimming Finds Placement at Tip-Top of the Crown

The idea of posing the trimming at the very tip-top of the crown brings with it a pliancy of style which is most charming. We were rather skeptical when the mode proposed at the beginning of the season that we position our bouquets of violets, roses and other posies on the very summit of the crown. Now that most of our chapeaux, especially the now-so-popular small hats, are trimmed just that way, we are finding out how perfectly charming these top effects are.

The rule of fashion which pertains to the placement of flowers pertains to ribbon bows as well. They flaunt their perky loops from the very pinnacle of the crown throughout spring millinery with the sprightly grace of a butterfly poised on the petal of a flower.

The two saucy little top-trimmed models in the picture are proof positive that the idea is very fetching. In regard to ribbons, the Parisian vogue is to match the color of the ribbon to the hat, especially if the hat be tall. Good times are had on the demagogue.

IDLE FOREST LAND
 There are about eighty million acres of idle forest land in the U. S. that should be at work.
 Eight million acres of idle forest land comes into being every year through man-caused forest fires.
 It is plain where this would lead to without a fixed forestry policy that will build up our timber at least in small proportion to the rate at which it is being reduced.

This is the purpose of the annual observance of American Forest Week, which President Coolidge has proclaimed for April 27 to May 23. Farmers especially should awake to the country's forest needs. One-third of all our forest land is in the form of farm woodlots and small holdings. Farmers also are the greatest single class of wood-users.

Here, in Boone county the most casual observer has seen the way forest land has been covered. Hundreds upon hundreds of trees are cut out annually and none is planted to take their place.
 The problem of our diminishing forests will never be solved by state and federal agencies. It is one for every land owner to consider most seriously.

THE POOR OLD CONSTITUTION.

Sailing into the harbor at Norfolk, Va., with the Stars and Stripes proudly waving, the United States Beaufort, returning from a little outing to a friendly nation, brought some forty cases of contraband liquor which was attempted to be discharged in violation of the Constitution of the United States and in disregard of the oaths of the officers and men to whose care the ship had been committed. A plea of ignorance on the part of the officers seems to be a flimsy excuse to dodge responsibility, and some deckhand may be made the goat. But the disagreeable fact remains, and a few millions of patriotic American citizens are anxious to know if the Constitutional provisions have two applications—one for the influential official or citizen, and another for the poor cuss who, in an attempt to eke out a precarious existence rubs his nose against prison bars by setting up a two-gallon still in his cellar?

Constitutional laws are not created to be laughed at. If laws generally are to be respected they cannot be made the joker's butt. The example set in high places will inevitably be followed by the rank and file—just as it is in everything else. If a man were to hear the name of his wife, sister or sweetheart joked about on the streets he would resent it with his two fists—if he had no gun, and he would be applauded ed by every red-blooded American man or woman.

But the Constitution seems to have no such defenders, the poor thing seems to be in bad repute—and whose fault is it?

THERE'S MORE OF GLADNESS THAN SADNESS

You may not think it, but it is a fact that there is more of sunshine than of shadow on this globe of ours, and more of gladness than of sadness in this world of ours.

When the sun shines and the weather is balmy you go along comfortably without thought to the brightness and cheerfulness, and rarely think of mentioning it to your neighbor.

But let the conditions change only for a day, or part of a day, and you begin to growl and complain to your neighbor, and even to the stranger whom you meet in the way. Isn't this true?

The extreme of this is the habit of some people to wrap themselves in gloom when a relative passes from this troublesome world to a world of real enjoyment. They call it mourning or showing respect for the dead, forgetting that it is a sort of ancestral worship directed only from that of the heathen Chinese in color of the cloth.

Besides if your religion is true you ought to rejoice when a sufferer is given complete and everlasting release from bodily pain. And, further, it does you no good to mourn and hold funeral affairs, nor does it add in the least to the welfare of the departed.

As long as people continue to observe disagreeable customs because they are old, they will have to bear the pains and inconveniences peculiar to them.

If you desire a bright and cheerful life keep on the bright side, shy the shadows, and accept the occasional cold blasts that you encounter as inevitable, and complacently wait until they have passed, for pass they will, and be followed by balmy breezes.

Learn to love the bright, the cheery, the beautiful, and the good in this world, and you will find the shadows growing less dense, the storms less fierce, and disappointments less annoying.

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT

There is really no use of being cramped for space or rushed for time, take it from a University of Chicago astronomer professor, who estimates that thousand-thousand million years or perhaps a thousand thousand-and-thousand million will elapse before the world comes to an end.

This is the answer of science to the group of New York folks who brought down ridicule upon themselves and made the credulous nervous by predicting that the world was going to loop off into space on a certain date.

Mr. Earth will write fairs on his planetary career when our sun passes too near another sun, the professor says. The resulting whirl-pool of incandescent matter will consume the earth.

But there is little immediate danger of the sun interfering with the progress of other suns, even though a half billion others, some of them larger than our own sun, are running loose in our galaxy.

And there are other galaxies, too, probably of half billion of them, forming a super galaxy. Our own galaxy is an oval, ten times longer than it is wide, and its length is estimated at 400,000 times 5,865,095,000,000 miles.

In other words, we can all continue on our journey in pursuit of health, wealth and happiness until the end of our time on earth, without any interference on the part of the earth.

Peace advocates are asking why presidential inauguration ceremonies are accompanied with a display of artillery, militia and war trapping, instead of demonstrations of peace and harmony? It is a question that deserves some thing more than mere passing notice, because it involves a principle that lies close to the hearts of real Americans.

PERSONAL ITEMS

City newspapers often make fun of the country journals, because of the many small personal items that they print. Yet these items are just as interesting as the columns which the metropolitan papers print regularly about the society people.

A study of the country town personal items suggests one idea, that the country people are doing a great deal of visiting and traveling about. They are going around among their friends in other towns and entertaining those from other communities. That promotes their intelligence. They have seen much of the world that they have a clear idea of modern progress, but after they have travelled around they come back home with the feeling that it is the best place on earth.

GOOD LIGHTING

Poor lighting may seriously impair the future of a child or may reduce the usefulness of older people, yet it is a question that receives scant attention from the average person.

Lighting is given more consideration in large auditoriums and public buildings, and in industrial institutions, yet conditions are far from what they should be, as a rule.

This is the testimony of the Eye-Sight Conservation Council of America, which adds that lighting conditions in the households and school rooms of the land are neglected to an extent that is harmful to the human race.

Glare is regarded as the most insidious cause of eyestrain, and it may be found present in the lighting arrangement of the majority of homes.

Excessive brightness, excessive volume of light and excessive contrast, are the three chief sources of glare. Excessive brightness is said to be the worst offender.

It would be a simple matter to overcome some of the evils of poor lighting, if those offering from the consequences would take the time to determine the source of the trouble.

Methods of lighting the home to promote health and comfort, as well as to conserve the eyesight, are the coming vital factors of domestic science and modern housewives should not fail to keep in touch with developments in the art of lighting the home.

COUNTRY TOWN OPPORTUNITIES

Young people some times remark that they see little chance for a business success for themselves in a country town, unless they go into one of two lines, farming or keeping a retail store. If they are not attracted to these lines or do not see any opening around home, they will often go away to some distant city.

Many bright young men, however, have made successes for themselves in a wide variety of lines in country towns. Many of them have started little manufacturing concerns and have been very successful. The people through the country districts need supplies and services and equipment in a hundred lines that could be mentioned. There is an opportunity for those who can meet these needs.

Many people have been going to the larger cities for certain articles and equipment that could be bought to better advantage of some country town dealer. Many energetic dealers have started out to supply such needs from a country location, in which they could do business at a low rate of costs. They should usually undersell dealers who have to rent expensive quarters in the city buildings and pay help on the basis of high cost city expenses.

It is not necessary for a young man to move to some city in order to build up a successful trade, either in manufacturing or wholesale or retail distribution. Many have succeeded by starting in a right place, where they were, with some good specialty. By going around from town to town and house to house and farm to farm, they built up a large personal acquaintance, and a fine line of business. The young men of this country should keep watch of enterprises being carried on in other country towns, and investigate the chances for such propositions in our own community.

Last week marked the transition of the State Board of Charities and Corrections from control of the persons appointed by former Governor Edwin P. Morrow to those named by Governor W. J. Fields. Enemies of the present administration of course, have hailed this as a "reversion to the spoils system." The truth is that the only important change made has been in the selection of Milon F. Conley, of Louisville, editor and former member of the Board of Prison Commissioners, to succeed Joseph T. Byers as Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

Byers was brought to Kentucky, it is no secret, at the instance of the late A. T. Hert and of Judge Robert W. Bingham, owner of the Courier-Journal and Times. He was introduced as an expert in the management of penal and charitable institutions. He formerly had been employed in New Jersey, when Woodrow Wilson was Governor, and also had similar experience in Ohio.

Soon after the arrival of Byers and his induction into office, many of the veteran employees of the State institutions, both Democrats and Republicans, were replaced. At a hearing in the 1922 session of the General Assembly, a committee of the General Assembly heard the charge made that one village in Indiana had been "almost depopulated" to supply men and women to fill in these places in the various Kentucky institutions. This of course was exaggeration, but it is true that many persons were brought into Kentucky by the board.

A bill directed at Byers and these other new comers, which if enacted into law would have provided for a five-year residential qualification in Kentucky, was defeated in the 1924 Legislature, because it was bungled when it passed the House, 51 to 42, and had to be amended when it reached the Senate, which it passed 22 to 16. Going back to the House it was killed, 48 to 46, in the closing hours of the session. Twenty-seven Republicans, 20 Democrats and one independent joined to defeat the measure.

This action of the Republicans in killing the "Byers bill" had one immediate and fatal outcome for the fastest official position in the state, that of oil inspector of Jefferson County. That office, paid in fees, was said to have been worth from $25,000 to $30,000 a year for its holder, who was Roscoe C. Seay, brother of former National Committeeman Chesley Seay, of Louisville.

The oil inspectors were appointed by the County Judges, and most of them were Democrats. In Kenton County the office was worth $8,000 to $9,000 annually, and in proportion, it was valuable in Campbell, Fayette, McWhorter and other counties, especially where the larger cities are located.

Senator Allie W. Young, of Morehead, had piloted the "Byers bill" through the Senate. He had worked day and night to organize and hold in line the bi-partisan combination of Senators which carried the day there, and when the G. O. P. members of the House, with four exceptions, joined to kill the measure, on its return to the lower branch, which was necessary on account of the amendments, he became exceedingly wroth.

As soon as news of the debacle of the attempt to oust Byers reached the Senate, Senators Young and Newton Bright, of Henry County, proceeded to the Governor's office, and immediately there came forth the report that the oil inspector bill which had been tied up in the Rules Committee of the Senate would be brought out and passed. And it was so.

The bill was passed, and with it went not only many of the juiciest plums in the disposal of the various County Judges, but also according to well-defined rumor, the collapse of whatever chance there was to pass the $75,000,000 consolidated bond issue bill.

Because the real, active opposition to the bond issue proceeded from the "house crowd" in almost every county; and the "double string" to incite that opposition was the abolishment of the oil inspectorship, coupled with the defeat of the "Byers bill," which, if passed, would have given the disposal of about 700 appointive places under the board to a new superintendent.

These 700 positions, of course now are at the nod of the new Board of Charities and Corrections, of which E. E. Shannon, of Louisville, who represented Elliott and Lawrence counties in the House of 1920, was elected Chairman at last Thursday's meeting. Former Chairman E. S. Tachau, of Louisville, was not reappointed, his place being taken by John P. Haggard, of the Fourth Congressional District, like Mr. Tachau, is a Republican.

Even the bitter adversaries of Governor Fields have been unable to say much against Mr. Haswell with the exception that he is a real, sure enough Republican. Mr. Haswell three times has been Representative in the Legislature from Breckinridge and Hancock counties and as many times has participated in the Speakership. He has been the minority leader, he has been the Railroad Commissioner, Special Circuit Judge, Assistant U. S. District Attorney, non-juror for Congress, former Regent of the Western Kentucky Normal School and a man who has led a busy and honorable life, according to the way the average Kentuckian regards a fair. The law provides that the board must be bi-partisan, and Governor Fields has not named any person to it concerning whose politics there can be the least question. Mr. Conley, the new Commissioner was a member of the Prison Board when the late James B. McCreary was Governor the second time (1915); he is a native of Lawrence county, will be 56 years old June 13; had a public school education, and at the age of 17 became editor of the Big Sandy News, which he still operates. His newspaper has twice taken the prize offered by the Ky. Press Association for the most progressive type of smaller journal. In 1904 he organized the Louisville National Bank, of which he is Cashier.

From 1893 to 1897 Mr. Conley was Postmaster at Louisville, an appointee of President Grover Cleveland.

Besides Mr. Byers, Dr. W. A. Johnson, Superintendent of the Central Asylum for the Insane at Lakehurst, Mrs. Laffon Riker of Lexington, and Judge Alex. Humphrey of Louisville, have also resigned.—Enquirer

THE CURE FOR LAWLESSNESS.

Widespread alarm is caused by the spread of lawlessness and prevalence of crime, and drastic action of various kinds is called for. Penalties for many offenses should be made more severe. Yet such wrongs are not cured by penalties. When a boy or girl does wrong things, something is missing in the training of that youngster.

The schools ought to do more in the way of moral and religious training, yet their time is occupied by their extended courses, and such standards of conduct can not be wholly created by lectures and textbook instruction.

The fundamental reason for the lawless spirit is to be found in lax family government. The average American parent loses control of children at an early age.

Our people in Boone will say that it is not easy to deal with children in these times. It is hard to pursue a policy that is contrary to the general trend of society. If one home attempts to be stricter than the average, the children of that home often become rebellious and think they are singled out for specially severe treatment.

What is needed is a general movement on the part of all good homes for a more earnest attempt to bring up their children with firm principles of honor and morality. Parents must wake up to the idea that the children are running wild and need a greater degree of restraint, that they are escaping from the restraints of family discipline altogether too early.

The people who are influential in the community should set the example, by carefully abiding by the law themselves, and by firmer discipline with children. If it can be made fashionable to obey the law and bring up children with principles of good conduct, it will be easier to establish these standards for every one.

RAPID CO-OPERATIVE PROGRESS.

A remarkable story of progress is being reported by the officers of the National Council of Farmers Co-Operative Marketing Associations. It is shown that out of farm crops valued at $8,500,000,000 last year, co-operative associations are marketing over $2,000,000,000 worth of stuff.

It has commonly been charged that farmers are unprogressive and disinclined to take up new ideas. But this very rapid growth of the co-operative movement which has largely occurred in about five years, is proof of readiness to take up new progressions, perhaps more of this spirit than exists in other fields of industry.

In manufacturing, for instance, the idea of production concentrated in the hands of great combinations became somewhat prominent about 40 years ago. It took about 25 years to carry this idea out to anything like its present extent. But the farmer's co-operative movement has made a far more rapid growth, and is doing one fourth of the farm business of the country.

After such a demonstration, let no one say that the farmers are rooted to their old ideas. They are just as wide-awake and progressive as any other class of people. They are constantly reading and studying, and discussing their problems. In the years to come they will probably be quicker to adapt new ideas and work them out and get the benefit of them, than other classes in the community.

Young men who want to ally themselves with some progressive industry that is ready to take advantage of the changes of the times and profit by the spirit of the age, would do well to go into agriculture. Of course many farmers are left who are unprogressive, but as a rule the people who follow that calling have become sensible to new ideas, and will push them as fast as they seem practical.

President Coolidge has at last succeeded in getting a whole Cabinet together, though it was doubtful for time if he was going to be able to do it. The last Cabinet officer to be sworn in was the Attorney General, John G. Sargent, a neighbor of the Coolidges back in Vermont, and an old family friend. It was quite a surprise to Sargent when Coolidge summoned him to Washington, and he hasn't got over it yet, giving, however, every indication of maintaining the higher traditions of the Attorney General's office. He is over six feet tall and with a weather-beaten countenance testifying to long days in the open in the Vermont hills.

Few, if not members of the Cabinet are now of the President's own choosing, but the others are at his invitation. His personal appointees, besides Jardine, are Kellogg in the State Department, Willbur at the Navy and Jardine of Agriculture. Hoover, Weeks, Davis and Mellon were in the original Harding Cabinet. Work came in as Postmaster General when Will Hayes quit, and was transferred to the Interior when Senator New was made head of the Postoffice Department. The understanding is that Mellon, Davis and Hoover will remain for another four years, but Weeks is reported to be planning to leave the War Department within a few months.

Secretary Jardine's first important official act after he assumed control of the Department of Agriculture was to order a comprehensive investigation of the grain gamblers. It was only after weeks ago, that he was living in the midst of the farmers who grow wheat or the ones that suffer when the bottom drops out of wheat in Chicago. The recent fluctuations of wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade aroused Jardine's curiosity and likewise his, the next step being an official inquiry under the federal law which prohibits price manipulations. The law was written by Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, one of the men who was influential in getting Jardine into the Cabinet.

Senator Borah's definition of a "radical" is a "man who believes in the constitution of the U. S." The Idaho Senator ventured this remark during the stormy debate in the Senate over the nomination of Charles B. Warren as Attorney General. The name of "radical" having been applied with some heat by pro-Coolidge newspapers to those Republican Senators who refused to go along with the Administration in supporting Warren, Borah would not be turned however, from his determination to oppose Warren and his fiery speech opposing the Michigan man was one of the reasons for Warren's final rejection in the face of insistent White House demands for his confirmation.

The Sixty-Eighth Congress came to an end without taking any definite action on the Muscle Shoals problem aside from leaving it to the President to name a commission to study the question during the summer and to make a report to the 60th congress in December. In the meantime the Muscle Shoals power plant will be operated by the Government, but there will be no extensive manufacture of fertilizer, which will be one of the chief domestic uses of the Alabama properties when they are developed to their fullest efficiency. In defeating the so-called Underwood Bill, the Government-owned Muscle Shoals project prevented the Muscle Shoals property from going into private hands.

Salary increases granted Senators and Congressmen—from $7,500 to $10,000 a year—are expected to have the result of increasing apartment rentals in Washington, despite the fact that Congress turned down many proposals for pay increases for thousands of lesser Government employees. The rents will be boosted by the members with the expectation that the Congressmen will be easily able to pay them, and the other employees will be the ones to suffer because they will not be able to meet the new scale. The big salary increase that Congress granted, outside of its own pay, is for postal employees. More than 300,000 Post-office workers crowded in the country will profit, parcel post rates being moved up to cover the additional federal expenditure.

In some cases, a search warrant isn't necessary to hunt for liquor, and none is required anywhere to find trouble.

The learned discussions of two years ago on how long bobbed hair would remain a fad, ought to be rather amusing just now.

THE SUN WORSHIPERS

The sun is not a popular member of the heavenly fraternity around July Fourth.

But during the winter and spring, the sun is looked at as a dispenser of comfort and happiness. Travelers journey long distances to winter resorts so that they can sit on porches bathed in his rays. At home the housewife values the sunny rooms, she places her plants under his influence, and even the cat follows his light around from one side of the house to the other. People are happy on bright days with clear sunlight, and depressed when the same is obscured by clouds.

Sunlight is wonderfully healthful, and it brings good cheer. We express our regard for it by the word "sunshine," which describes the kind of personality that brings happiness. It is no wonder that ancient races worshipped the sun, as the source of all energy. We should not be too fearful of it in this country, and should get all we can of its light.

ARRESTED MENTALITY

Prof. Dearborn of Harvard University delivered in a recent lecture that intelligence tests indicate that the average adult American, when faced with situations in which he has had no special training, will show a general level of performance no better than could be expected from a child of 14 to 16.

The average man might remark that many young folks of 14 to 16 are bright on meeting new situations, and can often think quicker than the older folks. But that does not prove that their judgment and foresight are as good.

Yet the professors should know

ANOTHER DISASTER

Tragedy in the form of a tornado followed by fire, has again be-visited upon a portion of our country. Parts of our states have been ravaged with death, destruction and ruin, entailing a loss of a thousand human lives besides hundreds of millions of dollars in property losses. The entire nation joins in extending its heartfelt sympathy to the stricken communities and well deserving people. The American Red Cross, so indispensable in peace as well as war, was first to commence the work of relief and is devoting every effort to alleviate the suffering of thousands of homeless, helpless and destitute. Such a calamity brings into bold relief the humanitarian service and generality of our American people and instituta ions.

Life is full of happiness. Its joy is to be found in it and redemptive it does require determina-

BELATED CREDIT TO MR. FORD

As the result of a comprehensive inspection made by members of the staff of the Railway Age, that publication now admits that many of the policies adopted by Mr. Ford in the management of the Detroit Toledo and Ironton Railroad would well be emulated with a view to attaining similar success, by other railroad managers.

These investigations state that Sunday work has been eliminated at a strict eight-hour day, six days a week, is enforced, "red tape" has been abolished, a minimum $5 a day wage has been established, employees are utilized for any type of work requiring attention, cleanliness in person, tools, and equipment are required, and the company does not deal with the unions but eliminates all such necessities.

The Railway Age notes that expensive officials are eliminated, wages average $300 to $375 a month for $275 a month for foremen; $250 for flagmen; $6 to $8 a day for machinists. No employees are on piece-work. In their idle time they are assigned to entirely different work.
Employees are encouraged to be thrifty, and the road calls them certificates similar to stock in the company, which paid 14 per cent in 1924.

The outstanding feature is the fact that labor is supporting Mr.
Ford, and the employees prefer his methods to those which their unions have imposed upon other carriers.
Ideas that were ridiculed and denounced as "revolutionary" are now admitted to be highly practicable and helpful to all concerned.

STORY WRITING

In all the history of literature never has there been such a quantity of writing of all sorts as today.
And out of the mass of manuscripts not one in one hundred are accepted.
Of those accepted the author seldom receives more than $100 as his part of the profits from sales.

One of the leading publishers of the country said that last year his firm received 1,345 manuscripts from unknown writers, out of which they accepted but four. Another firm received in 1924, 1,304 manuscripts, of which they accepted but three. Five magazines, to whom a majority of budding writers send their stories, do not buy any of them. This group employs four men who write all they use.

It is a hard and discouraging business. The average first novel sells less than 500 copies netting the author about $100. A novel that sells 50,000 copies is unusual. There is no harder road to fame and those who take it must be prepared for disappointment again and again.
Writing is a game of chance with 99 chances of every 100 against the beginner.

A. PACIFIST

Newton D. Baker confesses that he is a pacifist—and willing to fight for his peace principles if it can be achieved in no other way. On the other hand we have numerous individuals who demand war preparedness, big standing armies and navies costing a thousand millions per year—but are most pronounced pacifists when the tax collector calls to collect for the freight.

Most of us are yet perspiring over the tribute just demanded because of past wars and wars to come, but how many of us are contributing a measly dime or an ounce of energy for the cause of peace?
Wouldn't it be good business to divide the present annual appropriation for war departments and give half to a department for the promotion of peace, to the end that the burden be some day entirely removed.

Very few things are as good in abundance as they are in moderation.

The first dollar down is always the easiest on the installment plan.

While clouds have silver linings,

THE WOODS ARE FULL OF GOOD MEN

If there ever was a time when there were more bad men than good, it is not now, and it probably never was, for nature will not allow the positive to be overcome by the negative, the good by the bad, light by darkness, heat by cold, life by death.

The tug-of-war between right and wrong grows fierce by times, but there is never a question as to the right ultimately succeeding. It may get the worst of it for a time, but not for long, and certainly not forever.

In spite of the impression that there are more bad people than good ones for all emergencies. Of course there is business for more good ones, but there is a good one for every good and sensible woman.

One reason why so many women pick up bad sticks is because they don't know good ones. They are looking for snug, smooth, pretty ones. And instead of searching in the open woods they seek for them in hot houses, pretty groves, and show places.

Instead of looking for those who have come up in the open, battled successfully for existence, and grew into hardy men, they look for the dainty, trim, natty fellows, who grow beneath protecting roofs, behind pane glass and under care of well paid nurserymen. These are nice to look upon, their fine manners are agreeable and their attentions are most pleasing.

Alongside of these the sturdier sons of nature look rough and rugged. Their strong hands are coarser, their sure feet larger, and their manner less dainty.

But, mind you, the grasp of their strong hand is more assuring, their standing firmer and their manner more determined.

There are plenty who are waiting to be found. But they are not much given to full dress, champagne suppers and petting parties.

PLANTING THE TULIP BULBS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of M. A. University of Illinois.

THE bulbs came late last fall. I had ordered them for the first week in October with the hope of getting them in early, but there was delay in shipping them from Holland, the florist said, or congestion of freight at a shipping port, or something that the railroad was responsible for. At any rate they did not come.

October passed, and no bulbs came; November was almost at an end, and I had given up all hope of the tulips. Winter was coming on, the ground would soon be frozen, and if they did not come immediately it would be useless for them to come at all, for they could not be planted.

Then one night, as I was coming from the office after dark, I stumbled up the porch steps and ran into a large box standing in front of the door. My bulbs had come. It was too late to begin work that night. I looked up the address of my boy who was to help with the work, but he had no telephone. I should have to wait until tomorrow to summon him.

I awakened early the next morning with an undefined feeling that there was something I ought to do immediately. The rising sun was shining in at my window, but there was a feeling in the air that suggested the oncoming winter. Then I remembered the tulips. Should I get up and plant them myself, or should I trust to luck and the uncertain boy? The bed felt mighty comfortable, and I have little enough time to sleep in the morning.

I remembered the legend that if you really want a thing done, the best way is to do it yourself, and I rolled out and got into my garden trousers. The ground was still in good condition, late as it was, and by working hard I got them half in by breakfast time, and I came home early from the office in the evening and finished the job. That night the weather man got busy, the thermometer fell almost to zero, and the ground froze so that there was no more planting until spring. I had finished in the nick of time.

I have often remarked that in gardening as in other things there is a definite time when a thing should be done, and if it is not done then there is likely to be regret or failure. No matter at what time you do it, it pays to do a thing at the right time. Sometimes, of course, one time may be as good as another, but usually there comes an hour when a task should be accomplished or it is never done so opportunely again.

Outside today the birds are singing, the grass is turning green, and after a long, hard winter, there is a breath of spring in the air. New life and new opportunities are springing up within us. It is the time of the resurrection, when new hope is born and a new vision comes to us.

Through my open window I can see the crocuses in bloom, the lilac buds are swelling and showing a touch of tender green, and everywhere the tulips are sticking up their heads. Clumps of them are appearing in the shrubbery, and the long rows are showing in the huda. I know it will be only a matter of a few sunny days and a few gentle showers until the garden will be a riot of color—of red and orange and violet and rose, and I shall be more than compensated for my early rising and my hours of unpleasant labor in November.

Fascinating Style Theme
Is the Modern Sweater

Thanks to the knitted outerwear fashions, we are getting entirely away from the idea that just because a sweater is useful it must be dull, prosaic and ordinary. In its lovely colorings and intriguing design the modern sweater is achieving the poetry of things stylish rather than the prose. The flattering sweater model in the picture is the sort of happy-looking affair we are reveling in these days. Irresistible charm is expressed in its every detail. The slashed collar and lower edge gives a fanciful touch and the lacing at the front opening is especially featured this season.

By the way, here's something more than interesting about knitted fashions—they are wearing stockings to match sweaters.

A red nose indicates too much sunshine, or too much moonshine.

AN APPALLING TRAGEDY

The people of America were horrified when fifty-one miners lost their lives at Sullivan, Ind. Their sympathy went out to the families of those who fell victims in the underground disaster, but that tragedy was slight compared to that which has suddenly snuffed out the lives of more than eight hundred people.

The loss of life was appalling and the loss of property staggering. The savings of a life time were wiped out in a flash in hundreds of instances. The hearts of people all over the United States were touched, and those who have the means were quick to open their purses for the unfortunate thousands who have been saddened by the loss of relatives, and friends and for the upbuilding of the communities that were devastated by wind and fire.

Such tragedies as these make more apparent the value of the Red Cross, which is organized for such emergencies and which has the confidence of the people. The Red Cross is a recovery fund and administrative relief as the agents of the American people, who never fail to respond at times of trial such as the present one.

Successes are achieved by taking hold where others let go.

Some folks are so suspicious that they won't trust anyone, except those who are too ignorant to deceive them.

WHAT IS THE GOAL IN LIFE WE ARE STRIVING FOR?

The above title for a subject of a writing for these columns this week—that I have lassoed—roped and corralled for my friends—I think will find an answering chord in all their hearts—both young and old—and therefore—be acceptable by them—for it is the one phrase from the cycle of life of old nature of our beings—that she has instilled—implanted and infused within us—in all her peculiarities of traits, has placed an instinctive inbred greed to emulate, though the best of Christians we may be. We live this inborn trait—in the child of five or six year old in his childish play with his candy—doll and tin horse—almost before he has reached years of accountability. He wants the best and biggest—though he may not care for the thing itself—it is the same with his actions—also he may be a baby by learning to walk in a nursery with other children—his old instilled nature of emulation is showing itself even so young—also he does not know why—he wishes to do a little more than his companions and overdo himself—and get a tumble in doing it too, but—he is all smiles—if "wins out." As he grows a little older this "to win" "to strive to win" "unated nature" is more pronounced—with his marbles, skates, air rifle, crocheting, fancy needle work—even in our school work, in our music, wireless telegraphic signaling, Technical or mechanical drafting, electrical engineering etc., there is sometimes a goal of a silver cup—or gold medal of Honor offered as a stimulus to the waning energies of the pupils. We see it upon the campus grounds, in the fight games of base ball, foot ball, lawn tennis, basket ball, polo, in the winter games upon the ice—in the skating and coasting contests, with a reward of merit offered. As he gets older still and as he thinks—He is a man and puts away childish things of school and its associations as things of the past—and he is now ready to enter the portals of a commercial life—and he is fresh from the collegiate atmosphere where he has breathed and saturated in technical commerce that is unknown and unheard of by the older "Bears in the game"—and he is going to "set the world on fire" and show the old "Back Numbers" how the game is played. He is a "fresh" new man, with date methods and "short technical cuts." Then we see this same old "unated peculiar" "natural law of emulation" at work here—as before, but in a more pronounced form through cultivation. This emulation is right to a certain extent and point—for it is emulation that causes and makes the inventions and progress of our times—as well as perfection. But—I would say to my young friends—boys and girls—who maybe are on the verge of entering into the portals of the realms of a commercial vocational career, which of course, we wish to make the great success of—without any failures attached. Now my dear young friends—let us commence right, and we will surely "get there" and end right and win the race, with a goal or bonus of glory and honor attached, besides a lucrative, financial and honorable vocational position in life—for the remainder of our natural days. So then, do not try to start out in life like the sample of some of our young gilded brains "know it alls" that I have tried to illustrate—you will make a miserable, humiliating failure—not only of the present vocation in the "fields of doing" to make this "waystation of life" better—for that is going to be the "required decree" from the "natural rule of our being" or pay a penalty through the rest of our natural lives—in the humiliating distrust of employers and friends generally, remember the "Good Book" which contains all the natural as well as Divine laws of human action says—"there is nothing new under the sun" if you have thought of and are doing a new, original, near and about cut in the world's business fields to the gilded, egotistical "know it alls," perhaps it was known by the old gray haired "back number" to him, and subplanted for something technically newer and better. So in selecting a vocation as a life work, choose one you are talented for—not one in the highest standing or station in the business field—but the most salary attached—but one we like and are fitted for by our natural inclinations—also humble, obscure and inferior than we like, and then, "press forward towards the mark" with all our thoughts and life-giving energies—if we have run in a contest in the past, for a bonus or goal of silver or gold—run now with even greater straining, honest efforts—not pulling down our weaker brothers or sisters ability or character in so doing—honestly thriving and doing humbly the very best we can honorably and with friendship for all—and in so doing—winning not only the boon of the honor and glory accrued in the goal of an honored and highly cultivated, lucrative financial vocational position in life—but life itself in a clean character and old age of many years.

DYERS' PENAL JOB GIVEN TO CONLEY

EX-PRISON BODY MAN TO HEAD STATE'S INSTITUTIONS, FIELDS DECLARES.

Jillson Resigns From Lakeland Office—Mrs. Riker Quits Post On Board—Silence Marks All Big Changes.

Frankfort, Ky.—The State Board of Charities and Corrections met at Frankfort with the following result: Milton W. Conley of Louisville, Ky., was elected Commissioner of Public Institutions to succeed Joseph P. Byers, whose resignation was accepted at the meeting.

Mrs. Lafor Riker of Lexington, one of the two remaining members of the old board, tendered her resignation to the Governor, which was accepted without comment. Governor Fields said he has not decided who he will appoint to succeed her.

The text of her letter follows: I hereby tender my resignation from the State Board of Charities and Corrections to take effect immediately.

Governor Fields accepted the resignation without a statement.

E. E. Shannon, of Louisville, Ky., was elected chairman of the board.

Dr. W. A. Jillson, superintendent of the Central State Asylum for the Insane, Lakeland, tendered his resignation to the board. It was passed until the next meeting, April 8.

Resignation of Dr. H. E. Nelson, head bookkeeper at the Central Office, was accepted.

Mrs. Riker would give out no statement on her reasons for resigning.

A full membership was present at the meeting of the board. Mr. Shannon, the new chairman, in a statement issued after the meeting, said:

I was much gratified to have a full membership present at the meeting. The general policy to be pursued, there was no dissent. There will be no change from that followed since the new law became effective.

Politicians who may have thought that the way would be opened for the re-introduction of the spoils system will be disappointed, for this will not occur.

The hospitals and reformatories will be conducted on strictly business principles and a non-partisan basis, and the board will see to it that progress is made.

Speaking of the selection of Mr. Conley as Commissioner of Public Institutions, Governor Fields said that "Mr. Conley is one of the best business men in Kentucky. He is the best man for the position in the State. His records will show his admirable qualities."

The new commissioner, on taking office, declared that politics will be barred from the management of the institutions under the State Board.

His statement follows: The policy I shall pursue as Commissioner of Public Institutions will be to carry out the spirit and the letter of laws relating to charitable and penal institutions of Kentucky. Politics shall have no place in these affairs. Business principles will be applied.

It shall be my aim to assist the board in every way to make the institutions fulfill the purposes for which they were established.

I was not an applicant for the position, but an intense interest in prison matters, resulting from my experience and study of the subject following my appointment as prison commissioner in 1912, has impelled me to accept.

Mr. Conley is a banker and publisher of the Big Sandy News, a Louisville newspaper. His experience in the work dates back to the administration of Governor McCreary, under whom he was a member of the Prison Commission. He never was a candidate for public office, it is said.

Mrs. Rodman is a member of the Sinking Fund Commission which approved the purchase. She was not present when the commission voted to buy the land.

Records at the office of the City Clerk showed Mrs. Rodman's lot was assessed at $4,000 last year. The Board of Supervisors raised it to $6,000. The Frank Chinn estate owns fifty front feet on Capitol Avenue. It was assessed at $2,000. The supervisors increased it $600.

EXPERIMENT STATION

URGES LESS TOBACCO

Lexington, Ky., April 3. — The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, in a statement made by O. B. Jenness, chief of the section of markets, urges growers to consider the need for a reduction in the tobacco acreage for this year.

The United States Department of Agriculture reported an intended increase of six per cent in the acreage of burley tobacco and 11 per cent in the acreage of dark fired tobacco, over last year.

"If these intentions are carried out, the tobacco market, especially in the case of burley, is likely to take an unsatisfactory turn," Mr. Jenness states. "There has been an overproduction of burley leaf in the last two or three years. Large accumulations of this type are now on hand. The business-like thing to do this season certainly would be to reduce the acreage sharply. Instead of doing so, the reports of farmers made to the federal department actually point to an increase in acreage. There is still time to change this season's plans. Over production, if persisted in, will eventually force prices to a decidedly lower level."

"The market situation for last year's crop of dark tobacco was improved considerably because of the reduced production of that type in 1924. If the intentions to increase plantings in the Clarksville and Hopkinsville district by 15 per cent and for the fire-cured types as a whole by 11 per cent are carried out, it is likely that the market outlook this fall will be much less satisfactory. It would seem much more advisable to keep the plantings of dark tobacco down to the 1924 level, and to decrease the acreage of burley than to carry out the plans indicated by the report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture."

CHARLES SANDERS

Charles Sanders, aged 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sanders, of Erlanger, who was injured in an automobile accident at Florence, Monday night died at St. Elizabeth hospital Tuesday night at 11 o'clock. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. H. Hall at the Baptist church Friday at 2 o'clock to which service the town seemed to turn out en masse, filling the church to overflowing. Scores of beautiful floral pieces were sent the bereaved family. Interment took place in Highland cemetery by the side of his brother Ralph who was "killed in action" in France.

Charlie is survived by his mother and father and several brothers and sisters. Philip Taliaferro, of Erlanger, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

AROUSING INTEREST

Are Prof. A. M. Yealey's Articles on Early History of Boone County.

Prof. A. M. Yealey's letters on the early history of Boone county are creating an interest wherever read, and especially among our foreign readers, nearly all of whom were at some time or other, residents of this county.

Prof. Yealey is receiving a number of letters himself, beside those which are received at this office. The last of these letters received here comments very interestingly upon the old railroad survey which was mentioned in a recent article. The letter is from T. J. McNeal, of Carlisle, Penn., who attended school at Ft. Pleasant when a boy. The letter is quoted in full below:

"In the article last week Early History of Boone County as to the survey for a railroad, I recollect of seeing or when they passed back of the Ft. Pleasant church where I attended school and saw the stakes down Gunpowder creek as far as Limaburg where it crossed the Burlington and Florence road. Prof. N. M. Lloyd, father of Prof. John Uri Lloyd was one of the civil engineers. The road as I recollect was called the Louisville & Covington short line railroad. My understanding was the stock was to be paid in installments and a contractor graded a few miles of the road near Louisville and brought suit against the stockholders for payments, and it was quite a sensation in our neighborhood, and at least one man had to sell some of his real estate to pay for stock that was due. I recollect several had to borrow money to give to the New York company for the worthless stock."

TUBERCULIN TEST

The following letter has been received by County Judge N. E. Riddell:

Judge N. E. Riddell
County Judge
Burlington, Ky.
My Dear Judge:

We are writing to you and other members of the Court to advise you that we have now completed the work of testing all cattle (about 98 per cent) in Boone. We have tested 1,531 herds with a total of 12,275 cattle, removing therefrom 146 animals as being tuberculous.

We want to thank you for your letter and your hearty co-operation and that of the residents of the county in assisting us in this very important work. When you consider that one tuberculous cow might afflict many little children, the importance of this activity is brought more forcibly to our attention, and to know that we found ONE HUNDRED & FORTY-SIX such animals in your county should cause us to realize more what the work means to your little folks. Of course there were a few owners who through lack of knowledge have refused the test; yet we are in hopes that they will some day see their mistake and join their more enlightened neighbors by having their cattle examined.

Thanking you, for the part you have taken in this work on behalf of the State Livestock Sanitary Board and the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, I am,

Very Respectfully,
W. F. BILES.

MAINTENANCE

Of Smaller Universities and Colleges—Very Important—Says Gen. Henry T. Allen

Georgetown, Ky., April 4.—That it is of great importance properly to maintain the smaller universities and colleges is the opinion expressed by Major General Henry T. Allen, formerly Commander in Chief of the Army of Occupation, in sending his subscription to the Century Expansion Campaign of Georgetown College, Georgetown, Ky.

General Allen, who was a student in Georgetown College from 1889 to 1891, says: "Can anyone, cognizant of the smiling surroundings with which we are so familiar and the historic buildings, though too limited, that we know so well, conceive by any stretch of the imagination of our students being guilty of such a morbidly atrocious crime as was recently committed, admitted and proved against two students of one of the large institutions of the country?"

"It seems to me that this thought should be given very grave consideration by those who are interested in that most important phase of education—the development of character. This is not an implication that the vast educational centers do not possess many great advantages by reason of their superior human and material elements; but it does suggest to my mind the wisdom of maintaining in a prosperous status, the smaller institutions situated as is our own, regardless of whether they be sectarian or otherwise."

FIRES DOING DAMAGE

That the farmers believe in "keeping the field fires burning," was thoroughly demonstrated last week when the citizens of Burlington, on three different occasions were called upon to assist in fighting fires that had gotten beyond control of the farmers who were burning brush piles. It took heroic work on the part of those present to keep the raging fires from doing considerable damage.

CIRCUIT COURT CONVENES NEXT WEEK

Next Monday will witness the convening of the annual April term of the Boone Circuit Court. Officers have been busy for the past week preparing for the session.

While it does not look as though this would be an extraordinarily lengthy session, at the same time there is to be found on the docket considerable business to be disposed of. The parties are ready for trial.

On the equity docket are 45 continued and 17 appearances cases. On the common law side there are 14 continued and 20 appearance cases, while the criminal docket contains 22 continued and six appearance cases, smallest number of several years.

Customary at this time of year to announce damage to the winter wheat crop, but the public does not worry so long as the baseball season opens on time.

Burley School Is First Step Taken To Inform Grower

INTEREST OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING RECOGNIZED IN PLAN FOR COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION IN THE BURLEY DISTRICT

Lexington, Ky., April 4.—Recognizing that co-operative marketing is a family question and that it should take account of the interest of the women and children in its work, the first step toward carrying out the policy of the board of directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association for a campaign of information in regard to the aims and purposes of co-operative marketing in general and of the Burley Association in particular was taken the past week when a community organization school was held in Lexington for three days, during which all phases of the association's business and work were discussed before the school, which was composed of officers, heads of departments and employees of the organization.

Miss Verna Elsing, head of the department of community organization, aided by a committee composed of Directors W. O. Potsman, of Indiana; Perry B. Gaines, of Carrollton, and Joseph E. Robinson, of Lancaster, planned the school, and technical and business details of the Burley Co-operative were given by President James C. Stone, Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Earley and the heads of the various departments while he general subject of co-operative marketing was discussed by Professor O. B. Jenness, of the section of markets, Kentucky College of Agriculture, and E. G. Nourse, of the Institute of Economics, Washington, D. C.

Details of community organization work were discussed and demonstrated by Harvey Edwards, of Versailles; J. Collins Gentry, of Harrodsburg; J. D. Barker, of Harrodsburg; O. W. Cleek, of Beaver Lick; Olex Doty, of Lancaster; F. H. Ellison, of Ohio; John S. Clark, of West Virginia; H. C. Pieratt, of Richmond; James Richards, of Indiana, Miss Elsing and others, the interest of the entire family in co-operative marketing being recognized in all the discussions and all reaching practical agreement.

One result of the school was that the officials, department heads and employees obtained a better understanding of their association and its aims as preliminary to the work they will do in aiding in community organization work in the district.

CRIME NEWS

Chicago church leaders recently attempted to influence Chicago newspapers to give less emphasis to crime news; in fact, to declare a holiday during the Lenten season.

Newspapers ignored the request. None commented upon it editorially. They undoubtedly felt it was within their province to publish what their readers want. The newspapers are supported by the public, they have a right to conclude that they are meeting the requirements of those who subscribe for their paper.

Censorship of the press is a dangerous thing to suggest. Freedom of the press is one of America's guarantees of liberty, just as freedom of speech is another safeguard against tyranny and dictatorship, which the writers of the constitution were wise enough to see was essential to the life of a republic.

Crime news may be overdone, but to suppress it entirely would be a greater wrong because crime represents a problem that has to be met, and it can't be dealt with intelligently and no one can form an opinion on the question with some knowledge of it.

The idea that publication of criminal acts suggests crime to others is the most used argument against publicity given crime, but it is very doubtful whether any crime could ever be traced to such a source. If this were true, it might as logically be assumed that walking through an insane asylum would cause one to become insane.

Crime publicity should teach a lesson that transgressors must suffer. The only fault with some of the larger metropolitan newspapers is that they do not give enough prominence to the conviction of criminals. The last chapter of a crime should have just as much space as the first.

SERVICE TO FARMERS

Recent changes in crop estimating and forecasting by the United States Department of Agriculture will better enable farmers to adjust the supply of farm products to the demand for them.

Forecasts of the production of some crops and livestock are now being made with great enough accuracy, it is claimed by the federal department, to indicate future price trends.

Certainly this is a service that should be welcomed by the farmer and he should not hesitate to make the best use possible of it.

The only hope of the farmer to increase the price he receives for his products is to be guided by the demand in his production. He is attempting to achieve the same end with cooperative marketing, which also seeks to regulate supply in accordance with the demand.

It has been conclusively proved that supply and demand is the thing which governs the price of things produced on the farm, and anything that will aid the farmer in fitting his program in with the demand for what he raises, will be of immense benefit to him.

APHIS

Upon inspecting several orchards in this county I have found an unusually large crop of aphids. The small plant lice as they are commonly known can be detected on the small leaves at this time. It is responsible for knotty apples.

The aphid is controlled by an application of nicotine sulphate or Black Leaf '40'. This should be applied in the prepink spray.

DOCKING AND CASTRATING

Demonstrations of docking and castrating lambs were held at L. D. Renaker's, Florence; Melvin Townsend, Union; W. T. Carpenter, Burlington, a few days since.

Many communities of Boone county are planning to dock and castrate all their lambs this year. Lambs so treated and well fed brought $1.50 premium above tops last year. This year premiums will undoubtedly be much larger.

If there are any communities which I have not arranged demonstrations in I will be glad to give same as soon as convenient. Call me at Burlington 118 for date.

Two reels on sheep production in this state will be shown at the next series of community meetings. Every farmer who plans to see these films as they are full of good materials show how Ky. lambs are grown in the Blue Grass, sold, shipped to New York and several on the tables of the largest hotels.

EARLY HISTORY OF BOONE COUNTY

(By Prof. A. M. Yealey, Florence)

We shall now endeavor to give the readers a short sketch of the minutes of the meeting of the North Bend Association of Baptist which was held on Sept. 25th, and 26th 1819, at the Dry Creek Baptist church in Campbell county.

We can locate the place where this church stood today by saying it was situated on what we call today the Turkey Foot road about one and one-half miles from the Dixie Highway. There were 19 churches represented at this meeting, six being from Boone and we will just give the facts as applied to our county.

The messengers representing the different churches were Bullittsburg, Absalom Graves, James Dickens, Robert Kirtley, Thomas Whitaker, Edward Graves, Middle Creek Moses Scott, James Hawkins, Elijah Hosner and William Garnett; Modick, James Fennell, Robert Fennell and Philip Roberts; Gunpowder William Rodgers, Isaac Carlton, Lewis Conner and Francis Craig; Sand Run William Montague and Cave Johnson; Bethel Presley Peak, David Baldwin and Wm. Harrod. The readers are no doubt familiar with the location of these churches unless it would be Bethel which is situated on the Cleek farm about one mile from Union on the Frogtown road, and has been converted into a barn. Where the rafters met at the top holes were bored through both and wooden pins were inserted in these holes to hold them in place. ("It was built for strength and durability.")

Rev. Moses Scott was chosen Moderator & Absalom Graves Clerk of the meeting and Rev. James Suggett of Elkhorn preached the introductory sermon, taking his text from John the 3rd chapter and 3rd verse. Rev. Lewis Conner delivered the Sunday sermon following the two days meeting. The records show that the next meeting was to be held at Middle Creek church on the fourth Friday of Sept., 1820. Wm. Montague of Sand Run to deliver the introductory sermon and in case of failure Absalom Graves of Bullittsburg and Rev. James Dickens, of Bullittsburg were to write the circular letter.

Boone county having only six churches out of 19 represented at this meeting, shows very plainly that during this early period her ministers had great influence, as they were called upon to perform the most arduous tasks. Moses Scott during this same period 1819 and 1820 represented Boone county in the Lower House of the General Assembly, and also wrote the circular letter of the above meeting and the writer will have a part of this letter appear in the next issue for its historical value.

The total membership of these 19 churches was 1370 and the membership of the six churches of Boone was 671, Bullittsburg being the strongest in the Association with a membership of 267.

K. I. O. LEAGUE

To Open Next Sunday at Lawrenceburg and Aurora.

Next Sunday, April 12th, will be the day on which they lift the lid of the current base ball season in the K. I. O. Semi-pro league.

Boone county fans will take an added interest in this league this year on account of the fact that Lawrenceburg, (Ind.) and Aurora, (Ind.), will each be represented by a team in the league and that they play all of their games at home.

A number of players from the north end of the county are trying out with the Lawrenceburg club and it is a practical certainty that some will make the team, and be seen in action next Sunday in the opener. A large delegation from this side of the river is expected to be on hand when the game is called.

CLOTHES AND SCHOOL

The Worcester, Mass., school committee recently received a complaint suggesting that many girls are being deprived of high school education because their parents can not afford to dress them as well as others. The letter stated that a uniform dress for girls had produced good results in New York City, Pasadena, Cal., and other schools.

It seems pathetic that a matter really so insignificant as that of dress, should stand in the way of education. The parents of well to do families ought to have democratic feeling enough so they would have their girls dress simply while at the school. Every time a school girl is dressed expensively, she puts an additional burden on the back of hard working people who are struggling to educate their children.

Corine, the little 14-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Nicholson, while playing at school last Thursday, fell and fractured a bone in her right arm.

MARKETING

Farmers are paying much more attention to marketing problems than formerly. According to O. B. Jenness, Chief Section of Markets, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, this is a natural development. He calls attention to the fact that in the early days of this country, the farms were largely self-sufficient. Most of the population lived on farms, or in small towns near farms. The home farm or nearby farms supplied most of the food requirements. Much of the clothing also was made in the home. The consumers' wants were fewer and simpler than those of today.

"The extension of agriculture to all parts of the country, the development of transportation, the expansion of manufacturing, the growth of cities and the greater variety of consumers' demands, have brought a vast change in the methods and problems of marketing," Mr. Jenness said. "The marketing system is called upon to render much more service than in pioneer days. Naturally the marketing costs are greater than they were at that time. The farmer no longer looks upon his farm merely as a place to produce food himself and nearby consumers. His business is now a commercial undertaking. He is dependent upon other industries and other farming regions for his markets and supplies. Under such circumstances it has become of increasing importance to him that he keep closely in touch with market conditions and plan his farming program on the basis of market requirements."

"While the unbalanced situation following the war has served to focus attention upon the marketing side of the farmers' problem, this is not merely a temporary question. It will always be important for the farmer to study marketing carefully, and to pay close attention to the future outlook in planning his production. Emphasis will continue to be placed upon the need for improved methods of distributing products."

LIME CRUSHER

The State Lime Crusher will be here next week and will start operation on Gunpowder near the Union pike. We are glad to have the crusher here as it will make lime possible with our own stone.

The crusher was promised this county several years ago. It is just getting here. Mr. Clell Coleman writes us he is sorry for this delay but hopes that we will make good use of it while here as several other counties are anxious to get the crusher as soon as possible. I have at hand quite a list of men who want to use the crusher. Others who want to use it should get in touch with me in the near future.

Pile your rock and lime your soil at the cheapest possible rates. The state sends the crusher here for demonstration purposes, so we will have to use it while here.

GOOD MEETING

Several reports were made which showed the organization to be alive and working. Several new matters were brought up and discussed and committees were appointed to make investigations and report at next meeting.

This organization has the interest of the school at heart and means business. So far 58 names of progressive men and women have been signed to a note guaranteeing one fourth of the funds necessary to build the addition contemplated to the Boone County High School. This shows that anything in reason can be done in a community if the people of that community want it and are willing to put their shoulder to the wheel and push.

President appointed the following men to compose a building committee to act as an advisory committee with the School Board, E. C. Gaines, M. A. Yelton, W. Lee Cropper, F. H. Rouse and A. B. Renaker.

The cast playing, "Borrowed Money" have been invited to Florence to present their play and they are considering accepting the invitation. If they decide to go an arrangement will probably be made with the Odd Fellows Lodge whereby the Lodge will receive 25 per cent. of the net proceeds of the door receipts which is the same arrangement made with Dry Ridge and Petersburg where this play has been presented to large crowds recently by the Burlington cast.

Watch the Recorder for further announcements.

ANNOUNCEMENT
 T. E. McHenry of Florence, is now associated with the firm of HAWKINS & CHAMBERLAIN, REAL ESTATE AGENTS, 508 Madison Ave. Covington, Ky. He will be pleased to serve any of his Boone County friends who desire to buy or sell real estate.

Mrs. N. Chadwick of Madison, Indiana, and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Kavanaugh of St. Paul, Minn., are the guests of their sister, Mrs. Thomas Hensley.

A very small crowd attended court Monday. Nothing like the crowds that attended April court in years gone by—when there was hardly room to park the horses and buggies.

More ground has been plowed in the county at this time, than for several years. With a favorable season, indications point to bumper crops being raised. Some growers report tobacco plants being up and doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Gaines and daughter Helen Ruth, after a five month's sojourn at St. Petersburg, Fla., returned home on Tuesday of last week. They are delighted with their stay in the State of Sunshine and Flowers. They motored through.

The local churches are preparing Easter programs for next Sunday. At the Sunday school hour there will be a special service at the M. E. church, while there will be a musical program at the Baptist church in conjunction with the regular morning service.

Only three fine horses on the street Monday, as follows: Norris & Gaines' fine saddle stallion, Bracken Chief; W. B. Arnold's harness stallion, Hal McGregor and Smith Bros. draft stallion, Beauty—this horse is a beautiful dapple gray and weighs 1960 pounds.

WILL ROGERS

Another 'Bull' Durham advertisement by Will Rogers. Definite follow-up and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

EVERYWHERE you go every body is figuring out a Cross Word Puzzle. Nobody is working or even exercising. America will lose the next War but win the next Puzzle Contest. It's the greatest craze that hit this country since prohibition. People say to me, "Why Will, you don't understand, it is an Education, it learns you more ways to say one word." If you know one way to say a word, what do you need to know any more for? Nobody is going to give you anything for nothing, I don't care how many ways you ask for it. Our nation has never been short on words. We might lack ideas sometime but never words. This puzzle has done one thing, it has learned us which is Horizontal and which is Vertical. But a Cross Word Puzzle is not new. Railroad Time Tables have been out for years. Smoke 'Bull' Durham while working one, that is, if you want to, if you don't, why smoke wherever you want to.

EASTER

It is in the Springtime when life seems most worth living.

All nature is reviving, is being born again.

The singing of the birds, the blooming of the flowers, the awakening of the trees—on every hand there are signs of life that delight and inspire.

It is at this joyous time that the Easter season comes. Easter day is in perfect harmony with this period. It represents the spirit of hope, the promise of life. Without this promise of a greater, broader life, the joy of living would be destroyed.

Everywhere the significance of the anniversary of the assurance of a life to come is understood, there is rejoicing.

In gratitude for the promise, we express our praise in inspired song, in pageantry, and in offerings of Nature's choicest gifts, the flowers which in themselves typify a new birth—a resurrection.

Nature proclaims the reasonableness of the Christian's belief in the life of new life.

Naturally, the Christian does not depend upon Nature to assure him. When Jesus of Nazareth, crucified to appease an angry mob, broke the bonds of death and became, "the first fruits of them that slept." He flooded the gates of eternity with a light that forever dissolved the mystery of death.

Easter, the anniversary of the supreme victory of Time, with its message of hope for every soul, illumines the pathway into the future, enabling men to look across the grave, and know that they are going on. Today, we know that this is only the beginning. Without hope and the courage this day inspires, life would not be worth the living.

Furnishing Good Copy.

The Sturgis News-Democrat is of the opinion that The Courier-Journal should give Governor Fields a bonus for furnishing so much copy.

In last week's issue the following editorial discusses the Louisville paper's attitude toward the Governor:

"If there ever was a man who should be on the pay roll of Kentucky's national newspaper, and isn't that man is Governor William J. Fields. When Fields buys a white cat (L. C. Fournoy, Sr., speaking), the Courier-Journal is given opportunity to write two columns explaining why it should have been a black one; should the chief executive step out in a frock coat the incident would be worth a two-column item; head over the article explaining why he should have donned his bathing suit; when he wears his slippers, the old lady knocks the ashes from her pipe and declares for a Gloria Swanson; when he appoints a physician to call on the sick, the national newspaper (it says so itself) raves because the appointee should have been a blacksmith; in short Fields supplies about all the copy the old lady has used since his inauguration as governor of the commonwealth.

"And if the Courier-Journal knew how people are laughing at it and ridiculing it for its childish attitude because Fields is man enough to stand on his own feet, it would tighten up its old gray bonnet, light the pipe, and get in the corner behind the cook stove where it belongs."

THRIFTY COUNTRY WOMEN

A recent survey of 4138 women in 16 states, conducted by the American Home Economics Association, showed that 3413 of them still like to do the family sewing. Most of the women preferred to make their own and their children's lighter garments. More than half of them made their own little clothes for their daughters, and Father's trousers are made over for the boys.

Thus the fine old spirit of thrifty use of materials still prevails in these country homes, and they can get along on a level of expense far below what is necessary among the people who have to buy everything new and can not use needles or sewing machines. This practical ability carries many families in this country by difficult periods in comparative comfort.

LIVING BY EXAMPLE

Much has been said and equally as much written about the supposed degeneracy of the younger generation of the present day.

In every age the same complaint has been made by the older against the younger generation. It seems to be a law of life.

In this day we hear much of the profligacy of youth. And we are very apt to judge the many by the misdeeds of the few.

Most of us, in passing judgment, forget that young people are imitators—nothing more. They do largely the things that they have seen their elders do.

As one high school boy so aptly puts it, "When I see one of our leading citizens take a corner on three wheels, I feel that I have a right to do the same thing, and I want to try it with Dad's car."

The boys and girls don't realize their lack of experience. They grow up quickly, in their own estimation, as all parents know, and they feel they should have privileges that come with maturity.

There is no escaping the responsibility that goes with mature years.

No one can reasonably expect the imitators to rise above the level on which the imitated live.

THE UNIVERSALITY OF THE NEWSPAPER

It is a wonderful thing in American journalistic development that the 16,000 newspapers published in this country penetrate almost every home.

There was a time within the memory of our grandparents anyway, when the great majority of people thought themselves lucky to get that.

In these times, the average family has a considerable number of newspapers which cover the local and general field and one's personal occupation and interests. These newspapers furnish a wonderful means of communication, by which ideas can be given to the people.

The public can thereby be incited to take an interest in community movements. And this universality of the newspaper, offering its ideas to every person who can read, gives the business man a great chance to sell his products to the masses.

The majority of business men can not afford to hire salesmen to go around from house to house. Even if they did, they would usually find the men away from home, and the women too busy to listen.

But they can put the statements that they wish to get over, into advertising space in a newspaper, and reach the masses very thoroughly.

When a person buys a newspaper he values it enough so he is going to keep pretty close watch of its contents, and he will spend a good part of the time that is devoted to that newspaper in reading the business notices. This newspaper development provides a wonderful opportunity to the business men of Boone county to let the people know about their goods and prices, at a very low cost for publicity, so that this essential part of the selling expense is only one of the lesser expenses of business, from which no enterprising man should draw back.

RESTLESS GIRLS

It will surprise many of us here in Boone county to read that 65,000 girls disappear annually in the U. S. without leaving a trace. Almost every town has discontented girls who cherish visionary plans for a more agreeable future.

Some will strike off in an aimless way for some distant city, hoping to get some kind of pleasant work and be independent of supervision. Many of them will try some adventurous course, and finding their hopes disappointed and being too proud to come back home, will earn their support in nameless ways.

A discontented girl is a peril to herself and her family. Girls' clubs and similar societies accomplish wonders for these young folks who need a little more scope for activity. Given that, the chance that they will ever turn up among the great city's wrecks becomes slight.

THE SONG OF THE PLOUGH-MAN

In the simple old times the husky workers on the farms were often heard to sing as they grasped the plow handles in the bright spring sunshine from a keen joy in muscular activity. But those forms of manual work are not so popular in these times. If you hear any sound coming from the mouth of the plowman, it is as likely to be a grumbling complaint with his tollsome labors, in spite of the fact that modern machinery has lightened his job in a great many cases.

The people who perform these hard manual tasks of farming, say that they look very poetic to the literary fellow, who should come out and work with the plowman for a time, and see how much he felt like singing.

Yet the countryman of the future who is both physically vigorous and mentally alert, is going to fare pretty well, and may feel much like singing as he follows who coops him like up in a stuffy building.

April is said by the poets to be the month of tears, and the householder will usually say so after figuring up his accounts for the winter.

CHILD HEALTH TALKS

(By Dr. McF Jennings)

WHAT IS MAY DAY?

A message has gone forth asking that on May Day the nation turn aside momentarily from the absorption of other affairs to that first of all corners—its children. May Day marks the joyous celebration of a new season. Fitly it is chosen as a day to celebrate a new hope, which has carry on from season to season from year to year in a steady chain of progress—the hope of insuring to the children of this country their birthright of health. The one great need is that attention shall focus upon the rights of children to health, and ways and means of securing those rights. May Day is everybody's day and everybody's opportunity to stress child health.

No one in this country who has at heart the good of children can well be spared from sharing in this celebration. Each effort, no matter how small, linked to other efforts, will help to make the chain strong. There have been many national days, but usually they have been days of backward looking, of memorializing what has been. May Day is a day of looking forward, of memorializing what shall be. It is a defense day to which no one in the land can object, the defense of the rights of children, upon whom sound of body and clear of vision, rest the future. Let us make it a day that shall memorialize in accomplishments which will leave their stamp upon the future, helping to put the race onward and upward.

In every county in the State Chairmen have been appointed to carry out the Child Health Day program as outlined by the Bureau of Child Health. Schools will have health parades and health plays shop windows will be decorated with articles pertaining to childhood. Women's and Men's Clubs will have speakers on child health during May week and groups will gather to listen to the radio program sent out on May Day afternoon by the Louisville WHAS Broadcasting Station. Better Health for apparently normal children will be the slogan for Child health week.

Anna Moriah Ramey Dead

Mrs. Anna Moriah Ramey, widow of John N. Ramey, passed away at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. P. Gardner, Erlanger Saturday, at the age of 83 years. The remains were forwarded to Stringtown, Ky., on Tuesday morning where services were held at the Christian church. Interment being in the local cemetery. Mrs. Ramey was born and reared in Grant county residing there until just five months before her death when she came to make her home with her sister, Mrs. Gardner.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Philip Taliaferro.

Mrs. Cora Ethel West

Mrs. Cora Ethel West, wife of Clarence J. West and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Young, passed away at her home in Erlanger last Thursday morning after a short illness of lobar pneumonia. Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Stambaugh, assisted by Revs. Runyan and H. at the Christian church Saturday morning at 11 o'clock in the presence of a host of relatives and friends, interment in Highland cemetery.

Mrs. West is survived by her husband, three children, father and mother, four sisters and two brothers.

CHILDREN'S GARDENS

School gardens and little patches for civic and cultural life in the back yard, have been a popular feature of recent years. A boy who plants and cultivates a little plot of his own has taken one good step toward a useful career. He has advanced a long way from the status of the boys of former years, so many of whom used to occupy their spare time in curbside loafing or in annoying the neighbors with mischievous pranks.

A boy who has learned the lessons that garden work teaches, will not probably be the one who is expected to achieve fortune by picking up a purse in the road, or getting the benefit of other undeserved strokes of luck.

But if a youngster starts a garden his people should insist that he finish the job, unless of course circumstances make it impossible. If he starts such an enterprise and then neglects and lets the garden grow up in burdock leaves or in annoying the neighbors with mischievous pranks.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RE-CORDER

Washington has calmed down again. The members of Congress have gone "back home" and the remaining officials have turned their minds to local questions. The traffic problem, in particular, is causing much interest here, since Mr. M. O. Eldridge has been made Director of Traffic Washington, is especially in need of stringent traffic rules because of the "wheel like" plan of the city. This plan, which was introduced by L'Enfant in the days of Geo. Washington, offers other opportunities to make the city beautiful, because of the numerous parks and circles but it also makes the traffic cop's life hard. It is rumored that if Eldridge succeeds in untangling the traffic problem, he will be rewarded with a position "on the hill."

March seems to be the month for birthdays of celebrities. Wm. Jennings Bryan, with his "Brother Charles" celebrated his birthday here last week, in his usual way, by sitting the year out. The birthday was attended by many Democrats and one Republican, Vice President Charles Daves, who is a good friend of the former Democratic Presidential candidate, and who seemed to be on the most friendly terms with his political rival in the recent campaign, "Brother Charles." The other important birthday in the last week was Secretary Mellon's. His observance of it, however, differed from Mr. Bryan's in that Mr. Mellon remained at his desk the entire day. Mr. Mellon is seventy years old.

The McCarll test of much interest among the constitutionalists here. The Controller General, is apparently, one government official whom none but the United States Congress can dislodge from his position. His appointment in 1921 by President Harding was for fifteen years, and unless the Congress impeaches him, or the Supreme Court decides otherwise, McCarll will continue to be Controller General until 1936. The decision of the Supreme Court is awaited anxiously not only by all official Washington, but also by many prominent lawyers who are interested in the constitutional phase relating to the powers of a president.

One of the supreme spring days last week, which witnessed the flowering of the Cherry Blossoms around the Speedway, and the blossoming of the Dogwood trees in Rock Creek Park, witnessed also the first appearance of "Princess Alice" Longworth since her return to Washington. Her husband was the host of a handsome Packard, in front of her residence, and created no end of excitement in "M" Street. "Paulina" was not with her. It was probably her nap time.

One of the first duties of the new Attorney General, John Garibaldi Sargent, will be to aid the veterans of the World War. It is alleged that Public Printer George Carter has violated the law in discharging from the Government Bureau of Engraving and Printing, officers and veterans who have received honorable discharges from the Army, and whose work in the Department is rated "good." It is pointed out, however, that the general "weeding out" in the government departments is a direct result of Coolidge's economy plan, and is doing for him much popular support not only among the veterans involved in this particular case, but with the government employees of all the departments.

The recess appointment of Woodlock as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which Coolidge made in defiance of the Senate, presents a striking similarity to the recent case of Warren whom the Senate refused to confirm as Attorney General. These two cases in which the Senators even of the "Old Guard" refused to back the President seems to point to another fruitless session of Congress when it convenes again next December. The cooperation between the Executive and Legislative branches of the Government, for which President Coolidge has so strongly pleaded, appears to be lacking still.

THE OLD FASHIONED HOME

It is announced that the General Federation of Women's Clubs is to promote a movement to restore the old fashioned home.

It might be hard to define what the old fashioned home was. In many of them there was little spirit of culture. Many of them were singularly lacking in books and opportunities for enjoyment. Their inmates followed conventional habits. Homes of that type would not fit these times. Probably the thing about the old fashioned home that will seem most desirable of reproduction, would be its attractiveness as a center of activity. That home filled a bigger place in the minds of the people of those days. People remained in their homes more, used them more freely for recreation. That may not be because of any particular principle, but because there was less going on elsewhere.

The young people sat down at home to play high low jack and checkers, primarily because they knew of no other way to fill their time. With automobiles and movie shows and other interests now, it is hard to reproduce the old conditions.

The children would come up better if they could be induced to make more use of their homes. There is no place where they are so secure from deterioration. There was never a time when the parents would want juvenile literature or music, their parents would do almost anything for them.

If the children of coming years quiet down a little from their present assertiveness, they may realize that their homes can be made a fine center of culture and enjoyment. Perhaps they will get tired of aimless roving, and decide that the homes can again be made throbbing centers of activities among congenial circles.

THE LONGING FOR THE COUNTRY

If you asked 100 men who work in city occupations, if they would not like to have homes in the country, it seems likely that 75 per cent of them would say that they wish they could do so. This longing of city people for rural homes is a very common thing.

Many more of them would move out into the country, were it not for one thing, that they realize that it might not be prudent for them to make the change at their ages. They realize that a man who has worked many years in some city occupation may not stand so much chance of doing well in the country as if he had started in there at an earlier period.

Much is said about the "back to the land" movement. Middle aged and elderly men buy farms and move out into the country, sick of the hurry and rush of city conditions. Some of them do quite well, but for many of course it is an unsatisfactory change at that point in their career. It is hard for a man who has worked in an office for many years, to adjust himself to the muscular effort needed for farm work, or to learn all at once the information he would have picked up gradually if he had started in young. Yet the men who draw back from such a move for very practical reasons, would often admit that they would have done better if they had originally founded their homes in country communities. They have come to realize that for the average family city occupations are unsatisfactory, that the country gives a better chance for substantial happiness and independence.

Country young people who have the longing for the city, should talk with their elderly friends who have city homes and find out if these folks think they would gain anything by migrating. They would be warned in the majority of cases that they would better stay right where they are.

Many of the old timers think that what this country needs is more listeners.

SAYS LABOR IS NOT HIGH

Secretary of Labor Davis points out the interesting fact that the value over and above raw material cost in the manufacturing plants of the United States in 1923 was $25,353,151,000 an increase of 41.1 per cent, as compared with 1921, whereas the number of wage workers increased by 26.2 per cent, and the amount of wages paid increased 84 per cent. This brings us to the conclusion that labor is becoming more and more efficient and that the wages of labor are not, taking the country as a whole and everything into consideration, absorbing an unfair share of the country's increasing prosperity.

A youthful visitor says a horse is more hazardous than a plane. But perhaps he didn't live in the horse age.

When family influence is necessary to get a boy's job, it's evidence enough that he's a poor risk to add to the payroll.

The people of the United States own about 90 per cent of the automobiles, which may account for the large percentage of hospitals on this side of the water.

THREE AGES OF CHILDHOOD

As a result of 40 years of study by several men intensely interested in child welfare, their consensus of opinion is that the child has three periods of rapid growth and three of retarded growth; that the period from 9 to 13 is a period of very little gain in height or weight. Mentally he has reached a stage where schooling is of less value per year than at any other time in his school life. He will not study much in or out of school, but it is the best time to learn a trade or acquire skill.

It is asserted that this is the safest time in a child's life for him to work in factories, mills or on the farm. Above all it is a time that he should be employed, else he will join a gang and spend his time in playing robbers' roost or using a bow and arrow or bow-gun, if in the country, or a real gun, if he can get one, in the city. It is the cave-digging, truant, migratory period. From 14 to 18, varying according to sex and maturity, the child should have the choicest care. He generally gets the least. All authorities agree that during this period the child develops natural tendencies that can be molded—it is the time to educate.

Unquestionably every man and woman desires that the child shall have not only a square deal but every advantage that scientific research may suggest. The trouble seems to be that the people lack the latter information.

In almost every community in the land resides the individual who has a sure remedy for most human ills because it cured their grandfather or some other relative. In Yonkers, New York, recently, a millionaire was afflicted with hiccoughs and he could get no relief. A stranger went to the home and induced the family to try this remedy: "Stop each ear with a finger. Press firmly. Have some one put a glass of water to the mouth, and drink." It was tried and the hiccoughs stopped. The suggestion is passed on for what it is worth.

Men of science assert that an early spring is always accompanied by tornadoes. They claim that tornadoes are caused by the meeting of warm winds from the South with cold winds from the North, producing an atmospheric congestion that has to be relieved in some manner. It is also a well defined fact that the heavy forests quickly snuff out tornadoes. Scientists cannot tell when they are liable to occur, neither can they tell much about the direction or course of their travel. They are and will continue to be unexpected and unwelcome visitors.

THE MAKING OF CITIZENS

Thousands of aliens are admitted to citizenship by the courts of this nation but as a rule these new citizens are turned loose and thereafter ignored forced to work out their own ideas and ideals of citizenship. In Franklin Venango County, Pennsylvania, one of the wealthiest cities of its size in the U. S. the citizens held a public meeting at the House. After each naturalization court, at which time an appropriate and impressive program is presented and the right hand of fellowship is extended to the new member of our national community. This plan not only appeals to the common sense and patriotism of native Americans, but inspires the new citizens with a better idea of the importance of the gift that has been granted him, and makes him feel that he is really one of us.

Plenty of chances to invest money profitably in country districts, but some prefer hazardous investments that they know nothing about and consequently lose their savings. Claimed the farmer has to work long hours, but most people are willing to, if they can eventually work for themselves rather than for some other fellow.

Many country towns lack people who will do active work for public causes, but plenty are willing to sit around and tell what should be done.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE KENTUCKY JOCKEY CLUB

[From The Lexington Herald]

THE Kentucky Jockey Club is incorporated under the laws of Kentucky, its business being authorized by an act of the state legislature, its object being primarily the improvement of the breed of thoroughbreds. In order to accomplish this it became necessary to have a centralization of the government of the various race tracks of importance in the state, and to add materially to the stakes and purses offered each year.

The Jockey Club was founded in 1918 and purchased the three race courses, Churchill Downs at Louisville, Latonia at Covington, and the Kentucky Association at Lexington. The latter track several years ago was sold to a company made up of leading business men of Lexington.

DIRECTORS OF THE JOCKEY CLUB

The officers and directors of the Kentucky Jockey Club are as follows:

Johnson N. Camden, President
M. J. Winn, Vice-President and General Manager
Sherman Goodpaster, Secretary and Treasurer

Board of Directors

J. N. Camden, Versailles, Ky.
Former United States Senator and one of the largest land owners and breeders of thoroughbred horses and cattle in Kentucky.

M. J. Winn, Covington, Ky.
Vice-President and General Manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club and for thirty years one of the leading turf officials in America.

James B. Brown, Louisville, Ky.
President of the National Bank of Kentucky.

Lawrence Jones, Louisville, Ky.
Manufacturer and head of many large business enterprises.

Andrew Vennie, Louisville, Ky.
Resident Manager of Churchill Downs.

Maurice J. Galvin, Covington, Ky.
Attorney-at-Law.

George J. Long, Louisville, Ky.
President Inter-State Water Co. and owner of Bashford Manor Stud Farm.

Baylor Hickman, Louisville, Ky.
President of the Ewald Iron Co.

J. Graham Brown, Louisville, Ky.
President of the W. P. Brown & Sons Lumber Co. and owner of the Brown Hotel.

Samuel A. Culbertson, Louisville, Ky.
Capitalist and largely interested in many Kentucky enterprises.

Henning Chambers, Louisville, Ky.
President of Henning Chambers & Co., Brokers, and one of Louisville's most successful business men.

A. B. Hancock, Paris, Ky.
One of the principal breeders of thoroughbreds in America and owner of Claiborne and Ellerslie Stud Farms.

James T. Clark, Louisville, Ky.
Successful business man and Manager of the Ohio Falls Iron Co. of New Albany, Indiana.

HIGHEST TYPE OF CITIZENS

These officers and directors represent the highest type of citizenship in the State, as men of affairs, whose action in forming the organization was to save racing in Kentucky and to place the sport on the highest plane possible. This has been done to a greater degree than could have been anticipated, even by the most optimistic, and the State of Kentucky leads all others in the Union not only in the character of the sport, but in the amount of money offered in stakes and purses.

The stockholders of the Kentucky Jockey Club are among the best known citizens of Kentucky, who have invested in an enterprise, the object of which is a legitimate one, and the security of which is guaranteed by an Act of the General Assembly. Among the stockholders are men of the various professions, breeders of thoroughbreds, bankers and merchants who believe in the future of the sport of racing and whose prime object is to make the State a leader in one of the most glorious sports engaged in by mankind.

INCREASED VALUE OF THOROUGHBREDS

The Kentucky Jockey Club was founded, not for selfish motives, but with the purpose of maintaining the thoroughbred industry, one of the most important in the State, and which has flourished for considerable more than a century. It is an institution that furnishes the means by which racing is made profitable to the owners of horses, and in so doing it has stabilized the market value for thoroughbreds that could have been accomplished by no other means.

Before the formation of the Kentucky Jockey Club, the race tracks in this State each year gave in stakes and purses an average of $440,000. During the year 1924 there was distributed at Latonia and Churchill Downs a total of $1,191,000. Purses ranging from $1,000 to $1,800, with handicaps of $2,000, and with stakes ranging from $5,000 to $50,000, have taken the place of the small prizes that were the rule but a few years ago, before the Kentucky Jockey Club came into being. The Kentucky Association at Lexington distributed last season $156,593, and as this organization is no longer controlled by the Jockey Club, although it owes its present position to that organization, the amount offered by it becomes a separate item.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS

The Kentucky Jockey Club is organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky and conducts its race meetings under the authority and direction of the State Racing Commission. Its Officers, Directors and employees are all Kentuckians and ninety-nine per cent of the stock of the Corporation is owned in Kentucky.

The Kentucky Jockey Club is one of the biggest tax-payers in Kentucky. In 1924 it paid into the State, County and City Treasuries $322,517.00. This amount is equivalent to the State taxes collected on over a hundred million dollars worth of farm lands and town lots, to be accurate—$107,506,000.

The Kentucky Jockey Club paid out in stakes and purses in 1924 the sum of $1,191,000, the greater part of which was won by horses bred or owned in Kentucky.

When the Kentucky Jockey Club was organized the Kentucky Derby was worth $9,000 to the winner. The Kentucky Jockey Club now adds $50,000 to the Derby and the fame of this classic race, which celebrates its fifty-first anniversary on May 16th, is known around the world. More than 60,000 people from all parts of the United States—among them the leaders in the business, professional and social life of America—gathered at Churchill Downs last year and saw Black Gold, bred in Kentucky and owned by a widow, win the Derby.

Since the organization of the Kentucky Jockey Club the value of Kentucky thoroughbreds and the value of farm lands where thoroughbreds are raised have more than doubled in value.

Wherever a good horse is known and loved—thoroughbred, trotter, pacer or saddle horse—Kentucky is famous in every land as a nursery where equine speed, courage, endurance and beauty can be found in perfection.

DERBY WORTH MORE THAN $50,000

During the decade prior to the control of the Kentucky Jockey Club over racing in this State, the Kentucky Derby, one of the great classics of this country, had a value much less than is now guaranteed to the winner. Up to and including 1914, the largest sum credited to the winner was $9,125. During the year following the Jockey Club's control, the Derby was worth $20,825, and for the last three years, its value has been more than $50,000 to the winner. Every stake offered at Churchill Downs and Latonia has increased in value in proportion, as for example, the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes for 2-year-olds was last year worth more than $26,000 to the winner. The Oaks, one of the important events of the turf, has been increased from $1,950 in 1913, to $10,160 in 1924. The Kentucky Special, which has been decided twice at Latonia, was worth to Chacolet $49,350.

The Latonia Derby, one of the fixed events in Kentucky racing and second only in importance to the race decided each year in the spring at Churchill Downs, has been increased under the Jockey Club's control, from $9,925 in 1918 to $25,000, the amount credited to the winner in 1924.

The stakes for 2-year-olds all carry an added value of at least $5,000, while several, including those already mentioned, as well as the Cincinnati Trophy, given at Latonia, are today worth several times the amounts offered in years gone by.

A RICH ARRAY OF STAKES

Some idea can be had of the scope of racing under the jurisdiction of the Jockey Club, from the announcement of the Spring stakes at Churchill Downs and Latonia for the season of 1925. At the first named meeting, the Kentucky Derby for 3-year-olds at one and one-quarter miles carries an added value of $50,000; the Kentucky Oaks for 3-year-old fillies at one and one-eighth miles, $10,000; the Clark Handicap for 3-year-olds and upward at one and one-sixteenth miles, $10,000; the Grainger Memorial Handicap at one and one-quarter miles for 3-year-olds and upward, $10,000; the Debutante and Bashford Manor Stakes for fillies and colts, respectively, have an added value of $5,000 each.

At Latonia, $25,000 is added to the Derby for 3-year-olds at one and one-half miles; $10,000 each to the Latonia Oaks and Independence Handicap; $10,000 to the Queen City Handicap for 2-year-olds at one mile and $5,000 each to the Inaugural Handicap, the Clipsetta and Harold Stakes, the Quickstep, Enquirer Handicap and the Cincinnati Trophy, or a total of $175,000 added to 16 stakes for the two spring meetings. At Latonia, the purses will average $1,500, while at Churchill Downs, $1,200 will be the rule.

The stakes named above closed on Saturday, February 21, and the entries included nominations from practically every owner throughout the United States. A majority of the leading racing stables in the East are represented, and their owners will be found as eager to capture one of the rich prizes in Kentucky as any of the important events given in New York or Maryland.

A TRIBUTE TO COL. WINN

Although the history of the Kentucky Derby is in reality the history of racing in Kentucky since 1875, it is the Kentucky Jockey Club that has made this event the most coveted prize on this continent, and it is also true that this organization, through the efficiency of its Vice-President and General Manager, Matt J. Winn, has been largely responsible for the importance that is attached to international contests. His experience covers a wide range, he having conducted race meetings in winter and in summer, in various sections of the country, and in no instance, has there been recorded a failure.

Since Mr. Winn assumed control of the Jockey Club, he has not only redeemed the sport from the evil ways into which it was about to fall, but has placed the sport in Kentucky on a higher plane than is the case in any state in the Union. He has made the Kentucky Derby the classic of the American turf, he has attracted tens of thousands of visitors to Churchill Downs, has cared for the comfort of every one of these, has furnished a program that is not surpassed on any race course in the world. It is true that he is fortunate in the character of his board of directors and in the co-operation of the president of the Kentucky Jockey Club, Senator Johnson N. Camden, for without this co-operation it would have been impossible for him to have carried into effect his plans for the betterment of racing, and the process by which he has been enabled to offer the richest prizes in America. Mr. Winn for many years has been the most successful manager of race courses in this or any other country.

KENTUCKY JOCKEY CLUB SAVES RACING

The Kentucky Jockey Club, by its liberality, its expenditure of large sums of money in stakes and purses, has so materially added to the earning capacity of the thoroughbred that the market value of yearlings and horses in training has been largely increased during the past decade. Stallions and broodmares which realized but a few hundreds of dollars before the advent of the Jockey Club, today bring, when offered at public auction, thousands of dollars, an increase of several hundred per cent.

Had it not been for the vision of the men who are responsible for the existence of this organization, racing in Kentucky would have sunk to so low a level that it could not have been classed as a sport. But for the Kentucky Jockey Club, the traditions of the early days of racing in which it was a sport for gentlemen, would have been lost, and instead racing would be controlled by self-seekers, by men whose only object was to make as much money as possible for themselves, regardless of the interests of the public and the owners of racing stables.

Never in the history of the breeding industry has there been seen such prosperity as now exists. Prior to 1918 yearling sales, both in Kentucky and in New York state, realized hundreds where now thousands are returned to the breeders. That racing is the backbone of the breeding industry is known to all, that without it, thoroughbreds of even the most royal lineage would be practically worthless. It is because of this fact that the breeders throughout the country are under lasting obligation to the Kentucky Jockey Club, for while other organizations of like nature have been most liberal in their offerings, it is to the Kentucky institution that the greatest credit must be given, for it was the pioneer of all the racing associations to materially increase the value of their stakes and purses.

THE JOCKEY CLUB'S HONORABLE RECORD

There is not a single blot on the escutcheon of the Kentucky Jockey Club. Its skirts have been clean, its course straightforward and its aims and ambitions honorable to a degree.

During the period in which the Kentucky Jockey Club has controlled the destinies of racing in Kentucky, it has by its precept and example established a precedent by which all other tracks in the state have been guided, for while it is true that its meetings are given under the jurisdiction of the Kentucky State Racing Commission, it is the master of its own destiny, it controls its own affairs, shapes its own course and is a leader that others may follow.

By closing the Douglas Park track, the Jockey Club made it possible for Churchill Downs to become what it now is, one of the most beautiful courses in the world, and one, the appointments of which, are so complete that even on Derby Day, when an attendance of sixty thousand people visit the track to witness the Derby, there is practically no congestion, absolutely no disorder and the spectators are one and all as comfortable as it is possible for them to be under the circumstances.

Each year, the Kentucky Jockey Club is the host to the largest concourse of people gathered together at any track in the United States, the most representative audience before which a stirring contest is displayed. Men and women from every state in the union, visitors from abroad gather at Churchill Downs to witness the running of the Blue Riband of the American turf, and depart for their homes with nothing but praise for the liberality of the Kentucky Jockey Club and the efficiency, unfailing courtesy and hospitality, of its members.

Milliners Announce a Flower Season

To attend a spring and summer millinery opening display is as inspirational as going to a flower show. Surely, it is a flower season for chapeaux. Joyous colors, as only flowers can express, are the loveliness of the hat, or big, most impartially, this season.

There are two direct flower-trimming tendencies, one uses large flowers in natural mass effects, especially roses; the other exploits tiny flowers worked with painstaking precision into conventional flat effects and arresting motifs.

Breathing the freshness of spring are the violet-covered crowns which feature many a picturesque cloche. As the picture here shows, a single large rose is the "crowning glory" to this violet symphony. Many flower trimmings aspire to reach the peak of the crown, these days. A charming realization of this tendency is illustrated in the other little hat, where a bouquet of large rose buds surmount a pink and milan straw-novelty-designed crown.

"REDBREAST"

Robin Redbreast is one of the most common signs of spring. His name was given him as a result of the tradition that one of his feathered ancestors plucked a thorn from the crown of a thorn which the Master wore on the way to Golgotha. The thorn properly was believed to have dripped a red stain on robin's breast, which all his posterity have worn since that time.

SUBSTANTIAL GOODS

Some of the country people get the idea that they can buy their supplies of mail order houses and in distant cities a far lower price than they will cost in their own home stores. They should take into consideration the matter of quality. Country stores do not use any more second-rate goods than the city stores, and the material is often proves unsatisfactory. They often can not build up a reputation on such stuff elsewhere, and think they are getting a big bargain, when as a matter of fact the material is not economical in the long run. It would have paid them better to have bought good stuff at their home store.

There are 26 rooms in the house at Swampscott, Mass., which President Coolidge has hired for the summer, and many friends will consent to go down and occupy those guest rooms and keep him company.

Scarcity of sugar corn last year and the high price of coffee have resulted in food packers putting on the market adulterated corn and packed coffee without so labeling them, according to an announcement by Mrs. F. C. Dugan, director of Foods, and Hotels for the State Board of Health. Although the adulterations are with edible products, the labeling is in violation of the United States Food Law which has resulted in Mrs. Dugan seizing more than 100 cases of canned corn in Louisville for the Federal Government.

The seized corn was labeled sugar corn, but an analysis showed it to be field corn or white horse corn sweetened, according to Mrs. Dugan who says the mislabeling is not confined to any one canner. A sweeping investigation of the coffee being sold throughout the State is now being made due to discovery that coffee roasters have been mixing with the ground bean, parched dough. Mrs. Dugan says this dough is the scrapings from bakeries and in itself insanitary as a food although the parching process kills any bacteria that might be in it. All such mixed coffee will be confiscated, Mrs. Dugan announces.

Her department will begin next month to prepare for enforcement of the egg law which is operative only during the spring, summer and fall months. Thorough inspection of eggs and enforcement of the egg law, the percentage of spoiled eggs was reduced to 8.7 per cent average last September. In the State 739 inspections were made and 174 warrants issued, resulted in 56 violators being fined, six freed and the rest of the cases continued.

ASHLAND TO GET $500,000 ARCADE

JOHN C. C. MAYO, JR., ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR NEW BUILD-ING THERE

Work To Start In May On One Of
The Largest Commercial Building Projects Yet Undertaken In Ashland.

Ashland, Ky.—John C. C. Mayo, Jr., son of the late John C. C. Mayo, noted financier, announced the construction of a $500,000 arcade and storehouse of the structure which will be one of the largest commercial building projects yet undertaken in Ashland.

Associated with Mr. Mayo in the new project are his mother, Mrs. Alice Mayo Fetter, and his business partner, Alexander Cameron, and W. H. Dawkins.

The first steps of the undertaking were accomplished when contracts were closed giving the builders a fifty-foot strip running 300 feet thru the square and fronting on both Winchester and Carter Avenues.

Through the center of this plot will be built a sixteen-foot arcade connecting Winchester and Carter Avenues and fronting on the arcade will be a double tier of shops on either side totaling fifty-four in all.

The stores on the second floor will be reached by convenient stairways and elevators which will give access to the mezzanine promenade fronting the second tier of shops on both sides of the arcade. These elevated walks will be joined at intervals by bridges over which shoppers may pass from one side of the arcade to the other without descending to the street level.

Albert F. Klein, Ashland architect, has worked out the plan. Of the fifty-four storehouses, two large ones will face on Winchester and two on Carter Avenue. The others will be designed with a fifteen-foot frontage each, but so arranged that two or more units may be effectively used together if desired.

Each shop will have a basement room, besides which there will be over 6,000 square feet of basement space for other purposes.

The residence on the Carter Avenue lot has been sold and will be removed immediately. Actual construction will probably begin about the middle of May.

Mr. Mayo said that a careful survey of the city had convinced him and his associates that there was a real demand for additional merchandise stands in Ashland and cited the fact that the Chamber of Commerce has had applications for such accommodations on its file for years from out-of-town firms which desire to locate or to open branches in this city.

BOONE COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

Spelling Contest Held at Burlington Last Saturday

The Spelling contests for county honors were decided in Burlington on Friday last. Petersburg won the High School Banner and Hebron the banner for Grades of schools having three or more teachers.

We are assured of county contests to take place in a County Tournament at Florence beginning on the evening of April 29th and continuing through April 30th and May 1st. All the High Schools in the county that have 7th and 8th grades except one have entered, and some of the shorter term schools have seen fit to come in. An additional attraction will be offered in Orchestral playing as well as individual instruments. Such music has been introduced throughout the county during the past season.

In the afternoons a full program of athletic contests will be held. We desire to call attention to K. E. A. which meets in Louisville April 22nd to 26th. We insist upon a good representation on the 22nd to "root" for our spelling delegate Robt. Beemon, in the Courier-Journal contest. The examination for Common School Diplomas will be held in Burlington April 22nd and 23rd. There will be only one examination for Common School Diplomas this year. All applicants must be present for this examination.

MANAGING THE SCHOOLS

In many places it is quite difficult to induce competent people to give the time which is necessary to serve on the boards that have charge of school affairs.

Serving on school boards is a somewhat onerous task. Yet if one devotes the time and thought necessary to perform this function well, the rewards are great. The ideal school board is both progressive and practical, seeking to modernize the schools, and yet seeing to it that the young people are given sound training on fundamentals. Those who perform this duty well acquire the affection of those who grow up under their administration, and they render an incalculable service.

A PRACTICAL IDEAL

An ideal is something which is looked forward to, a goal which we all hope to attain, a height which we expect to reach. There is an ideal for every one; a something to work for, a something to accomplish. But there is only have people ideals, but there is an ideal for every business, something to accomplish—goods to sell. The Boone County Recorder can help every business firm in Northern Kentucky to reach its ideal. Advertisements carefully worded and planned in the Recorder will bring in the dollars. Try it.

Jr. Agricultural Clubs

The Boone County Jr. Agricultural Club has 200 members enrolled to carry projects this year. Clubs are enrolled at Hebron, Burlington, Union, Florence, Grant, Verona and Walton. The main projects this year are sewing, poultry, calves, pigs, garden and fruit. A big program is being sponsored this year for the successful club members who keep their records.

A trip to Jr. Week at the University of Kentucky at Lexington. This will be a real treat for those who get to go and will be highly worth while. A program will be printed in this column within the next few weeks.

The county fair board is giving a pass to every club member for Wednesday of the fair which will be Club Day. The fair board is offering nice premiums and are doing every possible thing to make club work interesting to boys and girls.

Club picnics are being planned for most of the groups. These will be nature study hikes to study the weeds, grasses, trees and soil composition and their relation to our local farming conditions.

Exhibits are being planned for the state fair and a judging team is being enrolled.

A club tour to visit some of the manufacturing plants of Cincinnati will be a very valuable one.

The club camp for Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties will be held at Florence this year.

Club interest is fast growing here and it is only fair that successful club members should have the treats that are being arranged by the county committee.

JAMES ALVIN GRAVES DIES MONDAY MORN

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Graves Dies Monday

Another bereavement has again been made sadly and lonely by death. On Monday morning at 3:00 o'clock April 13th, 1925, the Death Angel knocked and found admittance into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Graves, of the Hebron neighborhood, and carried into that beautiful beyond, where there is no suffering, pain, nor sorrow, their oldest son, James Alvin, after a week's illness of pneumonia.

James Alvin was 16 years of age and leaves a father, mother and two brothers to mourn his death. Their loss is great for he was a kind, loving son and brother. Such trials as death are hard to bear and we can not lift the curtain and see why one so young in years and with such an unclouded future should be taken, but Christ doth all things well, but there is that bitterness of grief which only those who have had the same experience can understand.

The Recorder, with a host of friends, join in extending sympathy to the grieving ones in this their sad hour of sorrow.

Arrangements for the funeral had not been made when we went to press.

MILK PRODUCERS HOLD A MEETING

VILLAGES ANIMOSITIES

One of the faults of the country towns is that there are too many quarrels and too many folks who won't speak to each other. People are thrown closely together, which on the whole is a fine thing and promotes lasting friendship.

But there are always certain temperaments that jar on certain others. Certain people seem to be unable to get along with each other. Such people are apt to throw out slighting remarks, and they often cause discord that tends to destroy ability for harmonious action. Such ill feelings might be tolerated in the olden days when country conditions were narrow. But in these times people should have too many interests for such petty frictions. Let us all forget them, if such ill feelings exist in Boone county.

APRIL TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT

REAL ESTATE SALE

The Lucas Realty Co., wish to advise the readers that their auction sale at Erlanger, Ky., will be held next Saturday April 18th.

They made an error in advertising in last week's issue for March 18. Don't miss the opportunity to buy some real bargains in marketable property. Fifty dollars in cash will be given away on the grounds.

SPRING SALES

Spring is a mighty good time in which to sell goods, but takes the push of advertising to make the sales a thorough success. The people are buying steadily, but the seasonal lure is not of itself enough to produce the maximum of sales that can be had by the incitements of publicity.

The people are not merely looking around for spring goods, but they are looking in the newspapers to see what concerns are advertising the best inducements. They can not spend all their time making an exhaustive study and comparison of the various stocks of merchandises, and they prefer to go direct to those who think they will have the best bargains.

Advertising is a great help in directing this current of trade. The people feel interested by the advertised store, as it seems like a place that is steadily hustling for the best values, and it is likely to be doing such a big business that it can sell on a low cost basis.

MRS. EUNIE WILLIS LAID TO REST FRIDAY

Passes Away at Her Home in Burlington

Once more we are called upon to chronicle the death of another of the town's beloved and most highly respected citizens.

On the morning of April 8, 1925 at 9:15 o'clock, God in His love and wisdom called to her eternal reward, Mrs. Eunie Willis, widow of the late Thomas G. Willis, who preceded her to the grave eleven years ago.

Mrs. Willis was a daughter of L. H. and Elizabeth Dills. Her father and mother having preceded her to the Great Beyond many years ago. She was united in marriage to T. G. Willis in 1876, and to this union four children were born, one having died in infancy. She is survived by one son, Albert Willis, of Bullittsville, and two daughters, Mrs. Edgar Jones, of Detroit, Michigan, and Miss Eunie Willis, with whom she made her home.

She became a member of Bullittsville Christian church when a young girl and lived a faithful member until death. Mrs. Willis was naturally of a quiet disposition, always trying to do right and to get those near and dear to her to live a christian life. She was a devoted wife, a dear mother and a loving sister and neighbor, and all that knew her loved her.

Funeral services were held at the Burlington M. E. church, Friday afternoon, April 10, 1925, at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Edgar DeWitt Jones in the presence of a large assembly of sorrowing relatives and friends. After the services which beautifully and impressively conducted by Henry Mathews and Mary Scott Chambers, the remains were taken to Bullittsburg and laid to rest by the side of loved ones gone before.

She was born in Boone county, March 20, 1860, being 67 years and 13 days of age at the time of her death.

HEBRON HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

This school is preparing to send delegates to the Northern Kentucky Tournament to be held at Florence April 29, 30 and May 1st.

Several of the boys are going to the H.Y. Conference at Ft. Thomas. The Agricultural Club gave a picture show at the school house on Wednesday night, April 8th. Music was furnished by the school orchestra.

Hebron is glad to announce that through the efforts of the P. T. A. the common school will continue for another month.

An Easter sale and supper was given by the Hebron P. T. A. last Friday night. After the supper all went to the auditorium where the regular meeting was held. The subject for discussion was "Music in the Community" led by Mrs. Alice Dye and Mr. Clyde Hafer.

Sadness reigns over our school this week as death has taken from our midst one of our best young men, James Alvin Graves, a Sophomore, contracted pneumonia a week ago and passed away Sunday night. James Alvin was loved by all and was all a young man could be. He will be greatly missed from our school circle.

Said that 20,000 new laws will be passed by the various legislatures this year, and those that want to break them all will have to get busy at once.

Postmaster Hickman called a meeting of the Rural Carriers from the Burlington office Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing the new postal rules and rates that are now in force and familiarizing themselves with the changes, which are being made to increase the efficiency of the postoffice department, and incidentally, to raise additional funds for that department of our government which has been operating at a loss. After the meeting, as guests of Postmaster and Mrs. Hickman the carriers and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Jones were served refreshments at Porter's Restaurant.

CANDIDATES FOR STATE SENATOR

Senatorial Candidates Visited Boone County Last Tuesday.

Senator O. P. Hogan of Grant county announces himself in this week's issue of the Recorder as a candidate for the office of State Senator of this district which contains the counties of Boone, Gallatin, Owen, Pendleton and Grant.

His announcement enlarges the list to three, as Senator Lee and ex-Senator L. C. Littrell have already announced.

Senator Hogan has been a prominent politician for about 30 years, having served in both branches of the Legislature from Grant county. Mr. Hogan stated to the Recorder that he intended to make an active canvass in all corners of the district. He remained in Burlington over Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. Hogan is the father of First Asst. Atty. General O. S. Hogan of Frankfort.

Senator L. C. Littrell, of Owen county, who seeks the post now held by Senator J. A. Lee, in the Upper House of the General Assembly, was a visitor in Burlington last Tuesday.

Senator Littrell, who is the editor of the Owen County Democrat, was in the Lower House in 1910 to 1920, and was formerly superintendent of Schools in Owen county.

Senator Littrell is making the race on the farmer-business man program. He is opposed by J. A. Lee the present incumbent, and O. P. Hogan of Grant county.

Of the eighteen contestants in last Saturday's county spelling match, Miss Cordelia Berkshire, of the Petersburg team, did not miss a word. An account of the match is given in the "School Notes" in another column of this issue.

PRICE OF GASOLINE BEING INVESTIGATED

Price of Gasoline Increases Fifty-Six Per Cent

The Massachusetts Commission which has been investigating the causes for increasing prices of gasoline, has filed its report. The Commission finds that the average increase throughout the country is 56 per cent, and the distributors' margin is about 9 cent.

Last December the President appointed a Federal Conservation Board to investigate all phases of the oil industry for the purpose of formulating a National policy to prevent waste and combinations on prices, and also to study the question of governmental regulation of production and prices.

As a result of the Attorney General of the United States has brought suit against a number of dominant oil concerns alleging that agreement to exist which constitute a combination and conspiracy to restrict the production and distribution of gasoline and control prices.

The government plans to break up the pooling of patents, and permits granted small refineries on high royalties under restricted production. To do this it may become necessary for the government to institute a control similar to that exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission over the railroads.

WHICH ARE YOU?

A lecturer, riding down one of the rough mountain roads of Kentucky, observed a farmer plowing oxen, to which he was shouting vigorously, "If, then, you Methodist-Baptist, Presbyterian, glang than!" Much astonished he called the mountaineer to the fence and inquired: "Why do you call your oxen by such peculiar names?" "Why, quincest said the mountaineer, "them was the finest names I'd git. This yer Methodist, now, is a good critter an' a willin' worker, but ever' onst in a while he has to jump up an' bawl. This ar' Baptist is a powerful strong beast, but whenever he comes to a pool o' water he alters wants to lay down in it. That ar' Cambelite is an A number-one feller an' does an honest day's work, but he's the stubbornest of cambelites, critter that ever lived. An' this Presbyterian, he's the stiddest one in the hul lot. I can depend on him to keep on it together, but he's so stuck on that all the rest of 'em jes' naturally despise him."—Ex.

In a letter received by the editor from Robert Nixon, of Transylvania University, he states that it was his triple with two men on base which broke up the game between his team and Ky. Wesleyan, last week. More power to you, "Bobbie."

Among the older citizens of the county mingling with the crowd on the street Monday, were Asa Cason, 85; L. H. Voshell, 83; C. E. White, 81; and R. S. Cowen, 80.

Early History of Boone County

By Prof. A. M. Yealey.

CIRCULAR LETTER SEPT., 26, 1819

Very Dear Brethren:

Through the kind providence of our God we have been permitted to fulfill our appointment, and we desire to thank the great Head of our church, that our business has been conducted with that apparent degree of peace, love and harmony which has heretofore manifested themselves in the deliberation of the North Bend Association, and which we hope are the fruits of the Spirit.

Although our hearts may not have been so much engaged, nor our affections raised so high in love and gratitude to God as we could wish, and as has been the case on former occasions of this kind, in consequence of very numerous additions being made to the churches, yet when we hear the generality of them say: "We are at peace among ourselves," when we hear them lamenting and moaning over their own coldness, barrenness and unfruitfulness in religion, and at the same time expressing ardent desires to be led, guided, quickened, animated and protected in the way of holiness, we must acknowledge (however cold our hearts may feel) that these things ought to excite increasing gratitude and love to God from every son and daughter of Zion. Oh that God would prosper Zion and prosper us in her ways and love. In the sweat of his brow he has bled and his hand, casts his seed into the ground, where for a short time it lies dead and buried, and a dark and dreary winter succeeds, and all seems lost, but at the return of spring, universal nature revives, and the once desolated fields are covered with grain, which when matured by the sun's heat, the reapers cut down, and it is brought home with shouts of joy. Here, O disciple of Jesus, behold an emblem of thy present labor, and thy future reward. How sorrowful perhaps in tears, thou doest thy duty amidst sickness, pain, and sorrow, thou laborest in the church and no account seems to be made of thy labors nor profit seems likely to arise from them. Nay, thou must thyself drop into the dust of death and all the storms of that winter pass over thee until thy form shall be finished, and thou shalt see corruption, yet the day is coming when thou shalt reap in joy, and plentiful will be that harvest, even complete redemption from sin, death and hell. For thus your Lord and Master went forth weeping, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, bearing precious seed and sowing it around him, till at length his own body, like a grain of wheat, was buried in the furrow of the grave, but he arose and is now in heaven, from whence he will certainly come again rejoicing with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, bringing his sheaves with him. Then shall every man receive the fruit of his works and have praise of God.

Whether is the Democratic party bound? This question is uppermost in the minds of those interested in its future, whether that interest lies in the retention of control of the party machinery by the bosses, or its acquisition by the progressive Democrats of the South and West.

The Savannah Press recently remarked editorially that "the mission of the Democratic party is to be progressive. It has never succeeded where it was progressive. It ought to be progressive enough to attract forward-looking men in all sections," certainly an eminently sound and sensible statement of the case. The Press quite properly added that "the Democratic party does not want to align itself as an enemy of the East, or as the opponent of the West," and, pointing out to all adherents of real success of a progressive Democracy, that there are in the East many millions of fine progressive Democrats as thoroughly in accord with true principles of liberal popular government as any in the South or the West but that, unfortunately, the bosses have control of the party machinery.

What is wrong with the Democratic party? This has been much discussed. Innumerable explanations of last November's smashing defeat have been advanced. The recent bid for a conference by Mr. Franklin I. Roosevelt of New York, manager of Gov. Al Smith's pre-convention fight for the Democratic presidential nomination last year, has evoked responses of dissent from the South and the West because of their fears that any conference sponsored by him would wind up under the black flag of Tammany Hall.

This feeling is by no means removed by a close inspection of an accompaniment to the Rooseveltian suggestions, a document entitled "Report and Recommendations of Joint Committee Appointed by New York Young Democratic Club and National League of Young Democrats," addressed to Chairman Shaw, and of the national Democratic committee.

"What were the causes of the defeat of the Democratic party in the last presidential election?" is the opening paragraph of the "report" of these bodies, whose trend of thought was thus self-described on page 11 of the report. "The club was one of the first organizations to advocate the nomination for governor in 1918 Alfred E. Smith. In 1920 similar service was rendered for the Democratic national and state ticket, and in 1922 for the election of Gov. Alfred E. Smith."

According to the "young Democrats," two general classes of things changed possible victory into overwhelping defeat last year: Those for which the national committee is not responsible, and those for which it was of the first five influences was listed:

1. "The slothfulness and disinterestedness of the Western Democrats" for Mr. Davis.
2. The LaFollette movement in the middle West and West.
3. The American Federation of Labor's co-operation with LaFollette.
4. "The disloyalty of the Klan Democrats in such states as Montana, Missouri and Kentucky."
5. "Not all defeated candidates at Democratic national conventions have learned how to forget their personal ambitions after another leader has been chosen to be the standard-bearer of the party. Inactivity of such leaders bordering on hostility during the campaign is not as yet branded as an act of disloyalty to the party."

The national committee was mainly held responsible by the "young Democrats" for poor campaign tactics, including the campaign's belated start, the foolish Democratic admission that the party had no chance in the northwest, the scanty and perfunctory advertising campaign, and the lack of attention to the foreign-born and foreign language voters. Of more controversial point was the "lagging of the campaign in New York."

This analysis of the national committee's faulty functioning is not the most of the worst facts of the Democratic campaign in which such stupid political judgment has been followed: one with such colossal sins of omission and commission. Our party leaders floundered around like children lost in the fog. Their chief strategic felony was virtual abandonment of the West, the Democratic hope, for a hopeless campaign in the East.

Western Democrats held aloof from campaign leaders who ignored and humiliated them. The LaFollette movement was only made possible by Democratic blunders after the Republicans had nominated a candidate whose single virtue was silence.

The charge that "the disloyalty of the Klan Democrats defeated Mr. Davis" is a novel one. Mr. Davis had a fine triumph in Oklahoma, the hotbed of the Klan. But in New York state, the center of antikanism, Mr. Davis polled only 29 per cent of the total vote.

As to defeated candidates, perhaps the "young Democrats" have in mind not a simple affliction of rheumatism in the feet which caused Gov. Smith to cancel his New England speaking tour for Mr. Davis. Such a pedal affliction, whether rheumatic or cold, was bad for the party. The grave discrepancy between the vote Gov. Smith received for governor and that of Mr. Davis was almost a prima facie example of what is referred to as "an act of disloyalty to the party."

The "young Democrats" failed to add to their analysis the real and overwhelming cause of the party's defeat: a mistaken strategy in making an appeal to the Solid South—a section far more strongly Republican than the Solid South was Democratic ten years ago. An analysis of the election figures state by state reveals the appalling fact that in not a single eastern state, save Maryland and West Virginia, did Mr. Davis receive as high a percentage of the total vote, while in six of them he percentages of total vote cast for Democratic candidates had dropped election by election since 1916. In tabular form these percentages were:

	1900	1916	1920	1924
New York	45	47	30	29
New Jersey	43	44	30	21
Pennsylvania	38	43	29	10
Connecticut	42	48	35	30
Massachusetts	40	48	29	25
Illinois	45	45	27	23

The 1900 percentages received by Mr. Bryan are given in this total to illustrate the truth of the progressive cause, such as Mr. Bryan, East or West, was a progressive Democrat, such as Mr. Bryan and Mr. Wilson, both anathema to Wall street and the bosses, than for candidates nominated by the reactionaries.

The suggestions made by the "young Democrats," thirteen in number, mainly of a minor character, were a much-needed part of the party machinery; a propaganda bureau for foreign language voters, a labor bureau, and things of that type.

They also suggest the establishment of a Democratic weekly magazine, a splendid thing in itself, representing a much-needed social, economic and political thought, as is the proposal that the national committee sponsor the publication of books of the party's spirit, aims and achievements. Such volumes of C. G. Bowers' masterly "Party Battles of the Jackson Period" and Judge Swanney's "Safeguards of Democracy" are typical of what ought to be fostered. Permanent auxiliary clubs of various classes of citizens would not be harmful; beginning national campaigns right after the national convention is most desirable; as a "million dollar drive" to pay the deficit and give some funds, if the sources of the suggestions, however, seem futile. One is that there should be a uniform membership fee of $1 a year for any one wishing to be included in the party's membership roll. This is a rather complicated proposition. Membership in the Democratic party should be a matter of belief, and not of a biennial party convention for mapping out strategy for congressional elections might be cumbersome. "Calling a conference of the best thought in the party," the "young Democrats" final suggestion has already been taken up with alacrity by Mr. Roosevelt. We have had enough of the "best thought" and "best minds." After the classic example of Doheny, Denby, Forbes and Fall, Mr. Harding's famous "best minds" hadn't Democrats better look out for the "best thought" of Tammany Hall?

Had Mr. Roosevelt carefully studied a number of the answers made to him by the Democratic leaders in the South and the West, he might never have made his recent proposal for a conference. Mr. Mark Sullivan, in his article in today's News, discusses in some detail Mr. Roosevelt's proposal. Mr. Sullivan, properly appreciative of the career of the former Secretary of the navy, feels that Mr. Roosevelt is a progressive; but he is aware of the keen feeling among the progressive Democrats that Tammany must keep her claws off the national party, and he points to Mr. Roosevelt's unbelief or unwillingness to recognize this political fact as one of the worst facts of the present Democratic situation.

The editor of The News has from time to time received from various delegates to the convention copies of their replies to Mr. Roosevelt, and some excerpts from a few of them may aid an understanding of the current discussion.

Among those who answered Mr. Roosevelt was Hon. Morrison Shafroth of Denver, Colo., a Democratic senator for the senate in Colorado's last fall. Mr. Shafroth made a gallant fight for the liberty of thought and freedom of religious opinion, his principal issue being a virile attack on the Klan-enforced nomination of his competitor. He was defeated by a majority amazingly less than that by which Mr. John W. Davis was buried in Colorado. Under date of March 3 Mr. Shafroth advised Mr. Roosevelt that "you easterners... fail utterly to appreciate our situation. The West is progressive and dry, and no Democrat can carry it unless he is an outstanding progressive and known as such throughout the country." Mr. Shafroth emphasized to Mr. Roosevelt that the West was the sole remaining hope of the Democratic party. He pointed out that "before the next Democratic convention the two-thirds rule ought to be abolished" because it "delegates to Tammany, New York, New England and the Solid South the power of Democratic nominations."

Mr. Shafroth then very truly pointed out to Mr. Roosevelt that whenever the power of this eastern group is exercised... it invariably drives out of the Democratic ranks the western states without which Democracy has not the slightest chance for success. Then Mr. Shafroth reinforced his argument with these facts and figures from the political history of the past thirty years:

I wonder if you have ever taken occasion to observe that in the three greatest defeats the Democratic party has ever suffered the nomination was each time made at the dictation of the New York delegation. Take for instance, the last eight presidential elections. In 1896 McKinley defeated Bryan by 600,000 votes, although Bryan carried nearly all the western states. In 1900 Bryan was again defeated 850,000 votes, but still carried a number of the western states. In 1904 at the dictation of New York over the opposition of a large number of the western states, Alton B. Parker was nominated and was defeated by a plurality of 2,600,000.

There is a similar story of the western state—in fact, not the state outside of the solid south. In 1908 a western candidate was again nominated, and Mr. Bryan cut the plurality more than half and carried a few western states. In 1912, over the bitter opposition of Tammany and through western support, and largely through the influence of Mr. Bryan, Wilson was nominated. Of course, the disruption of the Republican party made his election inevitable. In 1920, when Woodrow Wilson was again elected, the nomination of Gov. Cox was not the choice of the West—in fact, carried nothing outside of the Solid South, and lost a part of that. In 1924 McAdoo who was again the choice of the West, was turned down by an Eastern coalition. Mr. Davis was nominated. The coalition which nominated him did not give him a single electoral vote.

Now, it does seem to me, when you study these eight elections, that you can readily come to the conclusion that any Democrat to win must look to the West. New York has gone Democratic only once in the last long period, given a single electoral vote to a candidate of its choice. It does seem unfair that it should have so much power to defeat a western choice in Democratic conventions when the West is the only section of the country, aside from the South, that delivers votes when it does not nominate a candidate. I earnestly hope that, prior to the next convention, there will be a unity of sentiment on the part of the Democrats for the abolition of the two-thirds rule.

What hope does Mr. Shafroth see? The hope of the elimination of the two-thirds rule and the nomination of a candidate satisfactory to the West and the South. "Otherwise," he wrote Mr. Roosevelt, "we won't win."

Even if Mr. Roosevelt happened not to have read Mr. Shafroth's letter closely, he tenor of that he received from Mr. J. Ray Files of Iowa should have opened his eyes. Mr. Files significantly wrote him that "when we should have been hunting tigers, we have permitted ourselves to be annoyed and pestered and repulsed by mosquitoes." This very direct jolt to the Tammany Tiger cannot have aroused much enthusiasm from the late manager of the Tammany campaign.

Mr. Files felt that among the necessities for the reinvigoration of the party were: The destruction of the two-thirds rule and the unit rule so that a candidate with a majority of delegates "to an untrammeled convention" would receive the nomination to which he was entitled. "The two-thirds rule is a defeat in every useful purpose it has ever been imposed to serve in," Mr. Files emphasized. He called for a rule to force the timely elimination of favorite sons—"a dozen well-erected lightning rods should never be allowed to deaden the convention."

Mr. Gavin McNab of San Francisco, one of the shrewdest and most courageous lawyers in America, told the latter that:

Your state's designation, the largest, is governed by the city of New York—the city that is the money market of the country. There is vested the money power of the nation. Wealth is conservative and self-preserving.

A city whose dominant occupation is the operation of money is not likely to champion legislation which restricts forces through which it has grown great. From these conditions comes the Democratic organization of New York. Under these conditions necessarily local interests vastly outweigh national interests. To such organizations, municipal issues are vital; national issues, largely abstractions. What is here said of New York is true to a less, but controlling extent of Illinois, through the dominance of Chicago.

A further idea of Pacific coast Democratic feeling on the subject of the party's future is given by the excerpt of the recent address of Mr. Geo. O. Fishburne, a delegate from Washington state to the New York national convention, twice a candidate for congress in that state, and for ten years assistant U. S. attorney for the ten southwestern counties of his state. In the course of an address last week to the Seattle Democratic club Mr. Fishburne said:

The Democratic party can never give us relief until the South and West not only dict... policies... but also name the candidate for president to carry out this policy. The South and West can never do as long as we give the veto power to the New England states and New York and New Jersey by the two-thirds rule in the national conventions.

It is the boast of New England and the Republican party that it freed the black man. Let the South and the West write and order the party that it has freed the white man. The Republican party has stayed in power by perpetuating the sectional hatreds left to us by the Civil War. Let the Democratic party return to power by abolishing these hatreds.

The forceful analysis of the forces back of Tammany Hall, forces bound to control any Roosevelt conference, cannot have been the sort of response the late Smith manager wished. Yet, it typifies the thought of the people throughout the south and west as to Tammany Hall and its vested selfishness.

There is a feeling among Southern and Western Democrats that the ship of the party in the East has ulterior motives; that the party will be highly unfortunate if it allows this leadership to continue its control of the national organization. At the same conference as Mr. Roosevelt has proposed would tend to this end. Let the tiger stay in Manhattan, the South and West don't want him.

PROGRESS OF THE INDIANS

The idea has long prevailed that the American Indians in this country were declining in population, and that this romantic element, in due time, would become almost extinct. But recent statistics show that they number some 346,000, which is 20,000 more than 10 years ago.

Out of 54,000 Indian families, some 44,000 occupy permanent homes. The old days when the Indian was a wanderer are passing. Out of these, 32,000 are farming, and so they are settling into the ways of white citizenship.

Some feel that they are being pushed too rapidly and there has been controversy whether they should be permitted to carry on their ceremonial dances. Some feel they should be required to give up their own distinctive costumes and wear white styles of clothing. While it will be a mistake to force these descendants of prehistoric civilization too fast, yet the picturesque old Indian habits are not as a rule adapted to a modern white man's country.

MAIL ORDER SALES

Sales of mail order houses are reported as running ahead of last year, and retail merchants in many places seem disturbed by the amount of trade that leaves the home stores in favor of these great concerns. Probably a good deal of business that in former years used to go to stores in Boone county in his way. Merchants who complain of such competition, however, should reflect that this great trade was won primarily by advertising, on a tremendous scale. Merchants who are consistent advertisers do not complain of such a form of competition. It is a matter of holding their own with mail order houses and meet them on their own ground.

Senator "Bob" LaFollette, who is constructive legislator, yodkped credited with accomplishing more constructive legislation during his 26 years of service than any other man, will spend the summer at his home in Wisconsin. Although his health has been severely taxed, it is said he is as full of fight as ever and will be heard from in no uncertain manner at the next session.

Sir Oliver Lodge is convinced that there are angels. He believes they exercise an influence in keeping human beings out of trouble. Almost every man will agree with him. Almost every man either is married to one or knows some other man who is.

It is rumored in Washington that the enterprise of a newspaper correspondent, and the common failing of a woman for talking too much to breaking off friendly relations, and urging that another and more gentle note be sent in its place. In the meantime, however, the aforementioned correspondent secured a copy of the note and made it public. Now the Peruvian Minister is in a most embarrassing position. He cannot deny that the note was sent, nor can he submit it to the State Department. He has chosen to maintain a discreet silence.

The controversy over the sale of five ships of the President type to the Dollar Steamship company has brought to Washington a group of men representing the interests of many steamship companies all over the United States among whom is one of the most picturesque figures in American politics—Ray Baker, former Director of the Mint under President Wilson, and Secretary to George Marie when the latter was Ambassador to Russia. In one of his various and startling costumes. He appeared in the Democratic Convention in a sombrero and all of the trimmings of a dandy.

John Garibaldi Sargent had just moved into his luxurious office at the Department of Justice when the building was sold under him. He was startled at hearing the clang of a bell under his window one afternoon and going to the window to see what was happening he discovered the red flag of the auctioneer on the steps of the building.

The building which has been renting for $75,000 a year, was sold to Harry Wardman, a prominent local real estate dealer, for $950,000. If the rent is raised Mr. Sargent may have to leave his comfortable office and so it was with a tone of regret, however, that the thirty former football player leaned out of the window and watched the proceeding of the sale. His appearance, however, caused a good deal of excitement on Vermont Avenue where a crowd gathered to get a good look at the new member of the Cabinet.

Peaks of the world-wide movement for determining a method by which peace may be maintained among nations were heard in the policies of Secretary of Navy Wilbur, and Senator Borah which were enunciated last week. Wilbur stated that the formula for peace was Christianity and big game. He explained that while we keep our Navy for defense we should also become a Christian in our thought that we would not desire to attack any other nation. The policy of Senator Borah, however, is to lay the foundation for any peace plan on the principles of international law.

"People who live in glass houses should not throw stones."

In some of our divorce courts 75 or a 100 families will be severed in two or three hours by decrees of times humorous. And hardly a paper will mention the wholesale massacre of domestic drams, unless some woman or man airs some surprising and dramatic grievance. But let a person of financial or social or professional prominence slip, and he headlines flare and the columns are rattled off like machine guns. The important thing is, how does this affect our common decency, our sense of mercy. Is there anything left of the old ideals of minding one's own business.

Tens of thousands of divorces are granted in this country every year to people who are desperate enough to go through the ordeal of public trials. Tens of thousands of other homes are broken up by legal separations without the finality of divorce. And tens of thousands of other households are dissolved by the simpler expedient of the husband's never coming home, or the wife going back to her mother.

It is all frightfully chaotic and the complete destruction of the home is freely predicted by numerous good people. But before we despair we should take a look at the true conditions of those good old homes. We might ask why, if they were so pure and solid and beautiful, they are falling apart so rapidly now. Nobody who knows anything about the true conditions of those times would dare praise them as ideal.

Perhaps we shall gradually come to live so that we shall not fear the light of publicity. Perhaps everybody will grow so honest or so cautious that he will not let his neighbors either ruin or ruin his or her life. But it would help a lot if all of us heeded the old saw about living in glass houses, because most of us hope our window curtains are all he way down.

Cottages constructed of cork and concrete is the latest innovation in England. Two houses been erected on trial. They have steel frames, with panels of cork covered with 4 inches of concrete on the outside. The frame work of both houses weighs a house in one day.

The Wisconsin Senate has declined to accept from the Federal Government for the State a large assortment of German war trophies, declaring by resolution that such displays are not peace conducive exhibitions and that Wisconsin does not desire them in its public museums. By this action Wisconsin again sets an example for other states and cities in a real movement toward practical peace education.

During the year 1922 nearly as many miles of highways will be constructed as would be required to circle the earth. Nearly $406,000,000 has been appropriated by the various states for this purpose, besides $135,000,000 for repairing and maintaining the existing 217,794 miles of improved highways. In addition to this the various counties will spend more than $450,000,000 for roads. Since 1921 between 30,000 and 40,000 miles of surfaced roads have been built each year. Ten years ago such a program would have been considered impossible for any State. Now it is looked upon as a good business investment.

A POOR MAN'S GIFT

Dr. Charles Steinmetz was born in Breslau, April 9, 1865. On June 3, 1889, he landed in New York City from the steamer—in debt for his passage and unable to speak our language.

Twelve years later he was elected president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. President Eliot of the Harvard proclaimed him the foremost electrical engineer in the world. On October 26, 1922, he died.

Did ever a few brief years witness more miracles? When his life began, there was not a single electric light and power company. It ended there were 6,000 in America, serving more than 11,000,000 homes.

Physically frail himself, he helped to make electricity the great lifter of burdens; by his courage and vision he was an inspiration to the whole electrical industry.

Such a man deserves to be remembered on his birthday, not on the day of his death. For in the larger sense he does not die. Humanity is permanently richer because he gave.

Commencing April 15 here will be a tremendous demand for half-cent stamps for the mailing of third class matter. These stamps will be sold in blocks of two or any even number, and if the rate should become permanent it may result in the coinage of a half-penny.

Put your heart into your work and you will put money into the bank.

Claimed there are too many rednecks, and if so their number was reduced by not buying of them.

Formerly the horses used to climb trees when they saw an automobile and pedestrians will have to do so soon to get out of the way.

A soft reply saves many a family jar.

The president will not have Congress on his hands for a time, but he will have all he can do to lay the cornerstones of the nation.

Claim that man originated from a monkey often seems to be proved not merely by physiological structure, but by the way the people act.

President Coolidge having been safely inaugurated, the American people can feel sure that the White House will stay rented for four more years.

Some folks have the idea that to get rich is it is necessary to keep one's conscience in a state of suspended animation most of the time.

"PIGS IS PIGS"

Years ago a popular author wrote a story, entitled "Pigs is Pigs." Recently, J. C. McDowell, of Morgantown, N. C., had an experience which proves when pigs are pigs.

Mr. McDowell bought two pigs and at the same time one of his neighbors also bought two pigs from the same litter. In the beginning, both men fed their pigs on bran, shorts, etc. Then, Mr. McDowell decided to try feeding his pigs on prepared hog feed.

That this experiment was very successful is evidenced by the fact that in December, when the four hogs were killed, Mr. McDowell's hogs weighed 403 lbs., and 425 lbs., while his neighbor's hogs weighed only 250 lbs., and 255 lbs. Mr. McDowell paid $16.00 for his two pigs and eleven months later secured from them when butchered, ham, shoulders, bacon, lard, and head cheese to the value of $175.00.

The discovery of a brand of hog feed that produces pork at the rate of 1 lb. for every 2 lbs. of feed used is of real value to every farmer in the country.

Any hog-raiser will immediately recognize that the results obtained by Mr. McDowell are most unusual. His remarkable success was due entirely to his feeding a scientific, balanced feed, Tuxedo Hog Ration, considering that his hogs and his neighbor's hogs were the same age and of equal weight at the beginning of the test.

CHILDHOOD - LIFE'S SPRINGTIME

The life of childhood at its dawn
Resembles much the spring,
When verdure tints the earth and trees

And birds begin to sing.
Love looks upon the baby's face,
Although a tiny thing,
Joy gazes on the tinge of green
That speaks to us of spring.

And we begin to make our plans
To work and plant and sow Because—you see this is the time
When things begin to grow.

First, we prepare the ground, then plant
Within its soil the grain,
Then nature comes and makes it grow,
With warm sunshine and rain.

To mind and heart we must prepare There's soil we must prepare
In order that good seed may grow
And yield a harvest there.

And in the springtime weeds grow fast
And rank and thick and tall,
They sometimes smother out the plants
While they are young and small.

Within the garden of the heart
Of many a little child,
The weeds of vice and folly grow—
Thereby its life's defiled.

Yes, truly childhood's life's spring-time,
The time for fun and play,
But springtime also means seedtime
As well as sunshine gay.

So we must plant and weed and prune;
Our duty's very clear,
The season's passing swiftly by,
Spring comes but once a year.

HOLDING IN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

ISAIAH TITUS was one of the most irascible, explosive children I knew when I was a boy. The least opposition or contradiction or teasing would ordinarily set him off into a frenzy of angry words, which left him beside himself. Occasionally, however, he would exhibit the most phenomenal and surprising self-control, at which times we were wont to remark that Isaiah was "holding in."

This holding-in process is not uncommon even in adult and everyday life, and by no means unnecessary. The conventionalities of society require that we lead a life of constant repression and self-restraint. We would not be able to do business if we gave regular expression to the things we actually think and feel. We cannot safely tell every stupid man that he is a bonehead. We smile and utter pleasant drivel when we should like to shout anathemas or call people names. We endure bores and bullies and speak complimentary sentences, and keep quiet when we are bursting for expression, just because it is diplomatic to do so. It is stronger and wiser and safer.

I have held in a good deal in my time. I have argued that while it might relieve the strain on my feelings considerably to tell Smith that I understood his fawning manner, that I saw through his flatteries and his subtleties. It would do no good to Smith, and it would stir up discord generally, so I listened quietly to his chatter.

Did you ever think what fun it would be, if only for a brief time, to be freed from the conventional restraints under which we all do the regular business of our daily lives and have a chance to tell people our real thoughts, to say what we actually think? I waked up the other night laughing at the expression on the face of Professor Blank whose blustering and boasting I have listened to for a good many years, and in whom in my dreams I had had the courage to tell just how his brain storm affected me. He was amazed, as he might well have been, for I had always before taken his talk very placidly.

I know it is a good practice to hold in when one is in the presence of people's patience tried; it is more fun to smile than to weep, or to burst into a fit of anger. I have had some of the discipline, and I have reaped not a few of the benefits that come from self-restraint. It is true that the worm occasionally turns, that once in a while the best of us is taken off his guard, but my general theory is to endure, to be calm, to show no anger, to say pleasant, agreeable things, or to keep quiet. I know full well that the pleasant and more controlled one is, the greater strength he reveals. (© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"SETBACK"

Persons who experience a relapse on the road to recovery of their health or fortune are said to have experienced a "setback." Setback originally was a term used in reference to computing the score of games in which the loser was penalized by adding to his opponent's score.

STUDYING THE BIRDS

About now is a good time to begin studying the birds, and those who celebrate the spring season by acquiring more information about these airy visitors find them well worth attention. It is a pleasure, when you hear some bird caroling away in the treetops, to be able to call him by name, and know something about his habits and customs. Perhaps he is singing his song to serenade you, and has been surprised that he has done so for several seasons back, without your showing any desire for information about your caller.

The folks who become interested in the study of birds are an active force in efforts to have them preserved. The fewer birds we have, the more the bugs will destroy our crops. If you want plenty of food for yourself and your children, better get interested in these aerial patrolmen who keep watch of these "wormy and buggy bandits that hold up our gardens and rob our fields.

More concrete pavement for the use of motor traffic was laid in the United States in 1924 than in any previous year. Estimates by the Portland Cement Association give the total of 6,021 miles of roadway averaging eighteen feet in width. Added to the concrete roadway formerly in use, this provides nearly 32,000 miles of concrete pavement in the cities and States of the Union.

ASHLAND SCHOOLS MAY CLOSE DOORS

LACK OF REVENUE TO OPERATE CAUSE OF CONTEMPLATED MOVE.

With No Relief In Sight 5,400 Children May Be Turned Out of School When Money Becomes Exhausted.

Ashland, Ky.—The public schools of this place may close their doors and 5,400 students forced to discontinue their studies for an indefinite period if relief measures are not forthcoming by the close of the month of April, was the general import of a statement made by the president of the school board, John W. Woods, following the meeting recently held. At that meeting the levy of one dollar proposed by the board for the maintenance of the Ashland public schools was rejected by the board of aldermen and the schools cut off without a cent of revenue for the coming year.

The schools are facing an ever-increasing deficit which is piling up at the rate of about $3,000 a week, the secretary of the board A. J. Brown shows, and with the revenue from taxation cut off there will be no other alternative than to close the doors and discontinue studies until some relief is forthcoming.

The aldermen based their decision on the grounds that the levy of one dollar proposed by the board of education is illegal and that they, the aldermen, would be jointly guilty with the school board in certifying such a levy to the tax books. The school board's reply was that the schools here could not exist upon the seventy-five cent maximum allowed by law and that unless a dollar were appropriated the schools could not operate.

At the preceding meeting of the two bodies of council the budget containing the dollar levy was passed and forwarded to the mayor for his signature. Mayor Salisbury vetoed the measure and named as one of his reasons the excess levy of the school board. The mayor refused to read the statute pertaining to the levy which states that the maximum sum shall be seventy-five cents. Faced with the probability of a grand debate over their act the two bodies voted the levy this time eliminating the school levy.

At the plea of President John W. Woods the council voted to reconsider the matter after hearing of the drastic course in view for the schools and upon another vote the budget carried with the dollar levy. This vote was taken in the face of the fact that the statute carried a section which provides a fine of $100 and a term in prison for any legislative body which appropriates money in excess of the statutory limit. Several of the councilmen expressed their willingness to serve their time and pay the fine rather than see the schools close.

After the paper had been carried to the board of aldermen for final passage a scuffle occurred when the members of this body declined to certify the dollar levy owing to the fact that the illegality of the act rendered it not feasible and liable to contest in the courts when the school board would be no better off than before. The matter was referred to the next meeting and, in the meantime, the school board will meet and consider its course of action.

UNITED STATES AID ASKED

By Highway Commission; Delegation File Petitions With Highway Commission at Frankfort.

Frankfort, Ky.—Good roads boosters from various counties sought Federal aid and endorsement of projects. The Highway Commission was used as an intermediary. Excepting counties that have local road funds available to match Federal aid, no progress was made toward new construction.

A feature of the meeting was the presence of legislative candidates and politicians with delegations in petitioning the Highway Commission. With no funds available for new construction until July 1, 1926, the Highway Commission now is an agent of the counties to petition for Federal aid. In some instances the commission promised to build parts of the projects later, if the county would match the Federal aid for construction on other parts of the roads this year.

Union County Plans Plague Fight Morganfield, Ky.—The Fiscal Court of Union County appropriated funds to pay traveling expenses while in the county of a government veterinarian on tuberculosis testing for a period of two years. Work will probably be started in the county on July 1 if sufficient men are available for county area work.

Attendance Large at Normal Schools Frankfort, Ky.—With over 8,400 students enrolled in the four white normal schools, Kentucky, in the near future, will be supplied with more trained teachers than ever before in the history of the state. Reports made to McHenry Blanton, superintendent of public instruction, by the presidents of the four normal schools, show that the Western Normal has an enrollment of 1,000; the Eastern Normal, 1,300; the Murray Normal, 700, and the Morehead Normal over 800.

Porter's Lunch Room is a busy place these days. Mr. Porter is a good cook and serves most anything you want to eat.

This is the time of the year when the man of the house is confronted with garden work, house cleaning, and spring clothes. Just at the time when fishing is at its best.

Chas. J. Craven, a former well known Boone county citizen, but now living in Covington, was at court Monday, meeting with many friends.

Candidates have been very active during the past month and no man from the country comes to town but he is tackled by half dozen or more who want his vote.

"Jinks" Willis and wife, of Lexington, attended the funeral of his brother's wife, last Friday. Mr. Willis has been in the grocery business at Lexington for thirty-eight years.

Kirtley Cropper, Clifton Roberts, Walter Brown and wife, and Jerry Fowler and wife, of Cincinnati, spent Easter Sunday with home folks in Burlington.

From the number of tobacco beds that can be seen from traveling over the county, is a convincing proof there will not be much of a curtailment of the 1926 tobacco crop, provided the season is favorable from now on.

Asa Cason, after a five month's sojourn with Richard Marshall and family in Indiana, returned home, last Saturday, looking hale and hearty for one who has passed the 84th mile post in life's journey.

Mrs. L. C. Weaver returned home last Saturday from W. P. Beemon's at Pleasant Valley, where she had been for several days visiting her mother and sister, Miss Myrtle Beemon who were quite sick with flu.

Miss Mary Olive Elder, who taught the first, second and third grades at the Boone county High School, last fall and winter, is taking a course at State Normal school, Lexington.

Physicians report almost an epidemic of severe colds throughout the county. Some of the victims are said to be suffering with flu but the form is not very severe. There have been quite a number of cases in Burlington, but all are able to be up and out again.

Another of the town's old landmarks has been removed—the stretch of Woolper Granite slide walk along the east side of the court house yard, was removed last week and replaced with a nice concrete walk.

Rain which came as a boon to farmers and tobacco growers in this county, on Thursday of last week, relieved a drouth of several weeks that had hampered crops and grass. The rain was widespread throughout the county.

House-cleaning season—the loveliest time of the year—has arrived, and the dear wife will move everything in the house except the floors, and poor hubby when he goes home will grab his cats when he can and where he can—probably getting his sleep while hanging on a hook. Man, poor man! We have used the same broom and towel in our office for 19 years and they are (the broom and towel) still in good condition. The people dress better and everything looks in a prosperous condition.

As a daily pilgrim about town and a spin or two through the country the past few weeks, we were impressed with the improvements of the past few years. The homes are better, more sanitary and neater in appearance; the barns, outhouses and fencing are generally kept in good condition; stock is well cared for with better shelter, more paint, is being used than ever before; a better grade of stock and larger flocks of purebred poultry are more evident than ever before.

The writer spent last Friday afternoon with L. A. Conner and Marz Williams, on the banks of Woolper creek, listening to the rippling waters of that noted stream, as they wended their way over the rocks to the Ohio. For three long hours we sat on the bank watching our corks, looking at the bark on the tall sycamores and the dogwood bloom, trying to hook a sucker, but when the shades of evening came on, we were reminded of a sea, over the waves of the mighty ocean.

One day last week we accompanied Dr. Yelton out the Petersburg pike, on a patient seeing trip and a hog-buying expedition, as far as the intersection of the Woolper and Petersburg pikes, returning home via the Woolper and Bellevue pikes. All along the route, on both sides of the road, farmers were busy turning the soil for a 1926 crop—many having finished plowing, and from the number of acres that have been turned under, with favorable weather, from now on, bumper crops will be the results. During our trip we spent two hours at the handsome new home of K. E. Grant, which occupies the site of the one destroyed by fire a few years ago. Not only have they an elegant home, but they know how to treat you with that genuine old Kentucky hospitality.

AN EASTER TRADITION

One of the oldest ideas about Easter, was that the sun danced in the heavens at this time of joy. Many ancient scholars felt it necessary to prove by elaborate arguments that such a thing could not happen.

The maidens of Devonshire used to get up early Easter morning in Scotland the sun was said to whirl around like a millwheel and give three leaps.

These old superstitions often had a suggestion of truth. Easter is a time of joy and not of sadness, and in ancient days before science was thought of, it was not unusual that people should imagine that the heavenly spheres joined in observing the festival. At least in our own time we may think of the bright days of the Easter period as a reflection of the goodness of God. If the sun does it, at least, he incites happiness by his cheerful rays.

The young crowd say their parents are worrying too much, which they could relieve by getting in a little earlier at night.

Edgar F. Edwards

"Three thousand fairs in the United States and Canada alone pay upwards of thirty million dollars annually in premiums for the development of agriculture and of live stock," according to Edgar F. Edwards of Rochester, N. Y., recently elected president of the International Association of Fairs and Expositions. Mr. Edwards is a former newspaper man, who has been general manager of the Rochester exposition, which includes the famous Rochester horse show—second only to the National in New York—for 15 years.

Richard Linthicum

One of the busiest men at the Democratic national committee headquarters in Washington is Richard Linthicum, who handles the great mass of publicity for the party. Linthicum knows the newspapers of the country by heart and hundreds of the small town dailies depend on him to furnish them with the latest word in Democratic news.

Men's Faces Growing Handsomer, Is Discovery

London.—The conditions of modern civilization are changing men's faces and making them generally more handsome, according to Sir Arthur Keith, conservator of the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons. He says a diminished use of the jaws is causing changes in the bony framework of the human face.

Walter Stoneham, who compiles the photographic record of the nation's most famous men for the national photographic gallery, declares that in general men's faces are becoming narrower and more refined.

Men use their jaws less in chewing England's famous old roast beef, he says, even if they use them more in conversation than their reputedly taciturn ancestors.

Too Good to Kill

Sofia.—King Boris, refusing to confirm the death sentence passed on a prisoner convicted of murder, said: "How can I consent to the taking of the life of this prisoner, when he has shown enough moral power to become an exemplary workman since his imprisonment?"

Vienna.—At no time in its history has entertainment been provided on so liberal a scale in Vienna as at present, according to Herr Breinler, the financial expert of the Vienna municipality. He was addressing a deputation pleading for a reduction of the entertainment and luxury taxes levied by the city.

To justify his unrelenting attitude Herr Breinler said that although the population of Vienna has decreased by 800,000, there had been added to the establishment existing prior to 1919 seven playhouses, with 4,702 seats; five concert halls, adding 50 per cent to former seating accommodations; moving picture theaters with further seating capacity of 16,000, and 45 fashionable bars.

Moreover, 174 restaurants and 208 cafes had been added. There had also been established 32 new permanent and 234 seasonal wine gardens, while no fewer than 17,000 licenses had been granted by the police in the last ten months for the celebration of casual entertainments and festivities in this city.

Lilac Time

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I WAS born in the spring when the lilacs were in bloom, and almost my first conscious memory is of a bright sunshiny day, when I was walking with mother in the garden down a pathway bordered with lilacs. There was a flowering currant in one corner of the garden, and I caught the glint of its yellow blossoms through the shrubbery, and smelled its pungent fragrance. The lilacs were in bloom, and the evening air was filled with the odor of the flowers. I was only a few years from babyhood at the time, but I never catch the scent of the lilac blossoms without recalling as vividly as if it were yesterday the beauty of the day and the details of our conversation. I can see mother's brown hair waving back from her forehead, I can feel the soft touch of her hand as we walked down the path, in my ears are the low musical tones of her voice, and the air is filled with the breath of spring, and the odor of the lilac flowers.

Mother had come that afternoon from the funeral of the mother of a little friend of mine, and she was trying to explain to my childish mind something of the meaning and certainty of death.

"And could you die?" I asked, my childish heart cold with fear.

"Yes, dear," she said, "everybody must do so, some day, and no one can tell when his time is coming."

"What would I do?" I asked, my lip quivering a little, "if you were gone?"

"God would take care of you, lad," she said full of faith, "and if you are a good boy, you need not fear."

It's a long, long time ago, since that quiet evening in May, but so long as I live that will be "Mother's day" to me. I have never forgotten the simple lessons of truth and faith, and virtue and duty which she impressed upon me then, and though I may not always have followed them as I should, I never see the yellow currant blossoms or smell the fragrance of the lilac flowers without recalling the precious memory of mother and the lessons that she taught me, and I still believe that if I am good, I need not fear.

You mothers whose sons are far from you, in college or in business, engaged in the work of the world, you sometimes feel that they have forgotten your admonitions, that they are drifting, perhaps, like a ship without a rudder at sea; but it is not so. The scent of a flower, a bit of color on the landscape, the touch of a hand, the intonations of a voice, will bring back to them with a rush the memories of childhood and the lessons and the principles which were then implanted in them.

There is lying on my desk now a letter from a young man in one of the big cities of the country. He has seen a good deal of the world, and might be expected, if one did not know human nature, to have forgotten most of the sentimentalities and emotions of childhood. Both of his parents have been dead for years.

"It's strange," he writes, "how impossible it is to get away from the lessons mother taught me. There is never a temptation comes to me but I hear her warning words; there is never a duty which I am inclined to shirk but I hear her old admonition: 'Run along, dear, and get it done now; there is never a task well performed but I feel her approval.'"

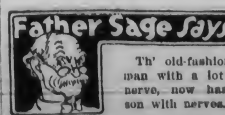

They do not forget. They may grow careless; they may wander away for a time; but the lessons of youth will come back to them.

The Mode Indulges in Gay Embroidery

In regard to that all-important theme, the ensemble costume, a touch of embroidery here and there makes coat and frock akin. The handsome composite cloth model in the picture demonstrates the idea.

The designer of this charming ensemble relies on embroidery to confirm the relationship of the modish topcoat to the frock over which it is posed.

Stylists have chosen to consider fanciful pockets as a field of special exploitation this season. Therefore the embroidered pocket which so enhances this coat expresses the last word from fashion's headquarters.

The same colorful stitchery which so distinguishes this pocket, borders the hemline of the coat, repeating its cunning colorfulness at the neckline and at every possible vantage point on the frock.

BAPTIST MINISTER HERE WILL RESIGN

Rev. W. W. Adams Resigns to Enter Foreign Missionary Service

The membership of the local Baptist church received quite a shock last Sunday evening when Rev. W. W. Adams announced his intention of resigning. The greater portion of the membership had absolutely no knowledge of his intention until immediately after the regular evening service was concluded at which time Rev. Adams made known his intention.

His resignation will take effect on the first of May, and he will leave with his wife for Japan some time during the early fall. It is not known just how long he will remain in Japan in fact he does not know himself.

Rev. Adams and his splendid wife have become a part of Burlington life and will be greatly missed by all whether or not members of his congregation. Not only has he been a splendid pastor, but he is one of the best pulpit orators and scholars to whom the people of Burlington have ever had the pleasure of listening, as a regular pastor. He will finish his degree work at the Southern Baptist Seminary at Louisville, this spring.

Since Rev. Adams advent in Burlington church work, the Sunday school attendance and church membership has nearly doubled, and the man who attempts to fill his place will start with a splendidly organized constituency. Probably his most notable work was in the organization of the Young Men's Bible Class, which at one time had enrolled over one hundred members.

Next Sunday morning the service will be for members only, while at the evening service the pulpit will be occupied by Rev. C. R. Pittard, a special friend of Bro. Adams.

PUPIL WINS OVER TEACHER AT SHOW

Ky. Pupil Wins Over Teacher in National Seed Corn Show

An instance of pupil surpassing teacher is pointed to the case of J. C. Harris of McCracken county, Ky., who won the state sweepstakes in the National Seed Corn Show held in Chicago under the auspices of the Sears-Robuck Agricultural Foundation.

Harris, who is a mere youth, residing at Keok, was taught in school by Emerson Jett, also of Keok, who is proprietor and owner of the Goodrich Farm, farming in summer and teaching in winter. Both had entries in the show, and when the results were announced young Harris was found in first place in the state, while Jett had the second best ear in the McCracken county exhibit.

All but 13 states levy a gasoline tax. The average amount paid annually is $10.30 per vehicle. Nearly 50 millions of the 80 millions paid by gas users was appropriated for road construction and maintenance.

APRIL GRAND JURY ADJOURNED THURSDAY

To Hon. Sidney Gaines, Circuit
Judge:

We, your Grand Jury, empaneled for the April 1925, term of Boone County Court, beg leave to report: We have been in session four days, have returned 10 indictments after examining 20 witnesses and investigating all violations of the law brought to our attention.

The public property was examined by us in accordance with your instructions. The County Infirmary, in charge of Supt. Rouse is in splendid condition and the inmates well taken care of. The county jail and the court house, both in charge of Jailor Fowler, are in excellent shape, clean and carefully looked after. We have no recommendations as to improvements in any of these buildings and we believe the public is to be congratulated for having such painstaking custodians.

A great deal of our time has been taken up in attempting to provide a satisfactory solution for the dog law which seems to be disregarded by so many of our citizens.

We have examined the list of owners of dogs of date July 1, 1924, as made by the County Tax Commissioner and the list of all licenses issued to date by the County Clerk. We have on the Tax Commissioner's list checked off for whose dogs the license has been paid.

We have counted all those dogs assessed July 1, 1924 and all on which licenses have been paid for 1925, and by precincts they are as follows:

Assessed Precincts	Licensed
88 Bowler	3
120 Bellevue	30
207 Bullittsville	72
170 Burlington	70
123 Carlton	36
121 Constance	36

150 Hamilton	11
157 Petersburg	3
199 Union	53
149 Verona	64
170 Walton	20
Total	517

We have made lists by precincts of all those owning dogs July 1st, 1924, on which no license has been paid and filed them herewith with a copy of and suggest to the Fiscal Court that the same be delivered to the Sheriff with instructions to proceed as required by law.

We are in possession of information to the effect that there are many dog owners since January 1st, 1925, whose names do not appear on the Tax Commissioner's July 1, 1924 list. These also should be called to the Sheriff's attention.

We wish to thank all the court officials for their cooperation. Having concluded our labors we now ask to be finally discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
HUBERT WALTON Foreman

Attest:
WALTER GRUBBS Clerk.

Supt. J. C. Gordon will not be in his office until Saturday May 2nd, as he will be attending the R. E. A. at Louisville.

APRIL TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT FINISHED FRIDAY

SPRING TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT ENDS FRIDAY

In Session Less than Five Days

The regular April term of Circuit Court for Boone County closed last Friday evening with the final formality of the signing of orders by Judge Gaines at about 6 o'clock.

Although there was very little business transacted which required the services of a jury, at the same time quite a lot of equity business was placed on the order book.

The Master Commissioner executed nine deeds for land sold, which is the greatest number of these instruments ever to be executed by him at one term. Seven judgments and orders for sale of real estate were placed on the record awaiting his execution.

Five judgments of divorce were granted, which is the greatest number of judgments of this nature rendered at any one term for the past few years.

The Commonwealth obtained four judgments for liquor violations and one for carrying a pistol, which included a jail sentence.

The grand jury returned ten indictments, six being for violations of the liquor laws, three for unlawful operation of motor vehicles, and one for grand larceny.

Cited For Contempt

In the case of the Equitable Bank & Trust Co., of Walton vs. Walter S. Kinnman, the defendant was tried Friday morning for the alleged offense of violation of a restraining order, which purported to restrain him from selling his tobacco over the Kenton Lane Lent Farm. He was fined $10.00.

Important Verdict For Chester Hill

While there were no jury cases of any consequence to come to trial, there was an issue out of chancery tried involving in the settlement of the estate of the late John W. Hill. The proof showed that John W. Hill and his son Chester Hill purchased a farm near Idlewild in this county during the year 1919, and at the same time entered into a certain contract defining the rights of each as joint owners of said farm.

It was the contention of Chester Hill that this contract had been cancelled by agreement during the life time of his father. The question in the case was as to whether or not this contract had been cancelled and the jury was instructed to answer "Yes" or "No." The verdict of the jury being "Yes," established the right of Chester Hill as a joint owner of said land, which will amount after the payment of a certain mortgage indebtedness to about four or five thousand dollars to him.

Chester Hill was represented by Attorneys B. H. Riley and John L. Vest, while the administrator and creditors were represented by S. W. Tolin and Chester M. Jewett and M. C. Swinford of Cynthiana.

SEWING MACHINE AGENT IS PLACED IN JAIL

County Attorney B. H. Riely was called to Wal on last Monday morning to prosecute a charge for the Commonwealth against one J. W. Haskell for fraudulent misrepresentation as a sewing machine salesman. Squire Bollinger, before whom the examining trial was held, bound the defendant over to the August grand jury and in default of bond he was brought to Burlington and placed in the county jail by Deputy Sheriff Thos. Person.

The facts developed in the case were that a local salesman had employed Haskell to sell machines on a commission basis, but it appeared that the defendant had come out and sold machines in and about Walton taking in trade chickens and various other articles, keeping them himself and leaving the local agent, Mr. Porter to hold the bag.

ETIQUETTE OF THE HAT

Without consulting any of the authorities on etiquette, we will answer the question, "When is the proper time for an to lift or remove his hat?" for the benefit of our readers. At the following times and on the following occasions, respectfully, the hat should be removed or lifted as the circumstances indicate: When mopping the brow; when taking a bath; when eating; when going to bed; when taking up a collection; when having the hair trimmed; when being shampooed; and when standing on the head.

Judge J. M. Lansing, who has passed the winter in "sunny St. Petersburg, Fla., was in Burlington Monday.

ONE DAY LATE

Most of our readers received their Rembrandt one day late last week due to the fact that our press was out of adjustment and we were unable to get it in working order for the issue, which we were compelled to send to Cincinnati for printing. We are installing some new motors in the office this week preparing for connection with high tension current, and while we are not making any rash promises we hope to get the issue out of the office according to regular schedule.

LETTERS RECEIVED BY THE RECORDER

W. H. Williamson and J. Stanley Cloud Former Residents write
The Recorder

Uniontown, Ky., April 10, 1925,
Editor Boone County Recorder:

Not having much to do on writing just a little about a trip I made in this part of the country last Sunday afternoon. We left Uniontown about 12 o'clock on our way to Henderson, passing thru Morganfield, Waverly and Corydon, all pretty little towns. This is surely a very pretty country, level and some fine roads. They have nice farmers and all kinds of machinery to work with. A lot of hogs and cattle are raised—they just turn their hogs out and let them run wild until time for market. Corn and tobacco are raised here but not like that raised in Boone county. Three coal mines are in this town but not much work going on for the miners are out on a strike. Uniontown is just three miles from the Dam which is also a very pretty place. Fine buildings are on this reservation with plenty of work. Boone county is well represented here. Shelton Stephens, "Chingie Boyer," Ed. Lampin, J. L. Williamson, Sam Williamson, Cornelius Pope and Red Ryle are working on the Dam. Several from Rising Sun are employed on the Dam. Henderson is a nice town. We made the round trip in less than four hours. Wishing all my Boone Co. friends good luck.

W. H. WILLIAMSON
Editor Boone County Recorder

Dear Sir:

"No doubt you will be surprised to hear from a native of Boone county who left there when only a boy 28 years ago. I have circled the globe and have traversed the entire United States with Teddy Roosevelt at San Juan Hill (Santiago Cuba) and through the "Chingie Boyer" spring in China besides having assisted in the construction and maintenance of all Telephone, Telegraph and Cable systems in the Philippines during the Insurrection, also having done field photography during the war.

I have since 1902 followed the "road" in engine train and yard service in practically all parts of the U. S. and parts of Mexico.

As you will see from my letterhead I have settled in Houston Texas and own and operate an auto supply and garage concern, nevertheless I look back to Boone county Ky., as my home as much as any other place. I was back to Boone county, Ky., on a visit last October, the first time in 28 years, intended to visit Burlington then but had to leave unexpectedly for the East Coast of Florida (Cocoa Florida) where my brother and sister Robt. P. Cloud and Mrs. Alice E. Godbey now reside, they being engaged in Orange and Bee culture.

I intend to visit Kentucky in the near future and will pay the Recorder a visit. I remain

Sincerely Yours,
J. STANLEY CLOUD

Members of Burlington Lodge No. 264, F. & A. M., visited Petersburg Lodge No. 920 last Saturday evening, where they assisted the home lodge in raising two candidates to the degree of a Master Mason. Norris Berkshire and Henry Mathews were the candidates raised.

The Petersburg Lodge is the youngest Masonic Lodge in the county having been organized considerably less than a year, however they are growing rapidly and soon hope to be one of the strongest.

All members of the association will be invited to participate, but as the temporary rules of the meet now stand, each team will be limited to ten men.

The detailed order of events has not been definitely arranged, but the list will include the regular contests with some novelty events added.

Local arrangements will be given the teams, Georgetown College acting as host to the majority of the men. The remainder will be entertained in club houses. Local residents have also expressed a desire to aid in the entertainment.

As trophies there will be gold medals for first places, silver medals for seconds, and bronze medals for third places. In addition to these place medals there will be a silver loving cup for the individual high point man and a loving cup for the winning team.

The committee on arrangements is composed of Head Coach Hovatter Assistant Coach Long, and R. T. Hinton, Chairman of the Athletic Committee. As soon as plans are perfected information will be sent to all participants.

Prior to this time the meet has been held at the University of Kentucky, but the condition of the track there makes it impossible for them to act as hosts this year.

TAXES ON FARM PROPERTY
 U. S. Department of Agriculture economists have been studying the taxation of farm and city property in several counties in Indiana. They find that the farms pay a higher rate of taxation than is paid by city property.

It is also pointed out that the farm people do not get as much in the way of service from the municipal governments as the city dwellers get. The same conditions probably exist in most of the states.

It may be objected that this unfortunate situation is inevitable, as public services can be provided less expensively for a crowded territory than for one where the residents are scattered. But if they want to encourage people to move out of the country and produce food at a low cost, they should devise some method by which the tax burden on rural property can be reduced.

PAYING THE PRICE
 Life conducts no bargain counters, nor no cut-rate sales. Everything in life has its fixed price. Plain figures and every man and woman must pay for what they get. It is an immovable law and you can't beat it. There are no exceptions and the state of limitations does not apply.

Would you have health? You must practice self-denial and curb your appetite and go to bed nights instead of attending wild parties.

Would you have riches? The price is labor and thrift—hard work and a regular saving. Too many of us spend our earnings before they are received.

Would you have friends? The price ticket calls for a generous helping hand to those in trouble—a willingness to share the joys and sorrows of those about you.

Would you have love? You must keep yourself personally attractive, interesting, amiable, friendly. Nobody loves a slouchy, sloppy man or a peevish, nagging woman.

Would you have a happy home? The price ticket calls for domesticity. You must feel that your place is home instead of at the poker game; you must look after your wife as your partner; a woman must make the home comfortable, learn to be thrifty and economical, and supply good food for the family. Nagging will drive any man from a company.

Would you have fine clothes? The price store is self-sacrifice. You must give them nearly twenty years of your life and the price of a car, before they are firmly fixed on the right spot.

Just at this time it is because fathers and mothers are unwilling to pay the price of parenthood that so many boys and girls go astray. I have seen all that we get out of life when we put in, but the fact is we get out of life just what we put in.

Would you have more money? Money is paid in some money counter or in some other way. Money is not paid in some money counter or in some other way. Money is not paid in some money counter or in some other way.

Would you have a better life? The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life.

Would you have a better life? The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life.

Would you have a better life? The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life.

Would you have a better life? The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life. The price is a better life.

COUNTRY TOWN HONESTY

A lady who has resided for many years in a large city, was speaking the other day about the kind of treatment she got from the stores in that community. She was not complaining of the big stores that succeeded by advertising, but referred to many of the smaller places near her home where she has to resort for food and other supplies. According to her story, she had to look out all the time for fear she would be cheated, and a great many of the people in business seemed to be wholly unscrupulous.

She remarked that conditions were very different from what they were in the country town from which she came, where people seemed usually to be honest and to take pride in giving good goods.

A man who was present and whose home is in a small town, remarked that the business people in that town seemed almost always to be honest. He said in a number of recent instances he had had to correct the additions they had made, in which they had charged him too little for the various items he had had.

It is probable that people who dwell in large cities pay a considerable additional toll, as the result of the current tendencies toward dishonesty. Merchants of standing would not cheat, but there are many stores with irresponsible proprietors or clerks, who probably expect to make a good deal on the side by petty graft.

Conditions in a country town are favorable to honest dealing. Most of the people who work in business places have been under the helpful influence of churches and schools, and they do not want to cheat if they could. There may be some everywhere who have a crooked tendency, but such ones are restrained by the fact that the chances for getting found out are greater in the country than in the city. There is real satisfaction in business dealings on this basis of mutual confidence, and one comes rather getting what he pays for.

THREE WAYS TO PUSH BUSINESS.
 1.—The old time business man, when he started on his patient but slow way of doing business, was very sure of himself. He got our share of it.

That represented a certain faith in the future that was commendable, but there was not much ambition in it. If he only got his share of trade, he might not be able to support himself and his family. In the majority of places it has commonly been said that there were too many engaged in trade, and many have always had to quit because they could not make it pay.

2.—The old time business man commonly hoped to win his way by establishing a reputation for faithfulness and reliable dealing. That was a good spirit, and wholly commendable as far as it went, but it called only for a very slow kind of progress. The populations change so much in modern towns, that the faithful old reliable may make little appeal to newcomers, who are not familiar with his record of honest service. Also, as people in these days will not be tied down to any one particular place.

3.—The modern way of winning success, calls for just this same faithful service and even more of it, but it expects to win a great new volume of trade by pushing for it. The public wants not merely old fashioned fidelity, but it looks for enterprise and hustle and service, and for the efficiency which requires a considerable sized volume of business.

The old plodding methods were admirable as far as they went, but they were slow and not efficient. Today a business must also plan for sales efficiency. That is to be had by interesting so many people in the goods distributed by a firm, that those goods can be handled at a minimum of expense. The way to accomplish that sales efficiency, is by advertising, intelligently and continuously.

FIGHTING THE RANDITS
 A correspondent of the New York Times, speaking of the case with which bandits and burglars are operating, remarks that a good way to get at these people would be to meet them by the same inducement they are after, that is by the use of money.

He would have big rewards offered for information against these people, and believe that thieves are constantly falling out and would give each other away, for sufficient inducement.

Society can well afford to spend money freely against those who are making war on the community, and money is a weapon that a lawless man will not be quite able to meet.

INSANITY TRIALS

Dorothy Ellington has been declared insane by a jury in San Francisco and will not have to stand trial for the murder of her mother, last January.

A long and expensive trial was held. Besides regular court expenses there were attorneys' fees for state and defense and high priced psychiatrists.

The same end could have been reached in much less time and at greatly reduced expense by determining in advance whether the girl was in her right mind. Common judgment says that she was not, else she, at 17, could never have killed her mother.

The state of Massachusetts has solved the problem of the criminal insane with a law which requires a psychiatric examination and "study of every person indicted by a grand jury for a capital offense, or any person who is known to have been indicted for any other offense more than once, or to have been previously convicted of a felony."

Not long ago a prominent citizen of a Boston suburb was found murdered, and in the cellar of his home was found his brother-in-law, a brilliant young physician, semi-conscious from knife wounds. He blamed the burglar for the murder and his own wounds, but subsequently, he was indicted for the crime.

A committee of psychiatrists was appointed and examined him. They made a report to the state's attorney, a jury was impaneled and the facts were outlined. The state's attorney wisely recommended the finding of the psychiatrists be followed, finding the defendant insane. The jury did, and he was committed to the criminal insane hospital for life. The trial consumed less than a half day.

How much more logical that was than in the case of the Ellington girl, in which the state contended she was sane. When will the law free itself from red tape and begin using common sense in disposing of such cases?

Bids will be received for building an addition to the Boone County High School building in Burlington, Ky., until 12 o'clock noon May 30th, 1925.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the following places: Douglas Deposit Bank, Burlington, Ky.; The Advance Mill Co., Covington, Ky.; Mayhugh Manufacturing Co., Walton, Ky.

The plans and specifications will be ready by May 1st, 1925, which may be had on deposit of five dollars. The school board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

All bids shall be accompanied by certified check to the amount of three (3) per cent of bid to be returned to unsuccessful bidders.

SPRING MEDICINE
 Many of the housewives of former years used to make it a practice to dose the whole family with certain standard spring medicines every year. Many children would be lined up regularly to drink a cup brewed from bitter herbs supposed to be good for the excretories of that season. They used to put up some doleful pleas to be excused from this requirement, and make up some pitiful faces after they had swallowed the acid stuff.

Your family doctor would have to tell you how much value those remedies had. But there are certain forms of spring medicine that all authorities would pronounce to be of the highest worth, and many of them do not cost a cent.

One of these useful spring medicines is called Quack-Air, and another is called Oat Meal. Many folks who have become sluggish as the result of staying too much indoors, should get out and gain the benefits of these medicines.

The physicians all say they are the most useful and best, and they have the most evidence of it along about election time.

About this time the American people begin to burn up their largest crop of hay, and it is a fact that the hay is the most valuable of all the hay crops.

FIRST STEP TOWARD A SOLUTION OF DOG PROBLEM

The grand jury which adjourned last Thursday afternoon filed a most auspicious report. That report is a harbinger of better days to come for the sheep owners of Boone county, and days that are not so rosy for the dog owner, who refuses to license his dog.

The report shows quite a discrepancy on the side of the balance sheet under the caption—"License," as compared with the number under the heading—"Assessed." Now there has always been more or less of a shortage in this report, but right now it is more flagrant than ever before, and the grand jury just adjourned decided to act, and for that very reason.

The grand juries for the past few years have had this subject up for discussion, but owing to the fact that it was such an everlasting job to return an indictment against each offender (and they were all busy men as a rule) they passed it up from term to term until even a greater number of those who had no license, decided to quit.

"Sheriff Hume was called before the jury, while in session, and directed to summons all those who had not purchased license by the first of June 1925, to appear before the Boone Circuit Court at its next term."

The grand jury is to be commended for this procedure.

150 YEARS AGO

Last Sunday April 19th was the One Hundred and Fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Lexington (Mass.) which marked the auspicious beginning of the immortal revolution in which our freedom was gained from the Yoke of Great Britain. How many Americans thought of it? Less than one in a hundred we venture to say.

This assumption does not indicate that our people do not appreciate the sacrifices of our forefathers, but tends to prove that the American people of today are living in the future instead of in the past.

FORGET THE YESTERDAYS

A condition precedent to success in every line of endeavor is admission to oneself that it is possible to achieve a desired result, provided always that that result is in accord with right and justice. It is useless to attempt to accomplish that which we conceive to be impossible; for manifestly, one can never succeed until he has first acknowledged to himself that what he attempts is possible, not only to others, but to himself, also.

"I can't" never has succeeded; and it never will. The very thought, the very expression, "I can't" is an admission of defeat at the outset; and no amount of effort will ever make achievement possible, unless and until one has first admitted the possibility of accomplishment.

A young man ran for the legislature in Illinois, and was badly swamped.

He next entered business, failed, and spent several years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged—then she died.

Entering politics again, he ran for Congress, and was badly defeated. He then tried to get an appointment to the United States land office, but failed.

He became a candidate for the U. S. Senate, and was defeated. Then he became a candidate for Vice-Presidency and was once more defeated.

One failure after another—bad failures—great setbacks. Then he became one of the greatest men of America—Abraham Lincoln.

When things look darkest and clouds loom on the horizon the fighting man puts behind him all the yesterdays as water over the dam; he faces the rising sun with a smile of welcome as the offer of a new opportunity, a fresh chance—and if he's right in his heart he will win.

COMMUNITY CENTERS

In recent years there has been a marked development in the community life of our people. There is an ever-growing realization of the mutual interests of those living in the same neighborhood and under similar conditions. Many progressive municipal governments and semi-public organizations, in recognition of this fact are providing community houses or centers, where the people generally may meet for social entertainment and for the discussion of those subjects and questions of common interest and importance.

This is true not only of rural communities and smaller towns, it is also true of many of our larger cities of which Philadelphia is a conspicuous example. And the influence of this modern community spirit is being reflected in a happier, better informed, more contented citizenship.

It would seem that these conditions present an opportunity for a valuable civic service, of which many fraternal societies and churches might well avail themselves more generally. In the encouragement of their rooms and buildings for all appropriate community occasions. This time is rapidly approaching when we must break away from old and hostile prejudices and face the new day and live in peace with an open mind and fearless faith. Control and the conditions before they control you.

THE MIDDLEMAN

Many there are who, knowing the price received by the producer for a given article, and the price they pay as the final consumer, compute the difference as a toll taken by a distributor, and it is constantly concluded that he gets a return out of all proportion to the service he renders.

This has been common to most consumers since the war because during those hectic days, when prices mounted so rapidly, the middleman was denounced as profiteer and robber, and he was strongly advocated that steps be taken to eliminate him from business.

The profession is an old, honorable and useful one, dating back at least to the days of Pharaoh in Egypt, when Joseph prudently set aside a fifth of the grain harvest each year for the seven of plenty, held it in store, and distributed it as needed in the lean years.

The Bible does not say that Joseph was charged with being a profiteer, but he probably was.

The great difficulty is that there is so much misinformation abroad about the processes involved in bringing commodities from their source of origin and delivering them to the points of consumption.

Those who are quick to criticize the price the distributor charges overlook the important fact that between origin and consumption hundreds, perhaps thousands, of miles intervene; that in between countless services are performed, all necessary in our present stage of development.

THE SAME OLD DELUSION

Taxpayers who have dreams of lower taxes through smaller valuations are due for a jolt when it comes time to pay the taxes because taxes do not depend on arbitrary values placed on physical property by appraisement.

The old delusion will never wear off. So many property owners still cling to it as the panacea for all of their taxation ills.

The amount of taxes levied is dependent entirely upon the amount of money required to run the government, local, township, county, state and federal.

As long as our present system of taxation prevails, government expenses will be the measure of taxes needed.

If valuations decline, as the result of new appraisements, expenses remaining the same, the tax rate will be higher. If valuations are increased, the tax rate will be lower, but the amount assessed will be increased. If the expense of government does not vary.

This is a law that can't be escaped. No end of slicing down taxation values will change it.

The only way to reduce taxes is to reduce government expenditures. This is a fact that every taxpayer should remember instead of building up false hopes when new appraisements are made.

While first steps have been taken toward a scientific valuation of coal properties in Kentucky, this being in Letcher county, the anti-administration forces still are concentrating on a plan to make a fight, both in favor of a tonnage or percentage tax on coal, and to destroy the commission control of racing, at the next session of the General Assembly.

They realize that they cannot achieve either end, nor will they be satisfied with a straight-out vote on the two issues. What they are driving at is to fog up every other matter that comes before the Legislature, and to cause a situation which they hope will lead to the nomination of a candidate for Governor who will be on the side of the present "outs" in the Democratic party for the 1927 Governor's race.

That is, to keep up a wordy fight throughout the session, when the newspapers which publish their propaganda can cause feuds and ill will which will undermine the hold-that the Governor and his friends now have on the party.

In the meantime, Kentucky coal interests threatened though they have been by state politicians, are even more in fear of national action. The Interstate Commerce Commission is to conduct a hearing April 27 and 28 at Washington, which is fraught with the gravest consequences for the entire industry, which gives employment to more than 300,000 persons in this commonwealth, in mining and collateral trades and occupations.

This hearing is to deal with a proposed differential which, if authorized, Kentucky coal men contend, would deal virtually a death blow to Eastern as well as Western Kentucky coal measures. This differential is a freight charge of 73 cents a ton, to be enforced against Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee, and in favor of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

The largest tonnage tax ever offered in Kentucky has been 10 cents a ton, and the average has been 5 cents. It is also understood that Marshall E. Vaughn, of Berea, Representative from Madison county in the 1921 session, and recognized leader in the House of the fight to impose a tonnage tax, will not propose any such measure in 1926, if re-nominated and re-elected, and that he has been convinced the coal industry in Kentucky is in such a disorganized condition, and at such a low ebb, with many recent bankruptcies reported, that it cannot at this time stand a tonnage tax.

But with 73 cents a ton imposed by the Federal Government, Kentucky's coal production of 43,000,000 tons, it is predicted, would be cut the first year to less than 14,000,000 tons, virtually putting two thirds of the present operations out of business.

Certainly one of the most prominent political figures in the state, Democrats as well as Republicans, are going to Washington, to make an appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission, a week from next Monday, to refuse to enact such a differential. It is seldom that a railroad opposes an increase of freight rates, but in this case all of the railroads in Kentucky are joining in the protest.

The Letcher county plan, above referred to, and which will be available at the offices of the State Tax Commission within a few days, is that of the United States Geological Survey. They have zoned every coal vein or area in the county, and have marked producers and undeveloped territory, with a value per inch in each vein set out.

It is understood that this method of valuing coal properties will be extended to every mountain of that section.

Kentucky is now collecting $3,000,000 or more annually in gasoline taxes, at a cost to the state of approximately $12,000.

The tax is assessed by the state on the first person to sell the gasoline in the state, and the Tax Commission is equipped, by law, with the necessary power to examine railroad records, way bills, &c., to find out how much gasoline a person actually receives.

Governor Fields at present has no appointment to make on the State Board of Charities and Corrections, who must be a Republican. Among those who have been strongly recommended for the position are E. A. Weber, of Fort Thomas, and Lawson Eno, of Owensboro.

The Governor's selections for the Board have, so far, met with the approval of even some of the most malignant of his critics, in the past.

Each county in Kentucky will receive $2,200 from the State Treasury shortly after July 1, 1925, as its share of a new fund, established by an increase in license fees, on trucks, due to a law passed by the 1924 General Assembly.

There already is $714,000 in the fund, which is to be divided equally between the state and counties for maintenance of road funds. Quite a number of the smaller counties have on the average of $15,000 a year or less, for road maintenance now, so that it will be quite a respectable pick-up for some of them.

The law failed to state specifically when the money should be paid to the counties, but Auditor Shanks and Attorney General Frank Daugherty have conferred, and agreed that this should be done soon after the close of each fiscal year.

SELFISHNESS

Working together for the betterment of the community is little short of a waste of time unless individual selfishness is eliminated.

Everyone admires the man who is continually seeking means to improve his business, but he will have few admirers if he seeks to profit at the expense of community enterprise.

While a certain amount of selfishness motivates every piece of public spirited work it is on a higher plane and places the common welfare above individual betterment.

Every man engaged in movements to increase the population of the United States has no more selfishness than the man who works for direct benefits and holds his interests above those of the whole community. He is a drawback and should not slow up the procession.

The quashing of the indictments against ex-Secretary of Interior, Fall, Harry Sinclair, Edward Doheny and E. L. Doheny, Jr., came as an anti-climax to the exciting scandals of last summer in the Teapot Dome investigation. The guilt or innocence of the men was left out of the question entirely, when Chief Justice McReynolds dismissed the indictments on a legal technicality. Gaston B. Means, the man who stated that his business in life was "answering indictments" has not fared so well in the courts. Having been convicted and fined $10,000 on a charge of conspiracy recently, he is again before the courts to answer a new indictment brought against him—this time on a charge of forgery.

In announcing her candidacy to succeed her husband as Congresswoman from Massachusetts Mrs. Jacob Rogers is the first woman to succeed three of our congressmen, Mrs. Florence Kahn and Mrs. Mae Nolan of California, both elected to succeed their husbands, and Mrs. Winifred Mason Hauke of Illinois, who finished the unexpired term of her father. Mrs. Rogers is prominent in Washington society and is fitted for her candidacy through her experience here while her husband was in the House of Representatives. Her home was a "mecca" of interesting people and because of her intense interest in politics she made the most of the opportunities which Washington afforded her and became well informed on the subjects with which she will have to deal if she is elected.

Charles W. Warren, twice defeated appointee for the Attorney-Generalship, is a member of the War Weeks committee. He has retired because of his ill health. It is rumored that Coolidge may decide to "call the bluff" of some of Warren's opponents in the recent fight in the Senate, who said that they would approve him for any other post in the Cabinet but that of Attorney General. It is doubtful, however, that Warren would accept the post if it should be offered to him, in which event Charles E. Hays, Republican National Committeeman from New York is considered the most likely successor to Weeks.

In accordance with the President's well-known economy policy, a survey is being made of all of the Government Departments, with a view to eliminating all expenses which are not absolutely necessary. Included in this investigation is the United States Employees Commission, whose activities have been carried out independently, and not under the supervision of any of the various Departments. Unusual interest is shown by the public in this Commission not only because of its splendid achievement, but also because it is the only U. S. Commission which has never been headed by a woman. The present chairman of the Commission is Mrs. Bessie Parker Bruggemann, one of the most prominent women in the Republican party. It is rumored that the Commission will either be done away with entirely, or placed under the supervision of some of the other Government Departments.

A new night court has been set up in Washington with an eccentric and interesting character, Judge George H. McDonald, to deal out justice to the erring culprits. His comments and pronouncements bid fair to make him as famous as a certain celebrated Judge of a decade ago in North Carolina, made prominent on the Vanderbilt stage. The cases which are brought before the night court consist largely of bootlegging and traffic violations.

BE A GOOD LISTENER

To be a good listener is one of the often ignored secrets of success.

Inevitably his listening ability counted for much in making easier Calvin Coolidge's progress from his Vermont village birthplace to the White House. It helped him by increasing his knowledge and understanding, it helped him by increasing the good will of others for him.

He who can listen courteously to what others have to say, by that very circumstance tends to impress others favorably. The opposite tendency comes into play when the listening ability is weak.

Governor Smith, of New York, has signed a bill providing for 3,400 miles of new highways in that State will have 14,000 miles of state highways.

The United States Steel Corporation is to make no more horsehoes. The demand for horsehoes has shriveled so much that the amount of steel entering into them does not interest the big corporation.

FRANCE IN A BAD WAY

The downfall of the Herriot ministry makes an ugly picture and France's Easter is not a happy one.

The Herriot ministry came into power nine months ago. It accomplished many commendable measures, but also developed the "bitter" opposition of the Catholic party. The chief cause of the downfall of the Ministry, however, was the proposition to levy a capital tax as a means of meeting maturing bonds. It developed that nine months before the Herriot Cabinet came into power the Bank of France began to issue additional circulating medium contrary to law, and this inflation was continued by the Herriot ministry. Publicity of the facts resulted in a vote of "lack of confidence" and the resignation of the cabinet.

As the matter now stands with billions of francs to be refunded to France bondholders within the next few days, the treasury will be hard up no matter who is in control of the government. It is earnestly hoped that out of the confusion a better order of things will ultimately be evolved, but the many conflicting parties, with their jealousies and emotionalism, constitute a stupendous and difficult problem for any ministry to solve.

MILITARY TRAINING

Each summer, as the time for the organization of the citizens' military training camps approaches, our attention is directed anew to the subject of preparedness. The training camp system is our strongest reliance in building up at short notice a citizen's army when a war emergency threatens. But there is another influence that contributes materially to the effectiveness of those camps and permits them to graduate their members with such a high degree of proficiency in the short time available for instruction. Many of the young men who enroll in the Army camps are high school students or have recently graduated from high schools. In most of those schools there are cadet organizations in which the boys get their first instruction in the use of arms and military tactics. In many of them not only the manual of arms and marching drill are taught, but the cadets are initiated into battle formation, rushing the enemy, offensive use of cover, and other accomplishments that make the efficient soldier.

In many of our school organizations Army officers are detailed as instructors and Army paraphernalia is loaned for the use of the cadet corps. The school authorities sanction the military exercises, but in too many instances military drill is not recognized as a part of the regular school curriculum. Credits are not given for military proficiency as for high standing in other studies, school hour periods are not allotted for military study, and the student is not properly encouraged to enroll in the cadet corps.

Compulsory military training is antagonistic to American democracy and students in our schools should not be coerced into it; nevertheless, military instruction should be elevated to the same plane as other subjects in the recognized school course.

The mental discipline that comes from instant obedience to commands the coordination of mind and body that unconsciously follows, and the training of the individual as one unit of an orderly mass, have a psychological value not found elsewhere in the school system.

The equipment of a student in worthy citizenship is decidedly lacking if he has been denied generous experience building. The indirect benefits from military instruction perhaps outweigh the direct, but the knowledge gained by the young cadets is of immense value to him and to his country should another emergency like that of 1917 confront us.

Every school superintendent and board of education should ponder the matter and accord to military drill the part which it rightly deserves in our system of public education.

FIGHTING THE WEEDS

A fine lawn is a wonderful setting for a pretty home, but to get that silky grass which decorates some carefully tended grounds, takes a good deal of study and vigilance. Every known kind of weed that is seen in this locality feels a desire to propagate itself in your lawn, and for some mysterious reason it often thrives and flourishes, while the grass is scarce and sickly.

A constant sowing of grass seed is one of the best ways to fight the weeds that infest the lawns. A veteran gardener was asked what was the best way to improve the ground of a certain house, the grass on which was being choked by fine weeds that seemed to occupy the entire soil.

"Just take a garden rake," was his reply, "and go over those weedy places and loosen up the soil, and then throw on grass seed." Many who have cared for fine lawns have done this over and over again, and by giving the grass a constant reinforcement, they have tired out the weeds, and induced them to move to easier battlegrounds.

Although the country as a whole shows a falling off in building per capita since January 1, the South shows an increase of 18 per cent.

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT

The April crop report for Kentucky issued here today by the local office of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics shows that the condition of wheat, rye, and pasture April 1, this spring, was much better than it was April 1, last year, but wheat and rye are somewhat below the 10-year average. The condition of wheat in Kentucky on April 1, this year, was 75 per cent of normal, while on April 1, 1924 it was only 57 per cent of normal and the 10-year average April 1 is 82 per cent. Rye condition April 1 this year was 81 per cent of normal while on April 1, 1924, it was 60 per cent and the 10-year average April 1 is 85 per cent. Pasture condition April 1, was 91 per cent of normal while on April 1, 1924 it was only 63 per cent.

The acreage of wheat sown in Kentucky in the fall of 1924 for harvest in 1925 was 651,000 acres, from which will have to be deducted the abandonment up to May 1, 1925, when the report on abandonment will be made. In the fall of 1923

620,000 acres of wheat were sown in Kentucky, from which only about 484,000 acres were finally harvested in 1924. Rye acreage (including only that sowed for grain) for both years was about 16,000 acres.

Hired farm labor in Kentucky is 86 per cent of a normal supply compared to 79 per cent April 1, 1924, while the farmers report their demands hired labor are about 89 per cent of normal, the same as on April 1, 1924. Wages have declined slightly and farmers say they are hiring as few men as possible, because they cannot afford to pay the wages demanded with their products selling as low as they are.

The average condition of winter wheat for the entire United States April 1, 1924, 18.8 per cent on normal on April 1, 1924, it was 82 per cent and on April 1, 1923, it was 75 per cent, the average for the past ten years being 81.2 per cent. The average condition of rye on April 1, 1925, was 88.4 per cent of normal against 82.5 per cent on April 1, 1924, 88.1 per cent on April 1, 1923, and an average condition April 1 for the last ten years of 87.1 per cent. The condition on April 1, this year forecasts a production of approximately 61,652,000 bushels, the estimated production in 1921 was 62,416,000 bushels; the 1923 crop 63,077,000 bushels; and the average for the past five years 70,410,000 bushels.

Condition of the Early Lamb Crop As Of April 1, 1925

Weather and feed conditions during March were very favorable in nearly all of the important early spring lamb production areas. As a result, the early spring lamb crop made exceptional growth to April 1, and the market promises to be several weeks earlier than last year and earlier than normal. The early crop, both as a percentage of ewes and in actual numbers, is large and with continuing favorable weather will be of unusually good quality.

Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia

Conditions of both weather and feed were exceptionally good in March. Tennessee pastures are reported as never better for the time of year and the lambs are in the best of condition in some years. Considerable effort has been directed improving the quality of the lamb crop and the promise is of an early movement of good quality lambs. In April, myself, estimated the volume by May 15. In Kentucky the percentage of lambs saved is high and with plenty of green pasture available, the lambs have made good growth. A large movement by the latter half of May is indicated. Favorable Virginia conditions forecast a considerable movement to market early in June.

Idaho and Washington
March was very favorable for the early lamb crop in Idaho and the early lambs are nearly all out on the range. The range feed is growing nicely but more rain will soon be needed. In Washington comparatively dry weather in March and cool nights have delayed somewhat the growth of spring grasses.

Summary of Conditions.

From all regions, except Texas and the southwest, feed and weather conditions as of April 1, were reported as very favorable and the prospects for a lambing in April unusually promising.

Not true that the American people spend all their time fox trotting, as they spend a good deal of it in globe trotting also.

STAYING ALL NIGHT WITH BILLIE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

MY FRIEND Ray has a car and a kindly, generous disposition. Yesterday he asked me to go riding with him, and as I know how to drive he gave me the wheel and told me to choose my own road. Almost unconsciously I steamed—or shall I say gasped—away toward my old boyhood haunts through green lanes flanked with neatly trimmed orange hedgegroves, over country byroads bordered with sweet clover and blooming with purple spiderworts.

As we were driving along we came upon a beautiful place. I did not recognize the farm at first, but just as we were slipping by I caught a glimpse of the old house, which had been moved back to give place to the new, which was now used as a tool house, and I remembered that it was the old (flood) place.

The sight of the dismantled house recalled vividly to my memory a night that I had spent within its walls.

I was teaching in the district, and it was the custom of the pupils to invite the teacher home to stay all night at least one evening during the term. It was Billie Olcott who asked me to his house one winter evening.

The thermometer was twenty below, but the kitchen stove was red hot, the heated room in the house was none too large, so I was not uncomfortable at the evening meal or later when we sat around the fire and played games. It was when I was ushered off to the spare bedroom to spend the night alone, that I began to experience the rigors of the climate.

The house walls were as thin as paper; I presume the bed had not been slept in previously during the winter; I could feel the wind whistling in under the door and through the loose windows. My preparation for bed was neither formal nor prolonged; such religious rites as I was accustomed to perform were deferred until I was well under the covers. It was like crawling between sheets of ice. I should have been no colder had I been tossed garmentless into a snowbank. I pushed my feet down, but they were so cold I could stand it only a short time. I pulled them up and the bed had been partially warmed by my body, but their cramped position soon rendered them numb. I slept but little after daylight, when I knew by the sound that someone was afoot, I struggled into my clothes and stumbled out to the kitchen to wash and to thaw myself out.

"I expect it was a little chilly out in your room," Mrs. Olcott suggested to me in a kindly tone at breakfast. "Well, I didn't suffer from the heat," I admitted.

Things are quite different now, as one could easily see, bowling by the new house as I was. There is steam heat and running water and electric lights and screened-in porches and a bathroom and all sorts of improvements and conveniences. I wondered as I drove home if farmers are more contented than they used to be.

MARTHA KOTTMYER, DEAD

Martha Kottmyer, (nee Dolwick) passed away at her home here Monday, March 20th, after an illness of three months. She was born on March 16th, 1859 and lived here all her life. She was married to Capt. Henry Kottmyer on May 25, 1881, and to this union were born seven children, three of them having passed away. She leaves to mourn her death a faithful husband, one loving daughter, Mrs. Henrietta Craven of Latonia, Ky., who so patiently and faithfully took care of her mother for twelve long weeks, three sons Geo. Kottmyer, Oliver Kottmyer and Henry Kottmyer, Jr., twelve grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. The funeral services were held at the house on April 2nd at 2 o'clock by Brother Runyan and burial at Hebron cemetery. "Sleep on dear mother, take your rest. We miss you most who loved you best. Runyan for his comforting words, and also the undertaker Allison.

A COMIC PAGE OFFICIAL
An Indiana town marshal of the comic page type heard some wag say that someone should shoot at a man asleep in the railroad station and frighten him.
Acting on the spur of the moment and probably with the idea of showing the world that he could fire a revolver when he pleased, the town marshal shot in the general direction of the sleeping man.

The bullet hit the wall about 20 inches above the man and as he was rising the marshal's pistol was accidentally exploded, he says, and the bullet took effect in the man's brain killing him almost instantly.

All of which demonstrates that it is not always safe for sworn officers of the law to carry firearms, much less citizens without any authority or right under the law to do so.

The town marshal is quoted as regretting the act. Doubtless he does, but that does not bring the dead man back to life.

There has been altogether too much brandishing of concealed weapons during the past few years by citizens who will have to be placed about the carrying of revolvers.

Likewise, this demonstration of poor judgment indicates that those who have the authority to select men to uphold the majesty of the law should use the greatest care, else the law is going to suffer in the eyes of those who are expected to obey it.

Choosing One's Work

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

YEARS ago, when Mr. W. E. Curtis was writing his remarkable and interesting series of articles for the Chicago Record-Herald, one of his men who was training in the gentle art of composition consisted of six months in the country school and whose travels had taken him at one time as far as the Vesperburg, Ind., came to further and announced that he was going to give up agricultural pursuits.

"What are you intending to do?" father asked. "I think I'll take up newspaper writing," he answered, "like this man Curtis. It looks easy. It's good pay, I guess, and I'd give a fellow a chance to see the world."

"No doubt," was my father's reply. A boy should begin early to think about how he is to earn his living, even if the chances are that he may never have to.

Every one ought to do the work he likes. Every profession and occupation involves about so many unpleasant and distasteful duties, and if one cannot do at his work with eagerness and enthusiasm, if he must drag himself to it with regret and reluctance, if he were always wishing that he were through with it, these unpleasant things are magnified a hundred fold. If a man likes his work it is half done; if he does it because he must or simply to earn a living he has a sad outlook.

Whatever a young fellow takes up, it should be his own choice. Fathers and mothers, and suggest, but they should not dominate the choice. It is natural that the proud father, trampling his young heir ahead of him in a perambulator, should plan a definite and successful future for him, but it is the boy himself who must live the life, and do the work, and in the end succeed or fail, and it is he who should make the choice.

Every one should choose the work for which he is best fitted. The accurate and honest analysis of one's own talents is not an easy matter, but it should at least be attempted. "I love it, in one of his essays, says: "We are delighted in the cradle, perhaps earlier, and it is in finding out that our years are spent wisely. It is the vain endeavor to make ourselves what we are not that has strewn history with so many broken purposes and lives left in the rough."

The railroads are handling more traffic at this time than in any previous corresponding period on record. Loadings so far this year are 7.6 per cent above the same period of 1924, which was seasonally in advance of 1923. The bulk of the increase so far in 1925, compared with last year, has come principally from the manufactured products or commodities used by the manufacturing industry.

James Brown and little son James Franklin, of Pleasant neighborhood, were called at this office last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar H. Graves request me to return thanks through the columns of the Recorder to their many relatives and friends for the sympathy and help given during the illness and death of their son James Alvan, who departed this life April 13th, 1925. Permit me as his pastor to add that he was one among the group of young men who are helping to make the work in Hebron Lutheran church both pleasant and interesting. James Alvan gave evidence of a truly christian life and became obedient to the command "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy Youth." His sunny disposition and kindness of heart endured him to all who knew him. Thence may wither but the fragrance of the flower will long remain. Our loved ones may fade but as a leaf but the sweet influence of their lives will abide. "He is not dead, the child of our affection, but gone unto that school where he no longer needs our poor protection and Christ himself doth rule!"

Fashion Smiles on Trimmed Millinery

Fashion has fallen in love with trimmings. In spring and summer millinery—so much so that even the tailored hat refuses to do without adornments. All the flowers that bloom in the spring, summer and autumn contribute their joyous colors and delicacy to all sorts of hats but flowers never come into the world of fashion unattended, ribbons and laces always accompany them.

A little study of the three hats shown here—typical of the mode—will reveal that headwear, like all other more elaborate, "excent" for the hat, is not so much in the hat as in the trimmings. In high colors, white, about everything in millinery is trimmed one way or another and even on those fells, clusters of flowers or hat rosettes of ribbon are used in the dressier types of sports hats.

There is a pretty fad for wearing a button-hole bouquet of flowers to match those on the hat, or at least including a flower like those in the hat trimmings. Sometimes this small nosegay is attached to the hat by a length of very narrow ribbon, one end sewed in the head size and the other tied to the boutonniere. Or a cluster of flowers is worn on the cuff or lapel of the coat.

The crossword puzzle is most familiar to us, who started it.

LARGE FIRE RAZES MILL AT EMINENCE

MAIN MILL AND ELEVATORS ARE BURNED—FLAMES START IN COAL PILE

Citizens, Men From Country, And Rail Passengers Fight Grain Blaze—Shelbyville Sends Aid.

Eminence, Ky.—Fire destroyed an entire city block, causing damage of $125,000 at the Eminence Milling Company plant here.

The fire was discovered on the roof of the main building by children on their way to school, who, seeing the blaze, hurried to fire department headquarters and turned in the alarm, while employees of the mill worked unaware of the furnace which was roaring overhead.

The blaze gained great headway before the danger was realized, and it was impossible at any time to save the building, a three-story structure.
The fire department put its first stream on the blaze within five minutes after the first alarm.

The increasing danger brought in the second alarm and the second engine, realizing the inadequate supply of water from the fire cistern, made a connection into the Louisville & Nashville Railroad lake, which is directly behind this property.

Ten minutes later a third alarm was sounded. The steam engine responded and joined the second engine at the lake, where four streams of water were playing on the raging fire, which now had engulfed the main warehouse and was spreading into the engine room.

The blaze had now reached a point where the whole town seemed to be doomed. Across the side tracks, the main line and a short street, stood the Henry County Lumber Company, subsidiary of the Willett Lumber Company of Louisville, and the walls of this structure were blistered by the intense heat. The main structure of the mill company was now a mass of crumbled ruins and the adjoining warehouse was a roaring furnace.

Every male inhabitant of this city and the communities in the adjoining vicinity had come by the hundreds to lend their aid. Shelbyville, Newcastle, Pleasantville, Campbellsville, Cynthiana, Berea, and other places sent their men to help.

Nor were they idle, energetic efforts were made to save what was possible of the stock stored in the main shipping room, where thousands of pounds of flour and meal in sacks and barrels were awaiting shipment.

Directly behind the main building, six tile elevators were attacked by the blaze. Time and again men ventered these tanks and climbed ninety feet above to extinguish flames which threatened 90,000 bushels of grain. Water and smoke worked much damage here, thousands of dollars worth of grain being ruined, but the elevators and some of the grain may be saved.

The granaries alone were estimated to be worth $15,000. As the blaze in the main building began to die down the flames developed to the coal yard adjoining the engine room. These flames endangered the property of the Kwing Grist Mill, across an alley from the lumber company.

Constant effort had to be made to prevent ignition. Hundreds of men worked in the rear to save garages and stables. The threat of bursting boilers sent many seeking safety when the full smothering, 100 feet high, fell suddenly to the rear.

The corporation was controlled by J. C. Dumont, president; George Frend and A. D. Hudson, secretary and treasurer, capitalized value $200,000.
It employed more men than any other firm in the county. It was covered as fully as possible by insurance.

MAYOR TO SAVE SCHOOLS

W. Salisbury of Ashland, Says He Has Plan To Prevent Closing.

Ashland, Ky.—Mayor William Salisbury assumed the role of rescuer of the schools when he declared he has convinced plans whereby the Board of Education may immediately obtain the $70,000 needed to prevent the closing of the schools here.

When it was reported to the Mayor that one of the leading bankers of the city had offered to wager that the Mayor could and would supply the needed funds within thirty minutes after the Court of Appeals renders its decision, Mayor Salisbury declared he would do that very thing, but he refused to disclose his plan until the court acts on the legality of an ordinance which apparently is the schools' last hope.

The Mayor said some of his enemies were trying to make it appear that he is opposing the school while on the other hand he is leaving no stone unturned to see that they get the needed money in a legitimate and legal manner.

Tax Collector Missing
Elkton, Ky.—Officers of three counties are searching for Frank Nickens, city tax collector of Morton's Gap, who has been missing. They wish to inquire about $1,000 in city funds, alleged to have disappeared mysteriously with Nickens. The sheriff of Todd County sought Nickens at the home of his daughter at Everett, this county. Upon his approach, Nickens is alleged to have fled into hills of Logan County. Officers of Todd, Logan and Hopkins counties are searching for the alleged fugitive.

ARE WE KEEPING OUR PROMISES AND HITTING THE TRAIL OF HONESTY AS WE SHOULD?

Now my friends—boys and girls
—if I should meet you face to face —and ask the question contained in the above title, that I have used for a subject for a "writing" for your benefit this week, I am afraid some of you would be highly incensed or insulted and maybe the boys would want to have a little "Round" or two with your humble writer—but are we? I do not mean to say, that you are worse or maybe not as bad as some of the older callous experts in trickery and crime and you do not mean to be untruthful or dishonest, of course not! but I am sorry to say—it is an inborn human imperfection trait or habit that was drafted within our poor, weak and insignificant Human natures thru' the noted well known event of the "Downfall of the human race." How easy it is to make a promise to do this—that—or the other today, tomorrow, or next week but, is it always easy to keep those obligations?
Right here is where the Temper—which I think—if truly analyzed and termed—would be—our own selfish weakness for doing pleasant and agreeable things most convenient to us—against the disagreeable, binding obligations we have placed upon ourselves thru the natural weakness of the love of flattery, and to be flattered for the kindness so freely offered—forgetting that the have feeling of enemy caused by nonfulfilling those obligations with out apparent cause or reason—will be worse and harder to bear, than if those promises had not been given —which invariably loses confidence of our friends and those most interested—I am sorry to say, this propensity has been growing with disastrous effects—until I think, this old Habitation of abode, has reached the allotted time of debauchery that is the Divine and natural decree for Human life of action—and now, it is turning back slowly, surely—traveling over the narrow beaten track of the Patriots of old right —purity—equity and truth. "The business "Bulls and Bears" of Wall Street and Chambers of Commerce recognize this weakness in Human nature in their business dealings—for if we go to any of the National banks or business concerns—or $500 or do any important business, with any firm in the country now—where there is any obligation of promises—we have to give "good security" with our note—in black and white that we "promised to pay or under obligations to do for John Doe & etc." Take the old Eastern Quaker settlement of Virginia in even the History of our country of 100 years ago—with their queer, quaint and peculiar dialect simply their word of promise—altho small and unimportant it might have been.
—was as binding and Holy to them as the Bible itself—and a fixed punishment was meted out by them—for nonfulfilling such promises without a valid—plausible reason or cause—some of the promises we often make. It is said that the little insignificant innocent promises broken by the child of 10 years old —that we often laugh at and think funny, and are proud that he has such a keen wit of mind to even to try to get out of such obligations—is the seed which germinates into dishonesty and criminal offense—which grows as he advances in age —which I am sorry to say, is getting to be the popular code—not only in the social ranks—but in the commercial and political ranks as well —for if we wish trade of business or a political office, it is the progressive and up-to-date code to promise our constituents anything and everything to their interests—knowing that we will not—cannot—and have no intention of doing, to gain our aims, altho we consider ourselves moralists and christians too—with the distorted and far stretched idea —that anything is permissible in public life of ocial pleasure—business or politics, altho we see, the binding effects upon us more and more every day—thru such loose actions in the very fields of active culture and refined environments that could be in our social—commercial and political careers—by right doing of keeping the promises we make and hitting the trail of Honesty in so doing, and gaining the honor and glory of the friendship and confidence of all—of the begger and millionaire alike—but I hear my young friends say "what can we do to change this awful national wide all-powerful polluted state of degradation our country has got into?

We are young, weak and have no resource. Now boys and girls, you have just named two of the most powerful adjuncts to success with the hearts of mankind known——"young and weak" which contain resources for hearts—the callous—crusted and seared with selfishness and isolation, can resist—let a baby 4 or 5 years old put out his hands to friends or strangers for candy—who could resist the plea? Start a fire with a match—like the forest fires of the west—who can extinguish it? Remember it is said that there is not anyone but who has some influence in school or at home —in association of friendship—if we have influenced one for right and good—the fire has started and will consume all contammity in its way —so try it by keeping our own promises and telling others of your good resolutions. An always your friend.

THE CONVERSATIONAL ART.

A friend remarks that he thought he was a pretty good talker, and he felt he was fairly intelligent. "But I got in the other day," he said, "with some gifted people who showed me what the art of conversation really was. They passed their repartee and their discussion back and forth so fast that it reminded me of star tennis players batting the ball back and forth across the net without even letting it bounce. I just had to keep still and listen."

Some people despise the conversational art, and think that nothing but action and ability to do things counts. Some think that ability to talk fast is enough for them, even if they don't say anything in all the stream of words they pour forth.
The more correct point of view admires the deft readiness and finish-

MANY FARMERS IN ACCOUNTING CONTEST

System of Bookkeeping is Being Tried Out by Kentucky Farmers

Lexington, Ky.—Approximately 1,500 farm account books have been sent out this year by the Kentucky College of Agriculture, according to Prof. W. D. Nichols, head of the department of farm economics. This is more than were sent out in any one previous year, he said, and indicates a growing interest among farmers in keeping a book account of their business.

A farm accounting contest being conducted by the Extension Division of the College has been entered by more than 600 farmers in 18 counties. A total of $350 in cash prizes contributed by The Farmers Home Journal of Louisville, will be divided among the winners.

"This is the first contest of its kind ever attempted in the United States," Prof. Nichols said. "It is arousing interest in other states, from which inquiries have been received, asking for details in regard to its conduct. I believe that the contest will be a material factor in stimulating wide-spread interest in farm accounting, not only in this state, but in other states."

"The object of the contest is to stimulate interest in better business methods and practices on farms. Records enable farmers to know just where they stand in a business way. They show whether the business is making or losing money. They can also be used to show what enterprises are making or losing money. They also locate the strong and weak points of the business and suggest how the farm plans can be modified to make more money. They help to realize the aim of every good farmer; namely, to make his farm pay all business expenses, interest on the investment and a fair salary for the labor and management of the operator. Only by so doing can a farm business provide a satisfactory standard of living for the family and make possible in addition adequate community institutions, including schools, churches and roads."

BOONE COUNTY BOY DOES WELL IN BEE

Forty-seven Spellers go to the Mat in Advance of Robert Beeson

The spelling ace of Kentucky is an 11 year old boy. He is Frank Newhauser, 1428 Christy Ave., Louisville. He won his crown from 72 county champions at the Courier-Journal state-wide spelling finals April 22nd, before 2,000 persons at the First Christian church, Louisville. Frank will represent Kentucky at the National Spelling Bee, to be held in Washington June 15th to 20th, when fourteen states will send their best spellers to the capital in co-operation with the Courier-Journal.

Seventy-two counties had spellers on the floor, including this county, whose representative Robert Beeson made a good record for the county, although failing to capture one of the prizes. The bee lasted nearly five hours.

In a few words over the radio on Wednesday night Robert expressed his satisfaction as to the outcome. He said, though he did not land among the prize winners, he was however pleased that there were 47 spellers to take their seats before him.

McHenry Rifeaux, state supervisor of education, Charles A. Keith, president of the Kentucky Educational Association and others spoke at the bee. Following the contest spellers were guests at dinner in the assembly room of The Courier-Journal, where, with their parents, they made up a party of 160. A treatise party at B. F. Keith's Rialto theatre and a talk by each over WHAS, radio-phonograph of the Courier-Journal, followed. The following day all spellers were taken for a 30 mile tour by auto of the city parks and playgrounds.

Prize winners, besides Frank were Lucile Barnard, Ohio county, second prize, $100; Mary A. Bertram, of Wayne county, third prize, set of Harvard Classics, Emma Tankersley, Harlan county, fourth prize, $50. Frank won the capital prize of $200.

"EARLY HISTORY MISSING THIS WEEK

Owing to his pressing duties as Secretary of the Boone County school tournament, Prof. A. M. Yealey was unable to contribute his weekly article on the "Early History of Boone County." This series of accounts of early Boone county life has been very interesting to many of our readers and Prof. Yealey promises to continue next week.

MRS. B. B. HUME DIED LAST SUNDAY

At her home in Burlington after a Lingering Illness

Susan Belle Hume, beloved wife of Sheriff B. B. Hume, passed away at her home in Burlington Sunday evening at seven o'clock after a lingering illness.

Several months ago Mrs. Hume was taken to a Cincinnati hospital where she remained until about a month since, when she was taken to Dilkboro Sanitarium in the faint hope that the baths there would restore her health. Failing however to benefit from this treatment, she returned to her home in Burlington, where she received the most careful ministrations from loving and careful friends during her vining hours. Susan Belle Hume was born near Beaver Lick, on the 17th day of August, 1870, being almost 55 years of age when death called her. She was married on Jan. 15th, 1889, to B. B. Hume, to which union one child, Miss Maud Hume, of Covington, was born. She united early in life with the Beaver Baptist church, where she always retained her membership.

Funeral services were conducted from the Burlington Baptist church last Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. W. W. Adams, with C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, in charge of the arrangements.

GOOD SAMARITAN ROLE IS ENACTED

Lends Helping Hand to Stranded Brother

A man who gave his name at C. S. Doane's hotel in Hebron one evening last week minus his wallet, which was valued at about thirty dollars and various other belongings.

His home, he said, was in Michigan and without funds, he could not hope to reach there without considerable inconvenience to himself. His pocket book he had lost in a field somewhere in the central portion of the county, and the find' will receive a liberal reward if he will return it either to the Recorder's office or to the Hebron Deposit bank.

He held himself out as being a Mason, and when the officers of Hebron Lodge had examined to their satisfaction they supplied him with the necessary funds for him to reach home.

His wallet contained an identification card as well as a receipt for lodge dues from his local lodge.

Covington Retail Merchants Are Making Plans

ELABORATE PREPARATIONS BEING MADE FOR GOOD WILL TRIP TO BOONE COUNTY ON THURSDAY, MAY 14th

The Retail Merchants Association of Covington is making preparations to come to Burlington on a "Good Will mission Thursday, May 14, and judging from a talk we had with officials and members of that body at the Industrial Club in Covington on Friday, they do not intend to leave a "stone unturned" so to speak, in their efforts to make this one of Boone county's biggest days, as well as one of their own.

As mentioned last week they will have with them a splendid jazz orchestra with singers and entertainers of the highest calibre. Contrary however to a statement made last week, Merchandise orders will not be scattered from an airplane, but will be drawn from a box instead, in very much the same manner in which the Free Gold was drawn on Feb. 14th. Ticket for this free drawing can be obtained from any merchant in Covington any time after Monday, May 4th. You must be present however to share in the distribution. An airplane will also be here on that day, and the same ticket may draw you a free ride thru the ozone, so don't miss the opportunity.

The merchants will arrive in Burlington on about 11:30, when they will be served dinner in the basement of the Baptist church by the Parent-Teachers Association, immediately after which festivities will start and the drawing take place. The drawing costs you nothing except your presence.

W. D. SUTTON FINISHES PURE BRED CAMPAIGN

Former Boone County Farm Agent Accomplishes Purpose

Fifteen purebred Jersey bulls were brought into Hopkins county and sold to farmers during the purebred drive campaign which just ended. An intensive campaign was conducted by County Agent W. D. Sutton, the State College of Agriculture, the United States Department of Agriculture, the Hopkins County Farm Bureau and the Madisonville Chamber of Commerce.

The bulls were purchased in Todd county, and sold to Hopkins county farmers at relatively low prices. All were hand-picked by experts from the Federal Department of Agriculture and the State Fair and the Pennsylvania Fair.

The Federal Department of Agriculture selected Hopkins county to make an intensive drive to eliminate scrub bulls and to demonstrate the value of purebreds. Dairy experts assisting in the campaign estimate that 15 purebred bulls will increase the value of dairy products in the county by more than $4,000 within the next three years, through the increased production of heifers sired by them, over what heifers sired by scrub bulls would have produced.

GOOD RETURNS FROM THE HOME ORCHARD

Proving That Small Orchards Will Return a Good Profit

Clinton, Ky.—Forty-nine apple trees paid the taxes, kept the children in school and provided money with which to buy most of the groceries at C. B. Hilliard's, a farmer living near here, last year according to County Agent G. W. Racot. Apples from this small home orchard sold for a total of $700, and in addition furnished fruit for home consumption. The trees are 23 years old. Mr. Hilliard's total orchard expense for the year was $25, net for spray material.

"And yet farmers are heard to declare that a small home orchard does not pay," Mr. Racot said, in discussing his work to encourage home fruit production pays, for it provides fruit for the family's use. Every Kentucky farm should have at least a half-acre orchard."

Mr. Hilliard marketed his apples locally, selling them to neighbors and store keepers. His interest in orcharding was roused five years ago when he attended a pruning and spraying demonstration in a nearby county.

A Tennessee Company has arranged for storage space in Paducah and contracted with McCracken county farmers for 125 acres of sweet potatoes at 50 cents a bushel, according to County Agent W. C. Johnstone. Approximately 600 McCracken county strawberry growers have signed up for 1,200 acres, which is an increase of 30 per cent over last year's acreage.

Sixty-seven Nelson county farmers are keeping accounts under the direction of County Agent C. L. Hill and the College of Agriculture. Three instructional meetings were held in the county in March. Account books furnished by the college.

County Agent J. V. Coleman estimates that 2,000 acres of sweet hay will be sown in large counties this year. Four farmers plan to sow 30 acres each. The county agent is making 15 farmers in the county to grow a third of a ton of hay per acre. He estimates that 15 farmers will produce 1,500 tons of hay, which will be worth $1.50 per ton over tops.

HENRY FORD IS SUEED BY AARON SAPIRO

Damages Sought For Articles Alleged Part Of Campaign on Part of Defendant And His Paper To Mislead And Deceive Farmers

Henry Ford and the Dearborn Publishing Company, of which he is owner, were named defendants in a $1,000,000 suit filed in U. S. District Court by Aaron Sapiro, internationally known lawyer and booster of co-operative marketing for farmers.

In the declaration filed by William O. Gallagher, attorney, Sapiro alleged that articles defamatory to his character have appeared in the Dearborn Independent.

The declaration asserts that Sapiro has spent 15 years building up agricultural marketing organizations which now exist in 38 States; that he is attorney for these organizations and contends that his standing with the farmers of America and Canada has been irreparably damaged by the articles published in the Independent.

The articles, the declaration alleges, accuse Sapiro of seeking to gain control of the wheat, tobacco, potato, hay and cotton markets and the raisin and bean industries.

The declaration covers 92 printed pages and is divided into 21 separate "counts" each quoting from articles alleged to have appeared in the Dearborn Independent.

Demand was made upon the defendants for retraction of the articles quoted, the declaration asserts. No retraction, however, it adds, has been forthcoming.

"Plaintiff avers" says the declaration "that by means of composing, writing, and publishing of said false scandalous malicious and defamatory libel by said defendants said wrong has been and is injured in his profession of an attorney, and has lost and been deprived of divers fees, gains, rewards and compensations, which otherwise would have arisen and accrued to him in his said profession and is otherwise injured and damaged."

All of the plaintiff's activities in behalf of farmers and producers and their associations, the declaration asserts, "have been engaged in upon the request and solicitation of said farmers and producers and their organizations."

In conclusion the declaration says: "Plaintiff further avers that he has no knowledge of an existence of any company such as that alleged by the defendants, or of any conspiracy to oppose the interests of American farmers and producers other than that evidenced by the campaign of said defendants to mislead and deceive the farmers, and producers and people of America by the reputed publications of half truths and falsehoods."

BULLITTSBURG CHURCH IN STATE OF REPAIR

Historic Landmark of Worship Being Modernized

The work of repairing and remodeling Bullittsburg Baptist church is progressing well.

The plan includes redecoration of the interior, the building of Sunday school rooms, Pastor's study, the installing of a heating plant and electric lights.

When completed the church will be modern in every respect and equipped to satisfactorily carry on its work.

The membership is indeed grateful to two of their members, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cropper who presented the church with a complete Delco lighting system.

It is thought that the work of remodeling will be completed within the next few weeks when services will be resumed with appropriate dedicatory exercises.

BURLINGTON DEFEATS FLORENCE SATURDAY

Florence visited Burlington last Saturday afternoon for the first game of the season and Burlington started off in a more auspicious fashion than they did last year when they failed to win a game out of about twenty starts.

It was a well played game Burlington being the victors by the score 5-2. Brady for Burlington and Yealey for Florence, each pitched excellent ball.

Bellevue defeated a combination Idlewild-Petersburg team last Saturday at Petersburg by a score of 9-0. The Petersburg team is organizing this week a new league to Bellevue next Saturday afternoon.

WILL BEGIN MEETING

By A. M. Yealey. The meeting will begin a meeting at the Union Press building at 4 o'clock on Monday, May 4th and 5th.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The K. E. A. has come and gone and great was the event. The enrollment excelled any other enrollment by more than a thousand. It seemed that the teachers and school forces had Louisville by the neck and Louisville had the teachers by the purse, but all went well.

The Courier-Journal Spelling Bee was the attraction the first of the meeting and politics and electing officers were important toward the latter part of the meet. There were quite a few interesting addresses interspersed. One objection to this organization is now it is too unwieldy, eight or nine thousand members to say nothing of visitors is too big.

Now to our spelling delegate Robert Beemon, he acquitted himself like a man, and we are proud of him. There were eighty-four entries with seventy-three to start. There were sixty-nine chances to lose while due to two to one for first prize. Robert was the forty-eight to fall on the word abridgement, which the old dictionaries spell two ways but not the revised editions. This is not written for an excuse or alibi but when we consider that Robt. stood until two-thirds fell we should not be ashamed of our boy.

The usual spelling books exhausted and special lists were used. The contest lasted over four hours. I doubt if many of the Superintendents would have spelled that long, although many of the teachers might have spelled longer even than that. We had fifty-four applicants for Common School Graduation on Monday and Tuesday, mostly from the small districts—the largest number we have ever had, and as sprightly a group as you would expect to see. Of course, it will be some time before these hundreds of papers are graded. We wish success to all in the examination, but their papers decide their fates.

All things point to a big meeting at Florence beginning Wednesday evening. This is the first county tournament and it points to success. J. C. GORDON, Supt.

The annual meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association which convened in Louisville Wednesday evening, April 22nd, was said to be the largest and finest of all the meetings in the history of the organization. The meeting was characterized by strong expressions of pleasure from all who attended.

The opening number of Wednesday evening's program was a cantata, "Pan on a Summer Day," presented by a hundred and fifty boys and girls of the Covington Public School directed by Prof. J. L. Newhall. The splendid work of these boys and girls met an enthusiastic reception from the largest first night audience ever assembled. The address of the evening on "The New Challenge to American Teachers" was delivered by Dr. Edwin Mims of Vanderbilt University, who admonished the modern teacher of many new and important responsibilities to the child of today; that we are living in a different age, and that that the old order has passed away. He said, also, that we should think aright and feel aright in the heart as well as live our lives aright.

Some excellent addresses were delivered by the president of the Association, Prof. Chas. A. Keith, of the Eastern Normal College at Richmond, McHenry Rhoads, State Superintendent of Schools, Dr. G. T. Baswell of Chicago University, Dr. Burton, of Cincinnati University, Dr. Jno. M. Brewer of Harvard University, Dr. McVey of Kentucky University, Dr. Wm. McAndrew, City Supt., of Chicago Schools and many other State and national Educators. The majority of the above speakers appeared on the general programs. There were many fine speakers on the Departmental Programs such as the Departments of City Superintendents and County Superintendents, Department of High Schools, Departments of English, Mathematics, Higher Education, Science, History and Civics Agriculture and Domestic Science. Much inspiration and enjoyment were derived from these departmental meetings as well as from the general programs.

Many and various banquets were given by the Colleges, Normals, Universities and other organizations. It goes without saying that these were immensely enjoyed by those who attended.

Many sight-seeing trips were arranged for the benefit of the teachers. There were trips to the Ohio River Falls, the Museum and Library, the various parks, the Kentucky Children's Orphan Home at Lyndon and to other places of interest. Some of the teachers also took trips to Lincoln's old home and to Mammoth Cave.

Much credit is due the President of the Association and his helpers for the program conceded by all to be the best yet held. The thousands of teachers in attendance carried back with them new thoughts and ideas to help them in their work—a greater conception of their duties and responsibilities as teachers and an abundance of inspiration and enthusiasm from the content and short association with their friends and fellow teachers.

POSTED

E. A. Grant, Petersburg precinct.

Of our dear beloved son Clifford Hedges, who died Feb. 26, 1925.

Just two months ago
Since our dear Clifford passed away
Time was too short to say farewell,
To those he thought of and loved so well.

A precious one from us is gone
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

A loving son so true and kind
No other like him can we ever find,
For all of us he did his best,
May God grant him eternal rest.

SECTIONALISM IN KENTUCKY

Not long since on March 5th to the exact, Dr. Charles L. McVey, President of Kentucky State University, delivered a lecture before the Exchange Club of Louisville. The principal theme of his address on this occasion was "Sectionalism in Kentucky." Dr. McVey, like many other "thinkers" of Kentucky, laments the fact that our state is so divided against itself, in other words a victim of that dread disease—"Sectionalism."

There are indeed many causes of this, a number of which Dr. McVey discussed in his address on that occasion, but one feature of his argument appeals to us in particular, and is the principal reason for the partial removal of Northern Kentucky from the interests of the rest of the State. We quote from Dr. McVey his interpretation of this feature of the problem—"It is self explanatory."

"We have a good many State problems, more or less familiar, but I do not think fully realized by our citizens."

One of these is the fact that we have here in this Commonwealth, coming down the L. & N. Railroad, out of Cincinnati, on a Sunday morning, recently, I was interested in seeing the number of copies of a "great daily" that were put off the train at every little station. I found that one of these "big city" newspapers, a great number of papers would be put off, and the stations the citizens would be on hand to buy their copies. In thinking about this matter it seemed to me that there was a whole area, perhaps one-third of the State, that was receiving no suggestions, its editorial leadership and its news, from a source outside of the "Commonwealth." To me, that great newspaper was interested in the affairs of Ohio and the position of Ohio in national matters and consequently the editors and writers would show questions from their way of thinking.

Voluntarily we can be written on this condition of sectionalism which confronts us, though we will not attempt to discuss it in full at this time. One thing is certain however, and that is that we cannot expect to solve state problems, harmoniously and satisfactorily until this condition, as we best partially realize it, is removed.

A State Chamber of Commerce with of course all its own representatives, should, if properly conducted, accomplish much in this direction. The disastrous effect of a "home-divided against itself" was very forcibly demonstrated last fall when the bond issue was defeated. If all sections of our state had gone to the polls with a "level of heart," this proposition would have carried, and redounded to our everlasting benefit.

MOTHERS' DAY

Sunday, May 10, is Mothers' Day. It is her day—when the nation bows in humility, showing reverence for the campsite Mother, who is typical of all that is good and wholesome and sympathetic.

Public recognition of the debt due mothers, that has been growing annually, is a splendid testimonial to human character, and a refutation of the common charge that people are mercenary.

A deep and abiding sentiment inspired the idea of Mothers' Day and it has fostered it and caused it to become more generally recognized each year.

Mother's word expressive of tenderness and kindly sympathy. She exemplifies the spirit of service and self-sacrificing love—a practical sort of love that shows itself by giving all that it has.

It is the spirit of sympathy, appreciation and practicality that makes mother unquenchably precious and has won for her the expression of gratitude from a thankful people low to high.

Mother will ever be mother, for her instincts are as old as the first mother, were she living, and as deeply imbedded as a part of her character. Mothers today have no greater concern for the welfare of their children as mothers ever did, but mothers change with the changing times, and their conduct as mothers can't be judged by the same standards as a few decades ago.

COMMENCEMENT TIME

Some schools have passed the great day—commencement—but others are still in session and the students are in the throes of preparation for the big event of their lives, which is a stepping stone to new experience.

No other occasion in life, save possibly marriage, comes of such tremendous importance to these young people.

They now approach a great landmark of life, a time of fresh beginning, and face untold issues. But young folks negotiate these sharp points with ease, most of them are prepared to try their inexperienced wings.

Preparing for graduation, in the case of some young women, means mainly long sessions with the dressmaker and a gorgeous display of lace feathers. The girl of the struggling class some times makes more than that out of the whole of it.

In the case of the poor girl, her parents may feel that this is her one chance to show that she is as good as anybody, and according to the American standards she is. Her father and mother may make sacrifices on the necessities of life to give her such one big send-off of her life.

Such a thing is to be discouraged and those who are able to make a big show at commencement time can be of great service by setting the pace so that the burden of expense will not be so heavy on those less able to stand it.

The necessity of providing costly graduating clothes and incidentals has deterred some parents from sending their children through high school. The principles of American democracy would have every girl graduate appear in a simple, inexpensive gown, not necessarily uniform in design or color.

That school training has put something into their heads, young people preparing for graduation should have their hearts on higher things, that they should be able to keep their minds on the high plane of successful achievement so that they may continue their preparation for life in higher schools of learning.

CARELESS DRIVING

More than forty per cent of the accidents involving motor vehicles in three states during a period of six months were due to reckless or careless driving.

This fact is gleaned from statistics compiled from news paper accounts of accidents by the bureau of public roads of the United States department.

It is a severe indictment against the drivers of automobiles. The increase in the number of accidents due to thoughtless operation of automobiles means but one thing—that more stringent requirements for drivers of automobiles will have to be enforced.

When it becomes necessary to register the operation of motor vehicles and burdensome and expensive examinations are required, the careful driver will suffer equally as much as the reckless and the careless.

Thoughtlessness that jeopardizes the lives of others is inexcusable. Every person drive automobiles with due regard for consideration to the rights of others is past understanding.

Their selfishness in refusing to recognize the rules of the road and use good judgment to prevent accidents deserves the severest condemnation.

They may risk their own necks if they wish—that is their business, but it is not their right to increase the hazard of motoring for the careless driver.

Public sentiment will have to outlaw the reckless driver because he tells his takes it entirely too large.

CONFIDENCE

Some periods of business depression in this country have been called "purely psychological." And then there have been occasions when boom times have been termed a "psychological" condition.

Whether "psychological" or what not, when business is really good people have confidence in the future and are willing to take risks they probably would not otherwise take.

Confidence is the very heart of American business. Without it the country would be at a standstill. When people deposit money in a bank they have strong confidence in the institution and believe it will be able to pay whenever the money is demanded.

When one man accepts a check from another, he has confidence in the man with whom he is dealing. With confidence gone, the whole business structure of the country crumbles to earth.

Confidence moves mountains; it drives away pessimism; enlarges the vision of the future. It is a strong driving power and the wheels of progress are kept ever in motion when confidence is the very solvent of progress.

Felices of Coolidge's economy program were heard in the U. S. Congress which is having in the National Capitol this week. Washington still remembers the excitement which reigned over their last annual convention when the meeting became so disorderly that a policeman was called in to quell the disturbance. The only discussion which veered on the subject so far, however, was in regard to a proposed increase in the annual dues. There was strong opposition to the amendment which, contained this provision, and it was defeated by a two-thirds vote on the general grounds of economy. Chairman Dewey recently stated that President Coolidge had made economy a "fashionable virtue" and he seemed to have plenty of evidence to prove it.

The opening of the baseball season here, when the Nats defeated the Yankees, was an exciting day in Washington base ball including the President and Mrs. Coolidge. The President is a most enthusiastic admirer of this sport and spectators were forced to admit that Mrs. Coolidge is more familiar with the game than the President.

Another attraction will be added to the already beautiful city of Washington when the University of the South Atlantic, a new stone was laid last week by Patrick Cardinal Hayes. This building will be three stories high and will contain a stackage for 1,000,000 books when it is finished. It will be open to the public as well as the students of the University.

When the framers of the Constitution put in the provision that all cases against Ambassadors and foreign ministers must originate in the Supreme Court they did not reckon on the Voltaire Ambassador, the Bolivian diplomat benefitted from this immunity when his arrest for carrying a bottle of alleged intoxicants was prevented. The young attaché of the Bolivian legation resented the questioning of the policeman and got into a fight with him which resulted in injuries to the policeman necessitating his removal to a hospital. The State Department refused to comment on the case, declaring however, that the diplomatic immunity extended to representatives of foreign powers was "very broad" and that no just had ever been made to determine its extent.

A most spectacular and history-making feat was accomplished the other day when a twin-engine airplane carried two small grand pianos, the Voltaire Field Long Island to Bolling Field at Anacostia, a suburb of Washington, in three hours. In addition to the pianos it carried six passengers including pilots. The extraordinary feat seemed to make no difference in the flying of the machine, officials here stated.

THE NATIONAL GAME

It will be 80 years this coming fall since the Knickerbocker club of New York, drew up the first rules from which has grown our national sport—base ball. The first game was played between two teams from this athletic club at Hoboken, N. J. According to their rules the first team to make 21 runs won the game. This game lasted four innings.

Millions and millions of dollars are now invested in this game. But it is not the business side that appeals to the general public. Base ball appeals to the love of competition, in the human being and to his love of the outdoors. All men have certain great instincts in common and we naturally find the thing that appeals to the greatest number of those instincts is the most popular thing of today.

BUSINESS LEADERS

The presence of business leader who have exceptional vision and initiative has been the force that has sent many cities and towns through the country ahead. Their business men were more content to provide the public with the regulation articles being sold in their trade at the time. They were all the time trying to see how the products of a factory or the merchandise of a store could be improved, to offer a superior article or superior stock so that their business would force ahead better satisfied.

A multitude of such men will testify how they were helped by advising. They had to tell the public how what they were doing before they got the big trade. When the people of those cities and towns discovered that by trading with these business men they were helping their own property to increase in value, you know full well the ultimate result.

But the business leaders can't get themselves out of the whole job of pushing a town ahead. It takes hearty support from the rank and file of the people in the tasks of daily life. The factory worker, the store worker, the office worker—all should assume a part of the responsibility and lead the town with a smile. Every person who throws his whole heart into his job, does something to push his home town ahead.

If a man is conducting a store, and his brain and initiative into his work, his business is almost sure to grow, and his home town gains from it. If he is working in some industry and he puts his energy and skill into his work with full devotion, the business profits from his fidelity. The spirit of cooperation is a great thing for good in a community. With this spirit present, production of course, becomes more efficient the business grows and the home towns grow with it.

ON STAYING YOUNG

About about this reason of the years, the people of the country are treated to some of Chaucer's DePew's philosophy on staying young. He has a birthday in April and it is customary for him to be "inter-viewed" for recipes for longevity.

The outside of his life, that he has contributed to his happy and colorful 91 years, is his mastery over himself.

Mr. DePew has always had enough will power to leave off habits when he found they were not for his best interests. He gave up meat and finally champagne, when they had become a part of his daily menu.

He is young and full of pep, too, because he forgets his worries every day at sunset and never takes them to bed with him. Many of us take the little cares and worries of business too seriously. We puzzle over them during the day, complain about them at meal time and sleep with them at night.

It is not to be wondered that he soon assume the proportions of genuine troubles, even though they are but slight in the eyes of other people. The habits which are harmful and forget your troubles when the day's work is over. Simple, isn't it?

THE BIGGEST WORD

One of the biggest words in the English language is "Think."

The railroad yard man who thinks is the man who is advanced; the shop man who thinks is the man who becomes foreman; the foreman who thinks is the man who becomes superintendent or manager. Thinking is the motive force behind all creation, all invention, all there is to art and literature.

The advantage of thinking does not lie in original ideas, nor in giving unique expression to words, but in exercising the brain cells that run errands back and forth through the paths of the brain.

The man who always thinks is thrice armed, and it has solved the knottiest problems of all history. If you form the habit of thinking things out for yourself you will cultivate an independence of thought, a habit that has been the basis of all progress.

THE GREATEST GRIEF

When a friend or a relative dies, or even one whom we might have helped but neglected to do so, we have reproached ourselves with the regret that we did not show affection, sympathy or helpfulness when it would have lightened burdens or have given joy. This has been the experience of mankind since civilization began.

Beautiful spirits, lovable natures, tender relatives and deathless friends pass into the realms of death without the word we might have spoken. They go where nevermore is heart or soul hunger or love hunger. Then the irrevocable and irremediable silence falls and we find ourselves ever powerless to do that which our heart is big to do, but which we neglected to do when we so easily could have done it. In all the history of accumulated griefs, this is the greatest grief—the real reason behind our sorrow.

All about us are people who are starving for some word of love, affection or appreciation. And strange to say they are the ones who usually from deepest tenderness of heart and nature, of unselfishness and of sacrifice, contribute most of the real and genuine worthwhile affection of the world.

Measured by the yard stick of eternity life is but a fleeting instant. Why should it be devoted to pulling and hauling and crowding and crushing when tomorrow every one of us measure exactly equal in God's acre and are soon forgotten? A little love and kindness here and now would transform this old world.

THE AGE OF WINGS

The Ford express from Detroit to Chicago completed its first week of operation carrying Ford business exclusively with such pronounced success that other lines to other points will be immediately hastened.

Other companies are starting air lines for passenger and mail transportation from Chicago to New Orleans and from Albuquerque, New Mexico to Los Angeles.

Mr. Edsel Ford asserts that "this generation will see many things that should have been established everywhere and that the use of aircraft will be as wide-spread, comparatively, as the acceptance and use of radio."

English experts have improved on the recent invention of a Spanish bird perfectly in the shape of a bird, but it is not a bird, it is a machine. It is a machine carrying ten passengers shut off the power and the plane sinks slowly to the ground on an even keel. With either machine it is asserted that it is impossible for a plane to dive to the earth, and that 90 per cent of flying risks are eliminated.

To this date the Ford planes are not equipped with this invention, but it is safe to predict that something of the kind will be perfected in the near future.

It is truly the age of wings.

LIVE—AND HELP LIVE

The old philosophy upon which the motto "Live and Let Live" was based was a one step forward from the still older doctrine that might was right and selfishness a virtue. Its meaning embodies a sort of leniency, a purpose to refrain from injury to others, and to let every one work his or own salvation. It was the expression of a lofty ideal as then conceived.

But the world has moved still further forward. The motto no longer bespeaks the highest conception of human relationship. Passive and inert are of recognized obligation. There must be an active and practical beneficence, which is aptly expressed in the "Live and Help Live."

Our duty to our fellow man requires something more from us than mere well wishing. It calls for action. It is not negative; it is positive. The kindly feeling must be translated in to the kindly act. Instead of merely letting live, we should truly and practically Help Live.

It is the basic principle of nearly every fraternal society in the world, and has come to be more and more recognized as an essential to the life of the church as a real practical Christian principle. It is also becoming recognized as an essential to business success, and great industries are bending every effort to beat down the old theory that working men are but machines, entitled only to the wages of the labor of their hands. Slowly, but surely, it is coming to be understood that to Help Live means a greater degree of happiness and contentment to all parties.

LIFE IS A FUNNY PROPOSITION

Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it again.

During his stay on earth his time is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings. In his infancy he is an angel. In his boyhood he is a devil. In his manhood he is everything from a paragon to a scoundrel. If he raises a family he is a champion. If he doesn't raise a family he is too selfish. If he raises a check he is a crook. If he is a poor man he is a bad manager and has no sense. If he is rich he is smart but dishonest. If he is in politics he is a grifter. If he is in business he is a swindler. If he goes to church he is a hypocrite. If he does it is a sin. If he gives to charity it is for show. If he doesn't he is a tightwad.

When he first comes into the world everyone wants to kiss him. Before he leaves the world everyone wants to kick him.

If he dies young there was a great future before him. If he lives to a ripe old age, he is in the way.

Now approaches the summer pastime of swatting the fly. And it is almost a waste of time. The task seems hopeless. The fly multiplies too rapidly to be reduced by a simple swatting campaign.

There is a flank attack however, that is effective. Don't give the fly a chance to breed. Clean up the dirt and see that your neighbor gets the habit.

One lone garbage pile will breed more flies in less than a person can wait in a life time.

Henry Ford has purchased several of the finest old plantations with a total of 9,661 acres located on both sides of the Ogeechee River in Bryan county, Georgia. Just what he proposes to do with the properties has not been made public, but the fact of that part of the state is assured that it will be materially improved.

EX-TREASURER OF WINCHESTER INDICTED

CHARLES B. STROTHER ADMITS USING FUNDS OF CON. GREGATION

Friends Offer to Supply Funds for Bond, But are Rejected in Embarrassment Case.

Winchester, Ky., Charles B. Strother, defendant city treasurer of Winchester, indicted on four additional counts of embezzlement and facing a shortage in his books of probably $30,000, or more, a call in the County Jail. He refused to accept from his friends following the return of the new indictment by the Clark County grand jury, which has made a sweeping investigation into the case.

"I'm guilty," said Strother, as Deputy Sheriff Don Hays read the warrant at his home on South Main street, "and rather than ask my friends to send a bond I'll take my medicine and go to jail."

Strother will plead guilty when arraigned in the Clark County Court is almost a certainty, according to close friends of the defendant treasurer, who may be well accept sentence from the court.

Many prominent citizens offered to sign the bond of $25,000 when Strother was served with the warrant. The following names were mentioned: J. O. Tyler, the First Christian Church, and C. J. Siggle as property owners whose money had been taken by the City Treasurer. The Court charged the defendant of $25,000 belonging to the city of Winchester. The indictment returned charged embezzlement of the funds of the Winchester bank.

In going over the accounts Strother from memory picked out those he had tampered with and when he reached that of the Christian Church he faltered and then pulled his head in the affirmative as H. F. McParlan, special examiner of the bonding company, turned the page.

Until a short time ago Strother was a member of the board of deacons of the First Christian Church and had always been active in Sunday school work. The street address of the church was paid some time ago by John H. Hays.

Strother had been in playing the stock market. Mr. Hays had produced his receipt signed by Strother.

A legal question came up in a discussion of the specifications of Strother by city officials, representatives of bonding companies and tax payers, and City Attorney J. T. McFarlane was asked to give an opinion as to how the city would proceed to make good the difference between the amount of Strother's bond, which is $25,000, and his shortage, which probably will reach many thousands of dollars more.

NOTICE TO VOTERS OF BOONE COUNTY.

This means Ladies first
In 1917 I came out as a candidate for jailer of Boone county because no one wanted it and it was thought a jailer would have to be appointed. Had I known I would have opposition, I would not have offered myself, as I was not fixed to make the race. As you remember John White and Uncle Bob Wilson both came out against me, and I was defeated by Uncle Bob, but I borrowed the money and canvassed most of the county on horse back. Uncle Bob was appointed to serve the remainder of Sam Adams' term but resigned on account of poor health and I was appointed by Judge P. E. Cason to serve the unexpired term of Sam Adams, who had then been jailer 16 years. I was then appointed to serve the first year by Judge Cason and I was elected without opposition for the remaining three years. In 1921 I was opposed by Mr. Hubert Rouse and after a friend in race was elected and Mr. Rouse is my good friend today. So on December 31st, 1925, I can say I have served the county eight years and one month and a half, and I can truthfully say I have tried to do my duty as I thought right. I have made a living out of this office (or job) and that is saying all of it, and I leave it to the grand juries, officials and all who come to the county as to how the public property is taken care of and as to how the prisoners are treated. I have for my opponent at the August election Mr. Elmer Kirkpatrick, a good friend whom I have known since he was a baby and no man can say harm of him, as far as I know, but I do say that I do not feel like the voters will count my loyal friends are going to take my job from me when I have given satisfaction, and others before me have had the office from 16 to 20 years. When I am unable to take care of my duties, I will not ask you to keep me any longer, but I can take care of this, as I have proven and some of my friends say I am not worth a cent for anything else, so you will not want to keep me in my old place just to get rid of me. I can't get away from my duties here to make a canvas of the county. I have two prisoners now and never know when I am to have more and I cannot be out of Burlington.

...night and I know you will say I am doing my duty by doing what the voters and taxpayers are paying me for. I want to get to each precinct as often as I can and not neglect my duties, as I would have done, without opposition for I owe this much to you for you have been loyal to me in the past and I want to thank you from my heart for it and I want to thank you in advance for your support on the 1st day of August, 1925 and if I am compelled to look any of you up, I promise to let you out when your time is out. So again I thank you and promise your confidence in me will not be abused for I expect to manage this job as I have in the past as long as I am jailer.

Respectfully,
C. A. FOWLER
Jailer of Boone County.

MRS. EUNIE WILLIS—AN APPRECIATION

On April 8, the season of blossom time in Northern Kentucky, Mrs. Eunie Willis of Burlington completed her earthly career. She had lived for sixty-seven years a useful and beautiful life. As wife, mother, friend and neighbor, she was the soul of loyalty, a gentle and winsome woman always. She was married at the age of eighteen to Thomas G. Willis and for 33 years she brought to the closest relationship of earth a devotion that never wavered and a hospitality that glorified the old home near Idlewild.

Mrs. Willis was not given over much to conversation yet in her home and among her friends she conversed with freedom and interestingly. She possessed a subtle sense of humor and her quiet yet hearty laughter will be remembered by those who knew her best. It was the poet Longfellow who said, "Home making hearts are happiest." By that token Mrs. Willis was numbered among the happiest of earth. She lived in and for her home. The joys of her childhood seemed to her as if they were hers now. She was not a woman who said much about these things, she was one whose life was every day filled with thoughts and deeds that were kindly, helpful and loving.

Mrs. Willis was an appreciative soul. No one ever did her any kindness that she did not value highly nor cease to remember. Her ways of showing her gratitude were unobtrusive, so much so that when compared with methods that are pronounced and much in evidence might have seemed slight and indifferent. Such was not the case. It was only Mrs. Willis' simple and unostentatious manner. She never autocratically "palavered" over favors. If she liked you, why she liked you and managed in one way or another to let you know it. If she didn't like you she let you alone and attended to her own business.

Mrs. Willis was a Christian woman. For forty years she had been a follower of the Christ. She never talked very much about her religion. She lived it constantly. She enjoyed a good sermon and was a competent judge of preaching. She disliked narrow and sectarian preaching quite regardless of what denominational group the preacher might be. She especially enjoyed preaching which had for its theme the love of God and the life and ministry of Jesus. She found the reading of religious journals pleasing and profitable, especially when the reading matter was pitched on a high Christian plane and not filled with controversy and partisanship. There was a certain breadth and universality of spirit in this good woman's simple faith. She was very largely free from prejudice, especially religious prejudice. She numbered among her very dear friends, Catholics as well as Protestants and the humblest negro who knew her respected her for the nobility and gentleness of her character and knew he would receive just treatment.

Mrs. Willis was the soul of humor. She was genuine and just. Her obligations were to her sacred and to be me at all hazards. She scorned untruth and regarded her promise as binding as a bond. She believed in the wise man of long ago that said, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold." All in all she was a woman who will be missed.

"rich in experience that angels might covet," and a faith that had grown with the years. We shall miss her at every turn. She died in the old-fashioned faith and we think of her not as dead but as alive with Christ. We think of her as one who fought a good fight, who finished the course, and kept the faith.

"The stream is calmest when it nears the tide
The flowers the sweetest at the eventide,
And birds most musical at the close of day;
And sun's divident when they pass away."

Morning is lovely, but a holier charm
Lies folded close in Evening's robe of halm,
And weary man must ever love her best,
For Morning calls to toil, but Night to rest.

She comes from Heaven, and on her wings doth bear
A holy fragrance, like the breath of prayer;
Footsteps of angels follow in her grace,
To shut the weary eye of Day in peace.

All things are hushed before her as she throws
O'er earth and sky her marble of repose;
There is a calm of beauty and a power
That Morning knows not, in the evening hour.

Until the evening must we weep
O'er Life's stern furrows, dig the weedy soil,
Tread with sad feet our rough and stormy way,
And hear the heat and burden of the day.

Oh, when our sun is setting, may we glide
Like summer evening down the golden tide,
And leave behind us, as we pass away,
Sweet, starry twilight round our sleeping clay."

FACTS ON THE CLARKE-McNARY FORESTRY ACT

Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture

"American Forest Week, which President Coolidge has officially proclaimed for April 27 to May 3, is the time to bring before all citizens the full facts concerning America's forest problem," states Colonel W. B. Greeley, Chief of the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture.

"The United States Forest Service earnestly hopes that the subject will be treated intelligently and thoroughly. A flash in the pan will not suffice to solve the puzzle of America's future timber supply."

"This nation heretofore has lacked a definite forest policy around which all interests could rally and fight the battle shoulder to shoulder. The Clarke-McNary Act has given us this policy after many years of striving."

All Interests Can Unite
The Clarke-McNary forestry Act, passed by Congress in June, 1924, represents a definite and important milestone in America's national forestry policy, in the opinion of the Forest Service. The law itself declares for a policy in which the Federal Government, State Governments, private and owners, and the lumber industry can all take part.

Briefly, the Clarke-McNary Act recognizes the need and place of private forestry in the U. S. along with and supplementing public forest ownership. As four-fifths of all forest land in this country is privately owned, the new law, in effect, declares that it is essential to bring about the growing of timber crops on four acres of private land for every acre of public forest as far as practicable in order to give the greatest possible incentive to commercial reforestation.

The law, among other things, authorizes the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, to cooperate with the States in devising and recommending efficient systems of fire protection to the end that a nationwide plan of forest protection may be developed.

Federal funds, when matched with State and private funds, will aid in carrying out these protective systems.

Federal funds, when matched with State and private funds, will aid in carrying out these protective systems.

Experience has shown that the 220,000,000 acres of State and privately-owned forest land in the U. S. can be effectively protected at an annual cost averaging three cents per acre, or a yearly total of about $100,000,000. This amount, a insignificant sum, says the Forest Service, when compared with the actual and potential value of the nation's forest land.

Tree Planting Encouraged

The Clarke-McNary Act also aids in the distribution of forest trees for planting by private owners. At the present time all agencies in the United States are planting less than 40,000 acres of young forests annually whereas Japan plants more than 250,000 acres every year. It is estimated that the United States contains about 81,000,000 acres of denuded forest land much of which can be planted if it ever is to grow timber crops.

Experience

Our many years of funeral directing have given us a rich background of experience and a service that we are proud to offer. Funeral directing is a profession and art, and to be well done it must have a firm foundation of experience as a guide. That we are able to offer.

The end line of attack in accomplishing the purpose of the new forestry law is to extend the national forest system in areas where special public interests are involved, such as the protection of the water sheds of navigable rivers, or where the natural difficulties attending reforestation make it impracticable or remote as a private undertaking.

"It should be kept in mind," added Colonel Greeley, "that the extent to which the provisions of the Clarke-McNary Act are carried out depends upon two things: First, the funds appropriated by Congress, and second, the cooperation made available by the States and private landowners."

"The forest interests of the country, as well as those interests which depend upon the various products of the forests, should actively participate in the nationwide movement to get a National Forest Policy in effective operation."

FATE ON A RAMPAGE

We are living in a mile-a-second world! Humanity has not fully awakened to the terrific pace which progress have set. For this reason there are an appalling number of accidents which are increasing day by day.

One of every ten of our entire population fall victims to some form of accident.

Every minute of the day records the accidental injury of 23 persons.

Over twelve million persons suffer from accident every year.

Two hundred and forty persons are killed every day.

Automobiles blot out lives at the terrible toll of an average of thirty-eight souls daily. You may think you are reasonably free from this liability—but your chances are only one in ten.

Its just fate—fate on a rampage—and most difficult to dodge.
